THE general conditions of the weather this winter has been such that all of the Tobacco sections have suffered for want of "stripping" or "case" weather, says a prominent Tobacco man in Wisconsin to the Cigar and Tobacco Journal. We all looked for the annual January thaw to afford us the necessary relief, but not getting it, the better class of goods are slowly but surely deteriorating day after day. Every time the Tobacco freezes out it loses some of the oil and gum which is so necessary to carry it safely through the "sweat." And again being deprived of these essential qualities, loses that tendency to feel soft and pliable to the touch with very little casing, thereby deceiving the grower, as to its real condition and causing him to get it in too "high" case, and then we will have a repetition of the unpleasant experiences of both growers and dealers in delivering and packing the 1900 crop. Said crop was an example whereby the best crop the State has ever produced was greatly injured and in some cases practically destroyed by the very conditions of which we speak.

Twenty-one Million Pipes.

MR. GREIG, representing D. McDougall & Co., clay tobacco pipe manufacturers, has left the city on the Clyde for his Spring trip to Canada and the United States and will soon be fraternizing with the trade in this country. The output of D. McDougall & Co. for 1903 reached the immense aggregate of 21,000,000 pipes. Some idea of what a large quantity this means may be gathered from the information that if these pipes were laid in a single row they would extend 3,500 miles, and to fill them only once would require nearly 200,000 pounds of tobacco. The smoker may rest assured henceforth that D. McDougall & Co. are doing their utmost to see that he will never want a quiet smoke for lack of a pipe.

In Praise of Tobacco.

Of all the good things man has found
Scattered upon this planet round,
Tobacco surely holds its ground—
A weed delicious.
No other green leaf yields so much
Delight; no flavor has fragrance such;
No plant its virtue with a touch
Of something vicious.

A pipeful after breakfast, when I read the morning paper; then
At luncheon one small whiff again—
A tube of tissue.
And after dinner a cigar;
An easy chair beside the jar
Wherein the good Havanas are,
Too close to miss you.

Life is at best a journey brief,
And Time pursues us like a thief;
But if one cultivates the Leaf,
There is no hurry.
A friend, it cheers one on the way
And helps to lengthen out the day,
And keeps the hair from turning gray
With care and worry.

Virginia, Turkish or Perique—
A puff of incense and a streak
Of smoke that almost seems to speak
In sweet aroma!
And may the good Tobacco last
So long as we to life hold fast,
Till Death, the old iconoclast,
Brings his diploma!

Blue and Gray Smoke.

Smokers often wonder why the smoke which issues from the burning end of a cigar is of a light blue, while that which is blown out of the mouth is grayish white or sometimes as white as a Summer cloud. Various explanations have been given of the difference, but the most probable is the fact that the smoke which issues at the burning end is the result of more perfect combustion and therefore contains less of the oils, carbons and other products than that which is drawn through the cigar.

A Difference.

Before the two were married
She couldn't stand a pipe;
She rather liked a good cigar,
A fragrant ten cent snipe.
When they had settled down to bliss
She changed her point of view;
Now she was helping spend the cash
She thought a pipe would do.

Largest Warehouse in the World.

What is described as being the largest Tobacco warehouse in the world is located at Liverpool. It occupies one block 725 feet long and 165 feet wide. The height from the level of the road, excluding that of the vault, is 124 feet 10 inches. The total accomodation of the twelve floors of the building and the quay floors is 58,200 packages. In addition to this warehouse are two older warehouses, which occupy the north and south quays of the same dock, the tendency being to concentrate the storage of Tobacco in one location.

Cuban Exports During 1903.

Cuban exports of Leaf Tobacco from the island of Cuba during 1903 to the port of New York were 144,504 bales, and 43,515 bales to Tampa, making a total of 188,019 bales.

Desires to Establish Regie.

The Federal Labor Party of Australia, one of the strong parties of that country, and which holds the balance of power between the two great parties, has announced a forecast of its future policy. One of the purposes of the party is to induce the Government to take over the Tobacco industry, and from the profits realized to obtain the nucleus of an old-age pension fund, which would expand automatically as the consumption increased.

Tobacco Notes.

The Cigar Makers' International Union has $750,000 in the treasuries of its subordinate unions.

Theives at Kingsville broke into Jasper Sons' warehouse and stole about $100 worth of raw leaf tobacco.

The Chamberlain cigar of J. M. Fortier, Montreal, is making satisfactory gains in the Northwest, notably in the cities of Vancouver and Winnipeg.

Our "Coronation."

This case with its ALL GLASS Top (no wood above the glass) is THE VERY FINEST display case in the world to-day. We are making TWENTY of this style of case to ONE of ANY OTHER, and are receiving orders from ALL parts of the Dominion for this MAGNIFICENT case. It is fitted with the very best British Plate Glass THROUGHOUT, including the mirrors in the doors and the shelves, in short, it is the MOST EXQUISITE and most UP-TO-DATE floor case on the market anywhere in the world to-day.

A large number of Grocers throughout the Dominion are now handling cigars as a special branch and ARE doing WELL with them. Are YOU right in line with these progressive and wide-awake men? If not, YOU OUGHT TO BE. If you desire to fall in the ranks by taking up this GOOD PAYING side-line you cannot do better than consult us about the very best and most modern display cases made especially for that line of business. In order to make a good display of, and to keep your cigars right it is necessary to have a first-class case of OUR manufacture. We turn out nothing but the very best goods, and our prices ARE REASONABLE for such goods.

Dominion Show Case Co.
53 Richmond St. East, - - TORONTO.

Horrocks, the cigar manufacturer, says: "The sales of the 'Ronto' cigar in January were heavier than in any preceding month, and justifies the care and expense we are taking with this popular cigar."

The McAipin Consumers Tobacco Co. have recently made some very heavy shipments to the Northwest provinces, and with their steadily increasing eastern trade have had all they could attend to during the entire season.

The W. H. Steel Co., 40 Scott St., Toronto, ask the attention of the grocery trade to their new edition of the "Silent Drummer" which will be issued next week. Profusely illustrated this standard catalogue of all kinds of smokers' goods should be in the hands of every retailer in Canada. Send the firm a postal card and receive a copy free.

If you would catch fish, you must cast your line.

—and cast it where there are fish.

Good fishermen go where fish are plentiful—use the right kind of bait—and make many a good haul.

Shrewd advertisers use THE CANADIAN GROCER because plenty grocers of read it—they use the right kind of bait and make many a good haul of new customers.

Suppose the fish don't bite at fust,
What be yew goin' tur dew?
Chuck down yewr pole, throw out yewr bait,
An' say yewr fishin's threw?
Uv course yew haint; yew're goin' tur fish,
An' fish an' fish an' wait
Until yew've ketched yewr basket full,
An' used up all yewr bait.

Our Department of Advertising Service provides good bait—for those who desire it—without any extra charge.

BRADSTREET'S

Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000. Offices Throughout the Civilized World.

Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information, no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claim as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns, and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence Invited.

Canadian Trade with Japan and China

Conditions to be Met by Canadians Seeking to Establish Trade Relations in the Orient, Graphically Described by a Canadian Business Man now in Shanghai.

READERS of The Grocer will remember an extremely interesting letter in our Fall special issue from Mr. Andrew R. Tufts, formerly of St. Marys, Ontario, laterly of Vancouver, B. C., and now representing a number of Canadian firms in China and Japan, dealing with Canadian trade openings in the Orient.

The Grocer has been favored with another letter from Mr. Tufts, which is of equal interest both as throwing out valuable hints to business men who wish to cultivate these Asiatic markets and as affording an illuminating insight into the life of a people of whom we are unfortunately but too ignorant. It is to be hoped that the disadvantage Canada labors under owing to the lack of a commercial treaty with Japan will soon be made right. The Hon. Mr. Fisher must know the whole circumstances, the business world will look to him to see that Canada is placed on the most favored basis in our trade relations with the Island Empire of the Pacific.

Mr. Tuft's letter, which has arrived at a particularly interesting juncture, in view of the outbreak of the war, is as follows :

Shanghai Club, Shanghai,
January 15, 1904.

Colonel J. B. MacLean,
The Canadian Grocer :

Dear Sir : In the interests of Canadian manufacturers exporting to the Orient, I would suggest they protect their brands by registration, even though they think imitation or infringement unlikely.

The following instances will illustrate this necessity :

The representative of an Italian firm, manufacturers of a Vermuth which possesses a world-wide reputation, discovered in a Hong Kong cafe recently that the contents of a bottle served him which bore his firm's trade-mark, etc., was not genuine. Calling upon the wholesale dealer who had supplied the brand he was surprised to learn that it was imported from Japan. Carefully examining label, color of the glass, capsule, the name burnt in the cork, etc., he found all details exactly comparing with his samples, except the quality of the liquor.

He bought a case of the Japanese article and took it with him to Japan, and arriving in the city where the imitation article was manufactured, instituted legal proceedings against the manufacturers. Though his able counsel made out a strong case for the Italian firm, and expected to obtain heavy damages and an injunction, they found the Japanese judges did not rule lor them; but furthermore ordered that the Italian manufacturers pay a penalty of 20,000 yen (or $10,000 gold) for infringing the trade mark of the Japanese firm, which had been previously registered. The matter is now being taken up diplomatically, I understand, but so far the Japanese have the law on their side.

A European firm representing a California Wine Company, in Yokahama, ordered some $350 worth of bottle labels for a new brand they were bottling in that city, and in the interval of waiting for their labels to be delivered some enterprising native firm registered the trade-mark, then in the printer's hands, and when the foreign firm filled its first orders they were served with an injunction restraining them from using the brand or labels they had themselves designed.

Owing to Canada not having signed the Japanese commercial treaty we are debarred from registering brands, except through British residents or in the names of Japanese. The application of the Japanese conventional tariff to many lines which Canada could otherwise sell to Japan, is a matter calling for the attention of Canadian business men. I am told by well informed Japanese that no country which has refused to sign their commercial treaty will ever again be invited to do so. But I trust that in the interests of Canadian commerce the Hon. Mr. Fisher's visit to Japan, during the International Exhibition, will have been the means of securing for Canada the advantages of the treaty of 1894, though the two years during which the stipulations of the treaty might have been applicable to the colonies or foreign possessions of Great Britain have elapsed. This treaty did not take effect until 5 years after its ratification, i. e., until 1899.

In consequence of the new government insurance regulations, one million dollars gold having to be deposited with Japan, I understand the Manufacturers' Life and the Sun Life of Canada, together with all the other great life insurance companies doing business in Japan (except one, the New York Life) will cease to issue new policies in that country after 31st inst.

I am sometimes asked by Canadian manufacturers of food products, "Should we print labels in Japanese or Chinese for our export brands ?" For the benefit of those whom it may interest I would say no. If it be a worthy article, put on "made in Canada," even if you have to leave off your city and street number to do so. But please, oh please, enclose or provide directions in Japanese or Chinese for the use of an article little known to the Orient. If the foreign language appears on the label itself, it will be suspected that it is of native manufacture and treated accordingly.

Last week a wealthy Chinese merchant who has bought largely from me, invited me to take a trip with him in his steamer to his home town, Chu-San, about 150 miles from Shanghai. It is quite unusual for a Chinaman who lives in a Europeanized sea port to refer to his native city, they do not wish to be identified with it among European business men. Consequently I felt honored by this invitation. I was advised by a foreigner to take my own "chow" or I would have only Chinese food, etc. I bought an assortment of tinned goods, bread, butter, etc., which my "boy" packed up with cutlery, plates, etc., borrowed from the hotel, and delivered at the steamer. I found, when Mr. King Chong and I reached the wharf in our rickshaws, that it was a huge passenger steamer plying on the coast. It was owned entirely by my customer. It was crowded with passengers. Many wealthy men among the cabin passengers were introduced to me, and I was given an entire stateroom. I felt ashamed for bringing foreign "chow" on board that boat. I had already told Mr. King Chong I had done so, and he had turned my packages over to the cooks to prepare for my meals for three days.

When we got clear of the san-pans and other small boats in the river—we crushed one up against a wharf, its passengers scrambling ashore in fright and abusing the poor coolie who poled it, but who nevertheless stayed by his craft till the last piece of luggage was thrown out—we steamed majestically down to the mouth and shoved a heavy old Chinese junk out of our course to the terror of yours truly and the Chinese crews and passengers.

The dinner table was nicely served and when my special supplies were brought on I felt that I had to invite my new acquaintances to partake of them. But for those three days I was at each meal surprised by at least one of the dishes served. I supposed they were Chinese courses. What my friends thought they were, they were too polite to say.

A MYSTERIOUS MENU

The soup I called in my ignorance "Bird's nest soup," and pretended I liked it. When we had a foreign tasting fritter I supposed it to be some Chinese bean paste, or perhaps a fried oyster, so I said to myself I'll be a "Dowieite" and not eat the scavengers of the ocean. The jelly glace was not so bad, for I ate the jelly from around the sides of the Oriental fruit it held, as soon as I tasted the dry mealy morsel. I devoted more attention to the rice-curry, but the following day perceived that even Chinese rice-curry might be improved on by a careful Canadian housewife.

I had often wished for some home-like breakfast food in this country where oatmeal is served without salt. Well, I had a breakfast food that would make the fortune of an undertaker, if he could get enough people to use it. After the first day I was the only one at the table—the Chinese gentlemen were eating with chop sticks in the captain's cabin, European meals were at a discount with them.

When I returned to Shanghai, the cabin boy brought to me the remainder of the tins, etc., I had provided so needlessly for my comfort and health. I opened the package to distribute to the servants, and found some two dozen empty sample packets of Gillett's Royal Yeast Cake. The room boy at my hotel had wrapped them up with my provisions thinking they were good to eat. So they are, when properly done up in flour and baked. But, oh! George McFarlane! Why did you not put Chinese directions in those yeast cake samples?

CHINESE HOSPITALITY

At Chu-San, which is where the English first landed 64 years ago, a fortified walled city, now with no European population, I was splendidly entertained by Mr King Chong, who is styled the "Emperor of Chu-San." He took me to his friends' houses, to two Chinese marriage festivals, which reminded me of the stories in the Arabian Nights, where I sat at the upper table with officials and guests of honor and wore my Chinese hat with a red stone in the top of it. The bride, gorgeously attired, with thousands of dollars worth of jewellery and embroidered robes, and a head-dress of marvellous fashion, and feet small enough to go into a 5 o'clock tea cup, was introduced to me. But I doubt if she ever saw me, for Chinese brides are so modest they never raise their eyes from the ground.

Then my friend provided in his magnificent house a foreign dinner, inviting his chief friends. That tin course dinner, with its handsome china, brilliant cut glass, English cutlery, modern lamps, magnificent Oriental furniture, the delicacy of the viands; five richly dressed gentlemen in silk Chinese clothes lined with expensive furs, wearing their round caps at table, one having a pea cock's feather trailing from the mandarine button, each man with left hand finger nails several inches long and encased in gold thimbles; the whispering of the three wives, women servants and children who were gazing at us from behind the silk curtains of the doorways, made a scene I am not likely to forget. When I consider how I was situated, the only European in an immense walled pagan Chinese city, being entertained as hospitably and as lavishly as I had ever been by Canadian customers; and that, too, by a Chinese merchant who desired to do honor to the representative of the Canadian firm he was trading with, forgetting that England had landed, and fought and buried her dead a stone's throw from his home side, I was both proud of the merchant who was wise enough to profit by England's commercialism and of the country which could batter down a stranger's door and then step inside, eat and drink with him and sell him her country's goods.

Yours sincerely,
ANDREW R. TUFTS.

P. S.—I enclose you a snap-shot of Mr. King Chong and self taken in Chu-San, and one of his "Hong" or offices with his staff.

OFF FOR BERMUDA.

Albert Allard, of Provost & Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, leaves on the 22nd inst. for his first holiday in six years. Mr. Allard has chosen a West Indian trip for his outing, and will during the six weeks of his absence visit the principal islands, going as far as Demerara. A keen observer, Mr. Allard will no doubt bring back with him an intimate knowledge of many of the West Indian lines handled by the grocery trade in Canada, and the experience and knowledge gained will be put to practical use in his company's business. The Grocer wishes him a "bon voyage" and safe return.

SHERRY WINE IN SPAIN.

The production of sherry wine in Spain writes M. M. Price, U. S. commercial agent, Jeres de la Frontera, Spain, is confined to the district of Jeres. Since 1890 the vintage has decreased so enormously that unless the new vineyards planted with American vines in the last few years shall be a success in the growth of grapes, the existence of this great industry is near its end. In 1890 there were produced 6,000,000 gallons in the district of Jeres. The vintage has fallen off from year to year, until the product of 1903 only amounted to 445,848 gallons.

CANADIAN HONEY AND THE BRITISH MARKET.

By Mr. W. W. Moore, Chief Markets Division Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

FOR the benefit of your readers interested in the production and sale of honey, I venture to submit herewith a few facts relative to the honey trade in Great Britain, with special reference to the position of Canadian honey in that market.

In the calendar year 1902 Great Britain imported honey to the value of £27,126 sterling, of which Canada supplied £316 worth. In 1901 the British imports were valued at £43,138, in which Canada participated to the extent of only £222. The British West Indies, Chili, and the United States were the chief sources of supply; but I do not know of any good reason why Canadian honey should not successfully compete with those countries if an export trade along proper lines were initiated from Canada.

In the census year 1901, there was produced in Canada 3,569,567 pounds of honey, of which Ontario and Quebec produced 3,456,743 pounds, leaving 112,824 pounds from the rest of Canada. Last year Ontario produced a good crop of honey; but I understand that large quantities are still in the hands of the producers, for want of a remunerative market.

I have had some correspondence with a number of our honey producers, and they do not appear enamoured with the methods of doing business as practiced by British commission firms, claiming that the expenses charged in the returns eliminate any chance of profit to the shippers.

Not long ago I wrote the agents of the Department of Agriculture in Great Britain, asking them to investigate the possibilities of the British markets for our honey, and to inform me as fully as possible regarding the way in which our competitors conduct their export trade, the kind of packages most in demand for extracted honey, whether the foreign honey is handled by commission firm or not, and the difficulties that appear to stand in the way of developing a Canadian trade. Following are replies that I have received :

From Mr. A. W. Grindley, Liverpool.

In reply to your letter of January 7th, with reference to the export trade in honey, I have gone into the matter carefully, but there is little to be added to the report which I sent you August 22nd, 1903.

The greatest difficulty appears to be in getting the Canadian exporters and British importers to agree. Canadian shippers wish to sell outright, as they claim that the expenses charged by British commission firms eliminate all profits. The British importer objects to buying goods in Canada by sample, as it has been found that the bulk when shipped has not been up to sample.

The most satisfactory way would be for the Canadian honey shippers to have a representative in Great Britain. He could then effect sales by sample, and when the goods were delivered ; if not up to sample, disputes could be settled on the spot.

Californian honey is chiefly sold through New York houses who have long established connections with British importers. South American honey is chiefly sold through representatives in Great Britain. West Indian (British) honey has in the past been sold through a representative sent to Great Britain by the Association of Bee Keepers.

The lack of uniformity in quality of Canadian honey is what the trade here object to. White clover honey is well liked, but the trade object to buckwheat or basswood honey. Californian honey is more uniform, being chiefly sage. There is only a very limited demand for honey in the comb. Choice white clover honey (strained) should be shipped in well-made tins holding 56 lbs. net. Place two tins (1 cwt. net) together in a strongly made crate in order to prevent the tins being damaged during transportation.

I do not know of any journal which regularly publishes quotations on honey. Prices are quoted in daily papers when sales are made.

From Mr. John Brown, Glasgow.

With reference to the export trade in honey I have obtained the following particulars which, though perhaps meagre, may be of some little use to the Department. The kind of package most in demand for extracted honey is the 56-lb. tin (with screw stopper), protected by sparred wooden case. Most of this is handled by commission houses who prefer to buy outright if color and quality is right. The difficulties in the way of developing a trade in Canadian honey seem to be the fact that it sets very quickly and gets tallowy in color ; some of it also has a pungent, strong flavor, which is very objectionable. It would take much better if in a more liquid form and free from any strong taste. As one man described it to me, what is wanted is "a grainy honey with a sparkle in it." This same man informs me that Jamaica honey has come very much to the front during the last year, it being cheap and good, present price being 21s. to 23s. He considers it will prove a keen competitor in the future with Californian honey, the present price of which is 30s. to 32s. 5d.

As regards the way the export trade is conducted with other countries, this is entirely a matter of arrangement; the trade is a small one and the market very narrow.

I can hear of no paper giving quotations for honey, although sales of same are sometimes published in The Public Ledger, London.

From Mr. Thos. F. Davis, London.

The Canadian honey imported here is practically nil, the imports being chiefly from California, Jamaica, France, and some from New Zealand ; the price varying according to quality—the whiter the honey the more money it will fetch. Honey from California and Jamaica is chiefly shipped in tins of 28, 50 and 56 lbs. It is chiefly sold through brokers on commission, but merchants also buy direct.

The names of reliable British firms who handle honey on commission can be obtained from Mr. Moore, also the names of a few firms who are prepared to buy Canadian honey outright, provided the quality is guaranteed to be regular and up to sample.

Leeds Wants Our Cheese.

MR. J. B. JACKSON, Canadian Commercial Agent at Leeds, writes the Department of Trade and Commerce as follows :

There is a good market here for Canadian cheese, a very large quantity being shipped to Leeds either direct or bought at Liverpool from general commission houses there who import from Canada, and it is spoken of in the highest terms, except that this year on account of the small stocks in hand last Spring, the cheese was sent here much too new, and it would be very much better in the long run for the Canadian producer and for the Canadian commission merchant, if the cheese was at least a month old before it left the factory, and a regulation to that effect would, I think, be desirable. The men who understand the business here say that the Canadian cheese would be very much improved and would bring a much higher price if it were not so solid, but more open in the grain. They say it is much too close. If this can be rectified by the Canadian makers it would be a great advantage.

As far as I have been able to learn, there are no Canadian cheese shipped here put up in pots or jars such as the Paragon or Imperial cheese in Canada, the only substitute being cream cheese, put up in small parcels in paper. There should be a very large trade done in Leeds and in the surrounding cities in cheese such as I have named if it be put up in neat jars or pots.

Butter and Cheese in West Indies.

THE first weekly report of the Trade and Commerce Department, Ottawa, just come to hand, gives some very interesting information as to the Canadian butter and cheese trade in the British West Indies.

Canada seems to have but a small share of the trade in these articles in Trinidad. The demand there, however, is chiefly for cheap grades, which should be put up in 66 or 33 lb. firkins. The better class trade is largely in Danish butter put up in 1 lb. tins, selling at from 32c. to 36c. per lb. as against 28c. to 30c. for Canadian. A specific duty of 2 cents per lb. is charged on importations of butter and cheese.

Canadian butter and cheese are both favorably received in Jamaica, the difficulty being in inducing Canadian factories to comply with the market's requirements.

Cheese should be packed in single, strong boxes of from 20 to 30 lbs. each. Also 4 in a box of about 9 lbs. each and of the highest grade. Butter, in tight kegs of about 30 lbs., and in tins of ½, 1, 5, 10 and 25 lbs. each (100 lbs. to the case). Both dairy and creamery description are in demand; they both, however, must be of high grade.

A uniform duty of (2d.) two pence per lb., equal 4 cents, is levied on all imports of butter and cheese; oleomargarine and what is known as American potatoe cheese, being similarly dealt with.

At St. Kitts, Nevis, and Virgin Islands, Canadian butter aod cheese are steadily growing in favor. For table use the chief competition lies with the Danish and Lombardy brands, put up in ½ lb. and 1 lb. tins, but the imports of these have considerably decreased since the introduction of Canadian. Little or no table butter is imported from the United States, but a large quantity of oleomargarine comes here, and this being cheap, is extensively used for cooking purposes, and with the poorer classes it takes the place of butter altogether. Butter in iron-hooped wooden kegs of 30 to 36 lbs., and in tins of 1 lb. each; and cheese in boxes of about 30 lbs., find most ready sale. Kegs and boxes with butter and cheese being too frail to stand the rough handling in shipping, these should be packed in wooden outer cases, to contain about 120 to 130 lbs.

The new tariff ordinance has come into operation and fixes the duty on butter at $2.40 per 100 lbs., and on cheese at two cents per lb.

New Brunswick Dairymen.

The annual meeting of the Farmers' and Dairymen's Association of New Brunswick will be held this year at Fredericton on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th March. Among the speakers will be his honor the lieutenant governor, Hon. L. P. Farris, F. W. Hodson, Dominion live stock commissioner; W. S. Sparks of Canterbury, England; W. A. Mackinnon, chief fruit division, Ottawa; George H. Clark, chief seed division, Ottawa, and other prominent agriculturists. Programmes and all information may be obtained on application to the secretary, Thos. A. Peters, Fredericton, N. B.

Delivery of Butter to Railway Stations.

EVERY precaution should be taken to see that butter is delivered to the stations at such an hour as to make the closest possible connection with the refrigerator cars, urges a bulletin just issued from the Department of Agriculture. An hour's exposure to the heat of a warm summer day means positive injury to the butter and shortens its life. It would be better to have all the butter carried to the station by contract, so that some man would have a properly equipped wagon with a cover for protection against sun and rain. It would be possible to insist on having such a wagon always clean. The manager would have authority and control over a contractor, but he has very little over the independent patron, who takes the load when it suits his convenience, very olten in an unsuitable wagon, dumps it down at the station without any consideration except that of getting rid of it as quickly as possible. The cost of hauling the butter to the station should be considered a part of the operating expenses in all creameries.

Western Ontario Dairymen.

The directors of the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario met at the Windsor hotel, Stratford, on Saturday last, with the following present : J. N. Paget, president; Robert Johnston, A. F. MacLaren, M. P., I. W. Steinhoff, T. Ballantyne, W. K. McLeod, John Brodie, W. A. Bothwell, John McQuaker, George Hately, secretary. The secretary was re-appointed and an executive committee to act as a committee on instructions named as follows : The president, Thos. Ballantyne, Jr., I. W. Steinhoff, Robt. Johnston and W. K. McLeod. A committee to look after the dairy exhibition to be held in Toronto next January was elected as follows : W. Steinhoff, W. A. Bothwell, John McQuaker and President Paget. Arrangements are nearly completed for the formation of cheese factories into groups of seven, each group under one inspector, and one inspector over all. The Summer creameries will also be looked after by two instructors, as last year.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—Local provision men report some improvement in the situation this week although the severe weather interferes very greatly both with receipts and deliveries. Smoked and cured meats are firm at prices given last week which we repeat unchanged. Lard which is excessively low, selling for much less say the packers than it can be made for at present prices of dressed hogs, has been advanced 1-4 cent all round. Heretofore retailers have been buying only from hand to mouth, fearing as usual to enter a weak market. Dressed hogs are worth a little more locally because they have not been received. There is, however, no difference outside. In fresh meats prices remain unchanged with the exception of a wider range in mutton. We quote:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13
Roll bacon, per lb	0 09½	0 10

Butter—The butter market is unchanged, the large receipts which were beginning to be received a short time ago have been curtailed, but it is expected that with a change in the weather a great deal of butter will be received. Creamery printes are not coming in in large quantities. Dairy is a little better, but much of it is not of the best quality. There is too much butter of under qualities, but all stocks have been reduced during this cold snap. We quote:

Provisions—As is natural the war has made prices firmer in these lines. Pork is quoted about one dollar higher, though the local market does not yet show the full advance. Beef, though higher, is as yet little changed. In pure lard several packers have withdrawn prices. It is felt at present prices this is particularly good stock. In fresh meat prices are unchanged. Beef is rather more freely offered. Lamb is firm and supply limited. Mutton is dull at low figures. Veal is freely offered and sells freely at even figures. Pork is held firmer.

London Provision Markets.

Thomas Nesbitt & Co. report as follows in their prices current dated London, February 1st:

Weather finer after much rain. Business generally unsatisfactory.

Butter—Supplies of colonial are still heavy. Market fairly good.

Bacon—Slow trade, and heavy arrivals cause general reductions in values.

Hams—Irish quiet. Canadian, etc., dull.

Lard—In slow demand.

Eggs—Supplies moderate. Marked steady.

Cheese—Meets with only a quiet sale.

Provision Notes.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN OF AFFAIRS

MR. H. MONTAGU ALLAN.

A TYPE of the Old Country business man, of the Old Country squire, in fact, is Mr. H. Montagu Allan, the eldest living son of the late Sir Hugh Allan, and to-day one of the chiefs of the great Allan Line of Steamships.

Mr. Allan is the type of man who would have succeeded in business if he had been started in the world without a dollar. His life has been one of constant activity and work, yet with all he has scarcely been in the public eye until the last year or two, when his influence has been more in evidence in big financial and industrial concerns, and quite recently when he was urged to run for the Presidency of the Board of Trade. His love of fair play prevented his opposing Mr. Drummond, who rightly earned the place.

Mr. H. Montagu Allan, Montreal, of the Allan Line of Steamships.

A glance at the man himself would see a tall, erect, full-chested man usually modestly dressed. Considerably less than half a century of years, more than half of them filled with active efforts toward higher ends, have printed their mark on a broad, well-shaped head, have stamped it with reflectiveness, but kept its serenity. The rest of the face might be owned by an English lad—smooth, rosy, as if its owner had never had a care, never lost a night's sleep, or a day's enjoyment.

Mr. Allan inherited position from his father, but he never has for a moment traded upon the position in which he was born. He was educated partly in England and Scotland, and at Bishop's College, Montreal, in fact the larger portion of his life has been spent in Montreal, where he resides to-day in one of the most beautiful ancestral residences that we have in this new country. "Ravenscrag" is the name of the old Allan home, and has been for nearly a century the centre of magnificent social and intellectual gatherings. Royalty has, on many occasions, been entertained here. It is so unpretentious as a family house that one seldom sees anything in the public press regarding the doings of this home.

Mr. Allan, notwithstanding the man-made conditions that opened life easily for him, entered into work early under the keen tuition of capable managers of the Allan Line, where he built up a strong knowledge of the steamship business. He has never neglected the smallest detail of his business, and while he has capable heads in each department, he is said to be in complete control of all transportation matters.

The world of politics has never held any fancy for Mr. Allan, although many inducements have been made for him to enter the turmoil. He has other tastes. Notwithstanding the multiplicity of business calls upon him, he finds time to be president of the Merchants' Bank of Canada, president of the Canada Paper Co., director of several large milling, metal and other industrial companies, and a devoted worker for charity; he is also an enthusiastic sportsman and a great lover of music and art. At one time he was treasurer of the Board of Trade during 1891-2. He has frequently held the highest honors the Hunt Club could bestow upon him, and is a great lover of fine horses and dogs.

In addition to this, his conservatory is one of the most beautiful in Montreal. He is possessed of a very retiring disposition, yet is a brilliant conversationalist when the subject interests him, and his extensive travels abroad enliven his companionship, which only a select few enjoy. In the business community he is esteemed for his judgment, open-handed generosity and unassuming character at all times. Mr. Allan is a representative Canadian business man, but merges all the English solidity with the nervous vitality of the modern West.

CAREER OF SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

FROM the time when he was ten years old and earning sixty cents a week as an errand boy in Glasgow, Sir Thomas Lipton has fought his way to success by tireless energy, working, as he says, "twenty-five hours a day."

His school days ending at ten, he continued his education at night school. At sixteen he took steerage passage to America, and landed in New York with but a few shillings. He wandered South, worked on a plantation in South Carolina, drove a street car in New Orleans, took orders for crayon portraits, and after two years returned to Glasgow with only a few dollars, but much experience and wisdom. His poor father had saved four hundred dollars and loaned it to Thomas to start him in a little bacon and provision store. The bulk of the capital was put into advertising, and two of his father's finest hogs he scraped and scrubbed and polished till they shone. Then he harnessed them to a little red wagon on which was painted "Go to Lipton's,' and had them driven through town.

The little business grew rapidly, one store after another was added, until to-day he has over five hundred and twenty stores all over the world and employs over ten thousand people. He is the largest individual land-owner in Ceylon, pays more money in duty than any other firm in the Empire, has cocoa, tea and coffee plantations, fruit farms in Kent, bakeries in Glasgow, canning factories in Liverpool, kills thousands of hogs a day in his Chicago packing house, and handles every variety of food product except beef.

Lipton's recipe for success, "Work hard, deal honestly, be enterprising, exercise careful judgment, and advertise freely," condenses the business biography of this prince of business men, who has carried the same creed into his yachting.

Needs only to be seen to be appreciated—

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Silent Salesmen.

A CORRESPONDENT sends me some samples of advertising cards put out by Black & Co., Halifax, whose advertisement to the trade is running in "The Grocer." My correspondent says: "These cards struck me as being very fine. The wording is to the point, not too much of it, and of such a character as to make the readers think.

"These cards, it will be noticed, have no advertising or brand of any description and are apparently sent out in a sort of missionary way in the interest of fish trade generally. The small memorandum at the foot, 'The best flavored fish are caught near the coast of Nova Scotia,' seems to be intended to draw attention to Nova Scotia fish as against New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. The large colored card (reproduced by us herewith in half-tone) gives the brand and as the cards are distributed to retail merchants for display in the stores and go together, the advertisement of course will be drawn to the brand. If these cards were placed, for example, in a merchant's window, nine out of every ten passers-by would stop to read them.

"I may state that in my rounds among the trade I have run across these cards in stores all over, and you can readily understand what a lot of advertising Black & Co. get in this way."

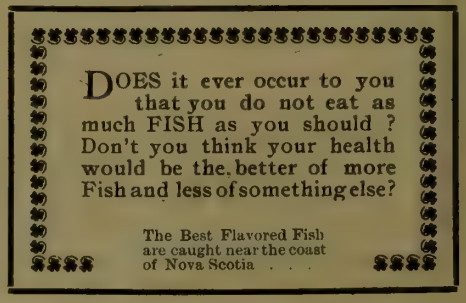
I am sure the readers of this department will appreciate the above estimate of an example of advertising somewhat out of the ordinary. My correspondent reveals himself to be a close student of advertising, with a fine judgment, and further contributions from him will be gladly welcomed.

It is unnecessary for me to take up these cards sent out by Black & Co., for additional review, except to add that I quite agree with the comment already made. They constitute good advertising and it is to be hoped that the retail grocery trade everywhere will give them prominent display. Cured fish as an article of grocery merchandise is not "pushed" over-much, and there is provided in this circumstance an opportunity for adding to sales,—sales which carry with them a very nice profit.

Display cards such as are herewith illustrated are particularly good for the manufacturer and packer, and in one form and other are much used. It is their adaptation to the retailer's use that interests me at this time, and accordingly I wish to devote the remainder of this week's article to a consideration of store cards for the retailer.

The written or printed card conveys its message with a directness and conviction not attained by the spoken word. It leaves a distinct impression because of its brevity, an impression that endures. These silent appeals for more business are received by the buyer with no resentment, such as might result from a salesman's over-solicitious attentions. They do not fret the customer; indeed, they are almost sure to interest him. These mute suggestions influence the mind, create desire, lead to decision, and are a selling force of first-class value. Their display in the windows, on the counters, on the shelves, on tables or stands, is a continual appeal for business, an appeal that meets with a profitable response.

John Wanamaker, according to an article in the Advertising World, is called the pioneer of the extensive use of show cards as adopted to modern methods of business. He says they save talking, and at the same time are the most effective salesmen. No one gets tired of their talk, as they talk only when asked.



DOES it ever occur to you that you do not eat as much FISH as you should? Don't you think your health would be the better of more Fish and less of something else?
The Best Flavored Fish are caught near the coast of Nova Scotia . . .

Another leading merchant declares that show card advertising is the cheapest and most profitable advertising the retail merchant can do. These cards take the place of salesmen in so much as they inform the public of the price of the goods they accompany.

The writing and preparation of show cards for use by retailers has developed into a distinct business. There are firms in Toronto, in Montreal, and other Canadian cities, that make card-writing and card-illustration their peculiar work. If any grocer prefers cards more elaborately prepared than he can execute himself, they can be procured, and at no exorbitant cost. The editor of this department will be glad to furnish upon application the names of firms and individuals who do this class of work.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Difficulties of Oystermen.

THE Virginia oystermen continue to obtain stock, notwithstanding the difficulties encountered, remarks the Fishing Gazette. The Choptank river is closed to both scrapers and dredgers, but dredging on the ice has been carried on with good results. A hole is cut in the ice large enough to admit of the dredge being let down through it. Then a trench about four inches across is cut for a distance of some 50 or 60 yards, and by means of this the dredge is drawn to the edge of the ditch, where a second hole is cut, and it is drawn, with the oysters, to the surface. Four men work together, and from 75 to 100 are thus engaged. The work is done on the tongers' grounds, where oysters are fairly plentiful, and this fact, coupled with the high prices prevailing, makes the work remunerative, as much so as tonging would probably be. The men thus engaged can average $3 a day each, but it is hard-earned money.

From all points come the same story of adverse conditions. The Long Island oystermen are great sufferers. The recent drop of the mercury has frozen the Great South Bay for the fourth time this winter. The oystermen are again idle, and are suffering severe losses by the continued cold weather. A number of dealers report that anchor frosts have touched their beds, and they would not be able to get at them if the bay opened.

Fishstuffs in Trinidad.

GORDON GRANT & CO., Port of Spain, Trinidad, in their commercial review of January 28th, thus report on the condition of fishstuffs: Our market is quiet and the liberal receipts since the beginning of the year are moving off but slowly. There have been no recent direct arrivals, but regular supplies continue to come forward via New York and Halifax and the steamers Ocamo and Grenada are now landing some 350 casks of various descriptions. Stocks of prime well cured N. S. cod are moderate and for such quotations to-day ranged between $23.00 to $24.00 casks small, $25.00 to $26.00 medium, $27.00 to $28.00 large and $5.50 to $5.75 boxes, and $20.00 casks scalefish. With moderate arrivals these rates should be maintained, as although demand is light at present, our Lenten season is approaching when consumption is invariably at its best. There is some enquiry for Newfoundland cure. We are now offering 50 casks prime large "Gooderidge's" ex S. S. Grenada. Good split herring and pickled salmon are saleable.

Fishermen's Supplies Free.

Mr. C. E. Kaulback, Conservative M. P. for Lunenburg, N. S., is reported as favoring a revision of the tariff placing on the free list cotton duck for sails, rope, all cordage, nets, lines, twines, chains, hawsers, in fact all articles used by fishermen engaged in fishing.

Scotch Fishery Trust.

Mr. Van Laun, London, who is promoting the Scotch Fishery Trust, recently had special meetings in Aberdeen with representatives of the various trawling companies, says the Scottish Trader. He proposes to amalgamate 50 of the modern trawling companies in Scotland, whereby a saving of £20,000 annually will be effected in working costs. Mr. Laun emphasizes the point that if fish is of a good quality the market in England is unlimited. The trust has already had the offer of an important curing business in Scotland, and would erect its own preserving factories for packing and tinning fish.

Missed a Chance.

A Newfoundland schooner nearing Oporto, fish laden to that port, was forced to several times alter her course consequent on the vagaries of a huge balloon which was drifting wildly about in the vicinity. The chagrin of the skipper was great when, on making port, he found a standard reward of £20,000 was offering for the recovery of the derelict and its occupants.

Russian Sturgeon.

A striking feature incident to the New Year festivities in Russia, is the advent into St. Petersburg of the wild Cossack warriors of the Ural mountains with offerings of frozen sturgeon and caviar from the Volga, and also the epicurean relish prepared from the egg of the sterlet. The mammoth frozen fish and shining round tin boxes are presented individually to the Czar and distinguished people at the capital.

TO THE TRADE.

We are pleased to state that an arrangement has at length been come to for a comparison of the Blue Ribbon and Salada sales for 1903 as appears by the following:

Winnipeg, February 6, 1904.

TO THE TRADE.

All those who read the Salada advertisement that recently appeared in THE GROCER know that it was intended to convey the idea that the sale of Salada tea was so enormous that the increase alone was greater than the entire tea business of any other firm in Canada.

To permit such a statement to go unchallenged was neither fair to the merchants handling Blue Ribbon Tea or to ourselves. We believe that the quantity of Blue Ribbon Tea sold in Canada exceeds the quantity of Salada Tea sold in Canada,and consequently proposed that a comparison be made by a chartered accountant, and suggested that Mr. Ince act as referee.

If the Salada Tea Company wish also to compare their increase in Canada and United States (we believe they do a large Green Tea business in U.S.) with our entire business, including The Blue Ribbon Tea Company of Toronto, controlled by us, we are quite willing to accommodate them, and have already mailed a second check for five hundred dollars to Mr. Ince for this purpose.

It now appears that Mr. Ince is unwilling to act unless the parties agree upon the interpretation of certain clauses in Salada's ingeniously-worded challenge, and as this would indefinitely postpone a decision, we have endeavored to state plainly the conditions upon which, according to our understanding, the investigation is to proceed.

If The Salada Company are agreeable, the matter may be taken up by Mr. Clarkson at once.

(Sgd.) G. F. & J. GALT.

February 13, 1904.

Messrs. G. F. & J. Galt, Winnipeg.

In your letter dated February 6 in this week's GROCER you state you believe the quantity of Blue Ribbon sold in Canada in 1903 exceeds quantity of Salada sold in Canada 1903. If this is a challenge from you and you will submit matter to Clarkson & Cross for investigation we accept, losing party to forfeit five hundred dollars and all expenses. We await reply by wire.

(Sgd.) P. C. LARKIN & CO.

February 15, 1904.

Messrs. P. C. Larkin & Co., Toronto.

Our proposition perfectly clear. The question is whether quantity of Blue Ribbon Tea sold for consumption in Canada during 1903 exceeded quantity of Salada sold for consumption in Canada during the same period.

(Sgd.) G. F. & J. GALT.

The terms of the competition being clearly and definitely set forth, there is no reason why Messrs. Clarkson & Cross should not enter upon their duties at once. Our deposit of $500 is in the hands of Mr. Ince, with whom The Salada Company may either lodge their deposit, or both deposits may be handed over to Messrs. Clarkson & Cross. It is understood that the party losing shall pay the expenses of the investigation and donate the amount of his deposit to any charity the other may name.

(Sgd.) G. F. & J. GALT.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating.

A HINT FOR THE DULL DAYS.

A GROCER in an Eastern Ontario town is turning the dull days to good advantage. Being ambitious and realizing the limitations of business in a comparatively small place, particularly when bad roads were reducing to a minimum the country trade, he resolved some weeks ago to exert himself to secure a wider share of attention and trade than might be won in the ordinary course of business.

Remembering the success in his store of a demonstration of jellies by the travelling representative of a manufacturer some time before, he decided to give demonstrations himself twice a week. Tuesday and Friday afternoons, from 3 to 5 o'clock, were the chosen hours.

The first day he served a somewhat varied menu, including a brand of jelly, some canned fruit and some package cheese and biscuits. Since then he has devoted attention to various goods in his store. Recognizing the danger of giving a bad impression unless the goods were most skilfully served, he secured the assistance of a young lady in the town who knew both how to prepare and to serve the various dishes. She was not expected to solicit orders for the goods but in the natural course of events she was asked many questions by the ladies who came to test the foods prepared for them. Her accurate knowledge of the goods and of how to prepare them proved of great value, proving that there is nothing so effective in forwarding the sale of any article as a personal testimonial or recommendation.

The effect of these "At Homes," for such was the dignified name given to the demonstrations, has been interesting. In the first place they brought many people to his store who had never been there before. They also induced some of his regular customers to buy lines they had never heretofore thought of. Apart from these two valuable results the expense was practically offset by the increased business in many lines. A considerable proportion of those who tested the goods opened for them stayed long enough in the store to think of something they wanted and to give an order.

Realizing that the influence of his invitation would be increased greatly, if he added to the attractiveness of his store, the merchant secured a quantity of bunting and some evergreens and while not making a lavish display succeeded in making his store quite attractive. All this took time, so that January and February, instead of being dull months, have been about as busy as in the Fall. And each week has seen a bigger total of business than that of the corresponding week last year.

FLOUR NOT CONTRABAND.

A RUMOR is being given publicity by the daily press to the effect that flour is likely soon to be put on the list as contraband of war, Russia having made application to the powers in this direction.

The rumor is one that will scarcely gain credence in well informed circles. The Russian Government is unlikely to make such a request, and the request, if made, would have not the slightest chance of being granted by either of the two great powers whose rights would be most affected, Great Britain and the United States. Britain's position on this point was made quite clear when in the Franco-Chinese war France attempted to make rice contraband. The whole spirit of modern international law, would be violated by any such action.

The present tendency of the doctrines and practice of international law is toward the fullest recognition of the rights of neutrals and non-combatants, not to be interfered with in so far as this is compatible with the co-ordinate right of the belligerent to bring his best force to bear on his enemy unmolested by any outside power. But this force must be directed against the public forces of the opposing belligerent not against non-combatants.

Neutrals are nominally equally friendly with both belligerents. They retain their right to carry on ordinary trade except in munitions of war, articles directly contributory to warlike operations, or with ports actually and effectively blockaded. Provisions including flour, are not munitions of war, as recognized by international law. To make them so would be an unjustifiable exercise of warfare, in interfering with the legitimate commerce of a neutral country, to strike a blow directed not so much against the regular public forces of the enemy as against the great body of non-combatants, and likely to produce an amount of suffering disproportionate to any military effect it might be expected to have. Were the provisions consigned to the enemy's fleet or to a naval base or a port or city actually beleaguered a different aspect would be given the question, but prima facie flour or provisions are not contraband, and there is little likelihood of Russia declaring them so to be.

In any event should the Japanese maintain the lead they have already secured on the waters of the Pacific, there would be still less likelihood of Russia being able to enforce such a declaration.

TRADE OPENINGS IN AUSTRALIA.

THE second weekly report of Canadian commercial agents abroad, issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce contains some interesting suggestions from Mr. D. H. Ross, the commercial agent for Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia and Tasmania. Mr. Ross reviews the trade conditions in the antipodes and directs attention to the enormous wheat crop which has recently been harvested. He estimates the Australian crop at 73,000,000 bushels, which will leave from 48,000,000 to 40,000,000 bushels available for export. This large wheat crop, the increased exports of dairy produce, the brisk and buoyant state of the wool market and the satisfactory increase in the output of gold combine, in the agent's opinion, to ensure a period of prosperity for the island colony. Australia is in a position to be a good customer.

What can Canadian manufacturers do to increase their business in Australia? To this question the agent devotes some attention and he mentions several lines of manufactures in which he considers that there is an opening for Canadian trade. Among others, he mentions the demand for Canadian cut tobacco which has already made its appearance in Melbourne and which will meet with a better sale when Canadian manufacturers are better acquainted with the class in most demand. The cut tobacco should always be enclosed in air tight packages.

In the agent's opinion, there is a good opening for Canadian made calcium carbide. Acetylene gas is now being used very extensively as an illuminant in small rural towns and country districts, halls, churches, hotels and residences. The demand for calcium carbide is growing rapidly and large quantities are imported from England, Sweden, and the United States. Importers want to be certain of regular supplies and would probably transfer their business if they could receive assurances on that point. This would be a very important factor in securing new business.

The agent further reports that some fair orders have been forwarded recently from Adelaide to Canadian manufacturers. This result, he says, has been obtained by the persistent efforts of the representative of a Toronto exporting concern. That there is a good market in Australia to be developed by Canadian manufacturers seems evident. Australian importers are anxious to increase their purchases in Canada, but as is always the case, seller must seek buyer. A closer mutual acquaintance would undoubtedly result in an increased trade between the two countries.

This latest move of the Department of Trade and Commerce is to be commended. The weekly reports should result in an increased export trade.

KEEPING UP-TO-DATE.

SOME merchants believe they cannot afford to take trips once or twice a year to larger centres; others in practically similar circumstances believe they cannot afford to stay at home.

The difference of opinion is almost absolute and one would almost decide without a second thought that either one classs or the other must be quite in error as to what they can afford. Yet a knowledge of the men and the conditions might lead to the conclusion that both classes are right in their opinion.

To one merchant a visit to a city like New York for instance, would be a waste, should be chargeable to "personal account," while to another such a trip would constitute an investment, and could reasonably be charged against the business because of the returns it would yield in the days to come.

One merchant would have a gay time in the city but would see little else than the "Bowery," Coney Island, etc., while another would have just as good an outing and at the same time would come home full of suggestions and hints for his business. He would have noticed new methods of window dressing, store arrangement and in a score or more of ways would have added to his store of knowledge of his business.

Both these men would be wise to take such a trip once at least, but the former could afford to take it but seldom whereas the latter would get such returns from his first trip that he would soon be in a position to take a trip more frequently than his rival who "drops business when away on a holiday."

MAYOR LAPORTE'S INAUGURAL.

AS might have been expected Montreal's new mayor has wasted no time before initiating an energetic and forward policy for 1904. From his inaugural address on Monday the citizens can readily realize that a business man is now at the helm and that business methods will be pursued throughout the coming year. There appears to be plenty of work for the new administration and Mayor Laporte takes hold with a spirit that presages successs.

Attention was drawn in his inaugural address to the fact that the gas company's contract expires in 1904, and the expediency of learning the views of the company as to renewal in time for the city to protect its interests, was pointed out. Readjustment of the water rates, improvement of the police force, reduction of insurance rates, regulation of electric wires, inspection of public buildings, a Montreal exhibition, inspection of wall posters and pictures were among the things mentioned by the mayor as likely to engage the attention of the new Council.

Under Mayor Laporte's vigorous regime Montreal should experience a prosperous 1904.

CANNED VEGETABLES UP.

SINCE the first of the year The Canadian Grocer has been predicting in its market columns a rise in canned vegetables. The condition of stocks made an advance inevitable so soon as the steady consumptive demand drove the retailers into the market again.

The tone has been decidedly firm all along and anticipating a more vigorous demand shortly the Canners Consolidated have this week issued a new price list that has materially advanced vegetables. Tomatoes are now listed at $1.12 1-2, corn at $1.15, and no peas are in stock at less than $1.05.

The grocer who profited by the intimations made through this paper and secured his requirements before the rise will now be on good terms with himself.

MONTREAL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE last monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held Wednesday last, 10th inst., at Monument Nationale. A very large number of members was present and great interest was taken in the business of the association. President N. Chartrand was in the chair.

Among the members present were: Messrs. E. Limoges, vice-president, J. A. Maynard, 2nd vice-president, J. A. Beaudry, secretary, Arthur Bastien, treasurer, J. A. Labonte, E. Masse, Jos. Chartier, A. Dionne, L. O. d'Argencourt, T. O. Pigeon, H. Poirier, P. D. Boileau, J. O. Deziel, Arthur Trudeau, E. Guillemette, J. B. Deschamps, J. H. Lamarche, Antoine Chartrand, J. W. Guenette, J. A. Seguin, M. Beauvais, J. Gendron, etc.

It was moved by J. A. Beaudry, seconded by L. O. d'Argencourt, that paragraph 24 of the constitution be amended as follows: The monthly meeting of this association shall be held on the first Wednesday of each month and the officers and directors shall have the right to hold a meeting of the board of management also once a month, and such business and transactions are to be considered legal and binding on the association. The date of this assembly is to be left to the choice of the officers.

The following were accepted as active members of the association: E. Masse, T. S. Michaud, and J. E. Jodoin and J. B. R. Carrignan as auxiliary members.

Proposed by Mr. Labonte, seconded by Mr. L. O. d'Argencourt, that the report of the treasurer be accepted. Adopted.

Proposed by L. O. d'Argencourt, seconded by Mr. Dionne, that two grocers from each section of the city be appointed to call upon grocers in their respective districts to secure early closing once a week, and Wednesday as the day. Adopted.

The following gentlemen have been named in the several districts:

Ward St. Louis—L. O. d'Argencourt and Jos. Chartier.

Ward St. Jacques—J. A. Labonte and A. Brien.

Ward St. Jean Baptiste—J. A. Maynard and Jos. Sanche.

Ward St. Marie—T. S. Michaud and T. O. Pigeon.

Ward Papineau—J. O. Deziel and N. Prevost.

Ward Lafontaine—Arthur Trudeau and A. Gervais.

Ward St. Antoine—E. Masse and M. Beauvais.

Proposed by L. O. d'Argencourt, seconded by E. Masse, as follows: Considering that it is the duty of the Montreal Grocers' Association to prevent the wholesale grocers from selling directly to consumers; be it Resolved: That the president and secretary of this association be instructed to call upon the retail grocers and to engage them to bind themselves not to buy any goods from any wholesaler or jobber who will not be willing to sell their goods to the retail trade only, and to this effect the president and secretary be authorized to make the following agreement for signature by each retail grocer:

"We, the undersigned retail grocers of the City of Montreal, hereby agree not to buy any goods from any wholesaler that will sell directly to the consumer and as a sanction of our agreement we bind ourselves, every one for himself, to pay to the Retail Grocers' Association of Montreal the sum of $100 as penalty every time we break the above mentioned agreement. This agreement to be binding on the undersigned until such time as we are relieved by resolution of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association to that effect. We, the undersigned retail grocers, hereby bind ourselves to the above."

Proposed by J. A. Labonte, seconded by Mr. E. Masse, that all bills presently on the table be paid. Adopted.

A discussion took place on the question of establishing a bureau of inquiry and collection by the association, and all present backed the subject up favorably.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, March 2nd.

PERSONAL MENTION.

L. J. Levy, representing the United Factories, was in Ottawa this week. Boeckh's brushes and his company's woodenware interests were closely looked after.

Mr. Archibald J. Rankin, representing S. H. & A. S. Ewing the Montreal coffee and spice manufacturers, was a visitor to the trade in Ottawa during the week. Trade reports are very satisfactory though not as good as might be on account of the general quietness of country trade, the heavy storms and impassable roads making orders to the jobbers light from country merchants.

The death occurred at the home of her daughter in Montreal on Monday last of Mrs. Elie Geoffrion, mother of Mr. L. E. Geoffrion, of the firm of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. Mrs. Geffrion, who had been ill but a short time was 71 years of age. The funeral was held on Thursday to Varennes, Que. Mr. Geoffrion has the sympathy of the trade in the bereavement that has befallen him.

JAPANESE TEA MERCHANT.

A VISITOR to Montreal during the past week, was Mr. Hikonojo Komada, managing director of the Japan Tea Exporting Co., Limited, Kobe, Japan. Mr. Komada has been visiting this country for the past fifteen years in the interests of his company, and is not a stranger to the tea merchants of Canada. His trip includes visits to his different agencies in the United States and Canada, he being represented in Montreal by Mr. Shaw T. Nishimura, of the Central Japan Tea Traders' Association. His company ships about 40,000 half chests of Japan tea to the American market yearly.

Mr. Komada's visits to the States and Canada are made during the Winter season in order to observe the condition of the market, and to form an opinion as to next year's prospects.

Mr. Hikonojo Komada, Managing Director of The Japan Tea Exporting Co., Kobe, Japan.

In an interview with the representative of The Grocer, on being asked as to the condition of affairs in his country at the present moment, Mr. Komada expressed the opinion that Japan was thoroughly prepared to maintain its rights as against Russia. The whole nation was a unit on this question, and a thoroughly loyal and patriotic feeling prevailed to back up the government in any action it might take to this end.

Mr. Komada left for New York on Thursday, and will probably return to Japan about the end of March. The Grocer has pleasure in presenting a portrait of the distinguished Japanese tea merchant and exporter.

At last we can report progress, and Messrs. Clarkson & Cross are likely to commence an examination of the books of both firms on the one side, and the "SALADA" books on the other, and we hope to be able to report the result to the readers of THE GROCER in a short time.

As to the new challenge issued by Messrs. Galt in last week's GROCER. It reads as follows:

> "If The 'SALADA' Tea Co. wish also to compare their increase in Canada "and the United States with our entire business, including The Blue "Ribbon Tea Co., of Toronto, we are quite willing to accomodate them and "have already mailed a second cheque for $500.00 to Mr. Ince."

Messrs. Galt are dealing in wines, liquors, tobaccos, cigars, sugars, coffees, fruits, groceries, bulk and packet teas, and also have some connection with The Blue Ribbon Tea Co. of Toronto, who deal in bulk and packet teas; and they wish to put the ENTIRE TRADE of these TWO concerns against THE INCREASE made by "SALADA" in ONE YEAR ONLY, and they offer to risk $500.00 on this.

The risk they are taking is evidently tremendous in THEIR opinion and is the greatest compliment to the progress made by "SALADA" in 1903.

Thanks, but Tea is the only issue at present.

We will first get through with Messrs. Galt's challenge, and then with our challenge accepted in the GROCER of Jan. 29th, by The Blue Ribbon Tea Co., in a three-quarter page advertisement, and we will then consider the latest offer of Messrs. Galt.

"SALADA," Toronto and Montreal.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Feb. 18, 1904.

Groceries.

THERE is more complaint heard this week over the weather than heretofore. The congestion in transportation has been most exasperating and extremely inconvenient. But despite all trade keeps up to a fair average and the unanimous opinion seems to be that once the weather moderates a thriving trade will be done. January started off well and the country seems to be in pretty good shape. In some instances complaints have been made as to collections, retailers wanting extension of time, but less than might have been expected. The tone of the trade is decidedly optimistic. Canned goods are of considerable interest this week, the consolidation having advanced corn, peas and tomatoes. Canned meats have also been advanced. Coffee is still unsettled, New York having partially recovered and again reacted since last week. Spices are not showing much of interest this week with the exception of indications of a weakness in pepper. Syrups and molasses are meeting a good demand. Rice and tapioca are in better demand owing to the war. Japan teas are firmer and lower grades higher. Other teas are not much changed. Stocks of Valencia shelled almonds are reported to be very much reduced. Grenobles are also low, and prices correspondingly firm. Prunes are selling well. Sugar shows litttle change since last week. Raws developed an easier feeeling during the week but refined has remained unchanged both in the United States and here.

CANNED GOODS.

As predicted in these columns there has come an advance in canned vegetables. The Canners Consolidated have issued a new list advancing tomatoes to $1.12 1-2, corn to $1.15 and peas to $1.05. In reference to the latter it should be stated that low grade peas are all out of the canners hands and they have therefore none to offer less than above. Wholesalers still have some stocks and they have not been advanced to the limit. It was also intimated recently that canned meats would likely be advanced, this has come about and Clarkes announce the following advances: Corned beef, 1-lbs., per dozen, 5 cents; 2-lbs., 10 cents; 7-lbs, 65 cents; 14-lbs, 65 cents; boiled beef, 1-lbs, 5 cents; 2-lbs., 10 cents; 6-lbs., 30 cents. Deviled chicken and turkey have also beeen advanced 10 cents per dozen. The demand is quite up to the average. We quote:

SUGAR

A rather easier feeling has developed in the raw market during the past week and at the close the tone is quiet with refiners indifferent buyers of centrifugals on basis of 1 31-32c. for February shipment. At this price there are no sellers and it is doubtful if any sugars can be brought out except for March shipment for which it is believed refiners would pay 2c. c. and f. if any considerable quantity could be secured. We hear of a forced sale of 1,400 bags muscovado sugar on spot at 2 13-16 duty paid landed terms for 89 test, this shading values 1-32 on this grade for the week. This is the only transaction that has transpired this week, business being interfered with by the holiday in American markets on Friday, 12th inst. The immediate outlook is uncertain, though some seem to hold the opinion that the bottom in prices has been touched and that improvement will follow though slowly. For the present refiners have no inclination to anticipate their requirements to any considerable extent, having about a month's supply on hand, and having bought rather freely lately for both February and March shipment. However, their requirements are evidently increasing every week now, meltings for week ending Wednesday, 10th inst. being 30,000 tons, an increase of 1,000 tons over previous week, and of 100,000 tons as compared with the first week of the year. In this respect, this year differs entirely from 1903 when meltings for first week were 31,000 tons and were gradually decreased to about half that amount for week corresponding with week under review. Receipts at United States Atlantic ports for week ending February 10th were 45,872 tons; stocks in all hands 111,337 tons, being 15,848 tons less than corresponding week last year. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba are 223,337 tons, a decrease of 48,630 tons from last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,550,337 tons, being 118,860 tons increase against same period 1903. The number of central factories grinding in Cuba is increased by 7 for the week, say to 162, which is 10 factories more than were operating at same time last year. European advices are rather firmer and we have to record an advance of 2 1-4c. per cwt. for the week, nominal quotations for February beet being 7s. 11 1-4d. basis f.o.b. Hamburg, which is fully 5-16c. above the parity of cane sugars in the New York market. While these conditions prevail United States refiners will remain out of Continental markets, and it is significant to note that there have been no imports from Europe so far, nor are there any sugars afloat from there at present time. There are no changes to note in United States refined and business there is on the hand to mouth basis at present, with some improvement noticeable in consumption. Similar conditions prevail here, the entire list remaining unchanged, and owing to the continuance of the snow blockade, purchasing has been restricted within narrow limits. There has been little new buying between wholesalers and refiners, while deliveries on recent contrasts have been only fair. There are no special indications for the immediate future. We quote:

COFFEES.

The coffee market is still unsteady, by the end of last week there was a rally of 1 cent from the lowest point in the slump, but on Monday there was a further reaction owing to forced liquidation and weakness in Europe. Locally trade is very unsettled and little movements at present time. We quote:

SPICES.

A little unsteadiness in pepper is reported from New York owing to holders having been caught on the wrong side of the market with coffee. Cassia is still attracting considerable attention. Other spices are without feature. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Both these lines are moving very well, scarcely any molasses is dealt in here evxcept the cheapest bought for price. This is used for cooking. Barbadoes is not a feature. In syrup which is taken for table use there is considerable movement, but confined largely to corn, there being practically no sugar syrup in the market. We quote:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

There is a firm feeling and upward tone to these lines. The volume of trade is good and if the war continues higher prices may be expected. Retailers are reported to be anticipating their requirements. We quote:

TEAS.

There is a firm tone in Japan teas and some speculative business among the wholesale trade. Lower grade Japans are reported a cent higher. There is no particular change in other lines. London reports by mail would indicate a slight weakness but it can not be said to be felt here, if anything the tone is rather firmer. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Advices of Friday last report an advance of 1s. 6d. on Valencia shelled almonds, also that Grenobles stocks are low, not aggregating 500 bales scattered over France. A mail advice from Denia relating to Valencia raisins is to the effect that stocks there are light. There are small buyers in the market. Growers are firm in their demands at full prices at which Fall importations are invoiced. A good movement is reported for prunes and fair for apricots and peaches. We quote:

Country Produce.

As predicted the egg famine has arrived. A few odd cases of newly laid are being received but they are scarcely a feature. Cold storage and pickled are practically off the market. What few cases are still in dealers hands are being doled out to established customers and to fill contracts. We continue prices as last week, but these are merely nominal as the whole stock could be sold out above these quotations if holders would let go. The trade are unanimous in hoping for milder weather and fuller receipts, for under present conditions business is paralized. We quote:

BEANS.

The prospects point to an early easing in the market, white beans being noticeably weaker. One reason for this is undoubtedly the fact that many lumber camps which consume large quantities of beans have closed down on account of stormy weather. There is only slight demand for the export market. Shippers say the Boston markets are dull and continually falling off. There is an over supply if anything in the local market. We quote:

Green Fruits.

Owing to the prolonged season of extreme cold weather the trade in green fruit has been greatly curtailed. The local demand is brisk, the principal falling off being in outside distribution. Stocks of California navels are plentiful and excellent quality and easily hold first place as far as popularity is concerned. There is very little demand for Jamaicas and Mexicans both of which are practically out of the market. Stocks of frozen lemons on the market are considerable. First-class lemons are scarce at the present time, although large stocks are reported to be on the way, they are firmer in price. The local demand for lemons is good and improving steadily. Bananas are scarce. Jersey cranberries are scarce, one or two dealers being out of stock. Pineapples are firmer in price. Stocks of large Valencias were seen this week for the first time. Messina bitter oranges also make their first appearance in the market. Almeria grapes are scarce. Our quotations are:

Vegetables.

The demand for roots and vegetables continues brisk with almost every variety becoming scarcer. There is an especially big demand for cabbage and parsnips. Potatoes are scarce and have advanced 10c. in price. Cabbage is 10c. firmer. Onions are 50c. firmer. Mushrooms, beets, carrots and parsnips have advanced in price. Vegetable marrows and Hubbard squash are out of the market, and Canadian celery is almost impossible to obtain. Rhubarb is easier in price and California celery has advanced 75c. Our quotations are:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market is brisk and prices continue to climb. The Russo-Japanese war has undoubtedly influenced wheat; it also moves in sympathy with the American market where considerable manipulation is going on. The foreign demand is for Manitoba wheat. No. 2 Northern having already reached export level. Wheat from the Argentine Republic and elsewhere supplies foreign demand for Winter wheat. Manitoba wheat No. 1 hard, is 3 1-2c. firmer; Northern No. 1 is 3c. firmer and Northern No. 2 4 c. firmer. Red and white wheat are 3c. firmer respectively. Oats have advanced 1-2c. and peas 1c. Rye is 1c. firmer. Our quotations are:

FLOUR.

The flour market is firm and there has been an advance of 10c. on last week's prices all around. The future of the flour market will be largely determined by the wheat market with which it moves in sympathy. Some millers complain that grain is difficult to obtain. Our quotations are:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, February 11, 1904.

Groceries.

THE movement in general groceries this week has been satisfactory, although the wholesale trade are doubtless hampered considerably by the continued severity of the weather, and their representatives on the road have the greatest difficulty in visiting some points, even when it is possible to do so. Then, too, there are many orders on hand which cannot be despatched, the railways having refused to accept large lots of freight. Remittances have, as might have been expected, been rather slow, though, all things considered, payments were met as promptly as was possible under the circumstances. Several advances have been made in canned goods, including a rise of 10c. in corn and 7½c. in tomatoes. Jobbers prices of rolled oats are now considerably higher, being $4.85 to $5 in barrels and $2.30 to $2.40 in bags. Cotton twine is up 2c. per lb., the selling price being now 22 to 26c. Japan teas show an advance of from 1 to 2c. and the market is firm and tending higher. There has been a big advance in camphor due to the war, (China being the principal exporter of that commodity). The advance is 10c. per lb. in 1 lb. and ½ lb. blocks, making the present selling price 90c. Barbadoes molasses are 5c. lower. Pure lard is higher by ½c., and pails are now quoted at $1.70. Green codfish is very scarce, but though it is in good demand no advance is quoted. Self-rising flour is 10 to 20c. per dozen higher, according to the size of the package. 3-lb. packages are now worth $1.15 to $1.35, and 6-lb. packages $2.20 to $2.60.

SUGAR.

There is some demand for sugar this week, but as a whole the market is quiet, and no better demand is expected until weather conditions moderate. The price seems fairly steady here at the moment of writing, though a slightly lower quotation was given in New York on Monday on raw sugar. There is at least no quotable change, and prices remain as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Barbadoes molasses are again down 5c. per gallon, making the price now in puncheons 33c. The price has been influenced considerably by the bright prospects for a large crop the coming season, coupled with the fact that owing to the high prices prevailing the consumption has been comparatively small, and indications are that a good deal of the present stocks will be left on the market by the time the new crop arrives. sumption of Barbadoes molasses has been falling off quite materially of late, people taking other goods, syrups, canned goods, etc., in its place. Syrups are at present in good demand at the prices quoted below. It is rumored that the price list of new Barbadoes has been purchased for Montreal account at 17c. first cost, which would equal about 32c. laid down here, cost and freight. We quote as follows :

TEA.

The interest this week centres round Japan teas, which are stiffening in price, and are quoted by various houses at 1 to 2c. higher. It seems certain that no Japans of good to medium grades can be had under 18c. Fine to choice kinds are quoted at 24 to 40c. The tea market is very firm all round, influenced already no doubt by the outbreak of war in the Far East. Ceylon and Indian greens are also higher and firm; Ceylon and Indian blacks are about stationary, and appear steady, and gunpowders are a little higher. No doubt the scarcity of Japan teas, should the war be prolonged, will bring on an increased demand for Ceylons and Indians, but it is likely that prices of all kinds of teas will be advanced. Contracts are said to have been placed for early Japans, but whether these can be filled or not, on account of the probable scarcity of labor is doubtful. At any rate, the price would be higher owing to the war freight rates being in force. We quote this week from the lowest to some of the highest grades on the market, instead of, as heretofore, confining prices to those teas most generally used in Canada. Prices are :

NUTS

There is little trade in this line this week. The most important feature is the advance in shelled almonds and shelled walnuts. It is thought that the latter may still go higher. Grenoble walnuts have also advanced slightly. Peanuts are now quoted as high as 12c., and pecans at 10 to 12c.; according to size. We quote :

CANNED GOODS.

Canned corn continues to stiffen day by day, the short crop of last year and steady demand having much reduced stocks. Jobbers have now been advised by the canners that prices have been advanced to $1.15 per dozen, which becomes the price this week. Tomatoes are also higher by 7½c. per dozen, the canners having notified the wholesale trade of this change a few days ago. Stocks on hand with both the jobbers and canners are very light, and may not last, under a fair demand, till the new crop is marketed. The outlook at present is for higher prices. Peas of the best grade are 10c. per dozen higher, and firmly held at that price. As to the low grades reports are to the effect that there are now left in canners hands, and what the jobbers hold may be advanced shortly. Other grades between the lowest and highest have risen in price by 7½ to 10c. per dozen. String beans are 2½ to 5c. higher, and firmer. We now quote :

Green Fruits.

There is not much movement in this market, but this is what is always expected at the time of year. The city trade is quite up to the average. Canadian apples in barrels are in good demand, and are selling freely at from $2.25 to $3.50, an advance of 25c. over last week's prices. California cauliflower is not on the market, quoted at $4 per case. Spanish onions have again advanced, this week being quoted at $3.00. Florida oranges are 25c. per box higher. We quote :

Fish.

The demand for fish of all kinds has been brisk. Prices are tending higher, especially in green cod which are scarce, medium and large being practically out of the market. Salt herring are moving more freely, and in boneless and prepared fish the large volume of business usual at this season is being done. Receipts of haddies are very light. Stocks on hand have been materially reduced and there is almost none on the market at present. Prices tend higher. Owing to an error British Columbia salt salmon was quoted too high last week, the price being $13.50 in barrels and $7.25 in half-barrels, for No. 1 quality of choice red salmon. There are some "dog" salmon on the market, of a whitish color, and these are quoted much lower. Dealers, however, prefer the red. Frozen fish is in active demand. Prices on haddock and pike are slightly higher; other lines are about the same. The period of cold weather has been very welcome to fish dealers. We quote :

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

Last week the Lake of the Woods Milling Co. announced an advance of 10c. per barrel on Manitoba flour, bringing their quotations to the same level of the other millers. The strength in the grain markets has had a direct effect on flour, and the feeling is now strong in all grades. We quote :

PROVISIONS.

There has not been a great demand for hog products this week, and sales have been made of Canadian and American short cut at 50c. to $1 lower. Bacon is also lower. There is a fair demand for hams and bacon. The jobbing trade here advanced the price of lard ½c., making the price of pails $1.70, with the usual

BUTTER

All things considered stocks of butter are not too large. Prices are steady under a quiet local demand. Some export inquiry is reported and this with the prospect of a better local demand when the Lenten season is in full swing keeps prices steady. As regards the export demand one dealer asked 22c. on Monday for his goods, and, as he said to The Grocer man, "the fellow just smiled at me." The export turnover is said to include some excellent Fall and Winter made. We quote :

Fancy Winter creamery	0 20	0 21

CHEESE.

A few cheese are moving forward for export but it is evidently stock that has been held here, and the price quoted is not at all indicative of the actual state of the market. Holders here are still firm, quoting September make at 11c. and October 10½c. It is merely now a matter of holding off and waiting for buyers or sellers to give in. Possibly English buyers have enough stock to tide them over a time, during which buying there is reported to be of a hand to mouth character. At present stocks in retail hands in the Old Country are much reduced, January having made a big difference in them. Should the present month show as great a depletion of English stocks buyers there may quickly meet Canadian prices.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Feb. 12, 1904.

WITH the exception of a sligh advance of ¼ per cent in marine insurance, there does not appear to have been any direct influence on trade here by reason of the commencement of belligerent operations in the Orient. The arrival and departure of steamers for China and Japan is scheduled without any change. The Empress of China is the next vessel to leave this port for Yokohama and Hong Kong, her sailing date being the 22nd inst. The steamers of the Blue Funnel line, which come to this coast from England via the Suez, India and China and Japan ports, are continuing. The only difference marked is that the rates of freight have not been quoted for some weeks. Of course all cargo consignments offering in the Old Country, or in the Orient, are still accepted for transportation by these steamers, and the rates are given before the freight is delivered here. It is anticipated that a ten per cent. raise in freight rates will be announced.

So far there has not been any announcement of a great movement in stocks which can be supplied from this coast to Japan. It is well known that during the past few months the anticipation of war has caused the shipment of a great deal of flour from Puget Sound, B. C., and California ports to the Orient. Such quantities are held in store there, in fact, that the price was down and the market in a state of stagnation for some time past.

That there was need for more in case of hostilities is evidenced by the placing of large orders recently for further shipments. These orders were placed direct by the Japanese government. Most of the flour is from Oregon and Washington. One exporter, at Pendleton, Ore., received an order the other day for 17,000 bbls., for immediate shipment, and two or three weeks ago the same dealer shipped 12,000 bbls., both orders having been from the same source, the Japanese Government. From Canada there are likely to be large numbers of Western horses shipped. Some orders for feed, grain and chop, have been placed with local dealers during the past few months, and it is expected that larger orders will be received ere long.

Discussing the possibilities of trade with the Orient recently, Mr. R. W. Clarke, a wholesale merchant of Victoria, said that last year he had sent a traveller to China and Japan. In June last he had received his first order which totaled $100,000, mainly for staples such as flour, condensed milk, yeast cakes, etc., etc. He is now figuring with a Chinese commission house to supply 250,000 lbs. of butter. Canada is somewhat handicapped in trade with Japan because she is not under the favored nation clauses of the Japanese tariff. As a consequence on many classes of goods, such as soap, condensed milk, hops, hides, etc., the duty collected on Canadian exports to Japan is double that on goods from U. S. or Great Britain. Mr. Clarke has written the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce on this subject.

Speaking of the market in the Orient Mr. Clarke says the orders coming to Canada show a steady increase. There is a splendid field if the merchants will go out and canvass it. In Shanghai alone, Mr. Clarke is told by his traveller, there are three firms whose yearly importations of butter total 1,000,000 lbs., most of which is bought in Denmark. Japan imports over 100,000 cases of condensed milk per year already, a trade, which under equitable conditions, Canada could secure. Mr. Clarke instances a Seattle brokerage firm which during 1902 exported to the Orient produce to the value of $1,250,000.

The price of salmon is likely to be materially affected by the demand created while the Russo-Japanese war is on. In the export of lower grades of salmon, principally dog salmon, the market which has hitherto been trifling because limited to Japanese consumption, has already stiffened as orders have been placed here for 300,000 cases. The Japanese have always purchased the dog salmon, both dried and canned, and last season there was an increase in the quantity packed by various canneries. This will all find ready market now, as the Japanese favor it as a nutritious and cheap article of food. The order referred to comes direct from the Japanese Government. The finer varieties of salmon, sockeye and springs, are not likely to be in much demand, but dog salmon, humpbacks, etc., will be bought for the Japs are great fish eaters. There has always been a good deal of trade in salt salmon from this coast to Japan, since the industry of salting salmon for export began several years ago.

The wholesale men and jobbers of Nelson are taking steps to have a re-adjustment of freight rates in the Kootenays which they say discriminate against them to such an extent that they are shut out of some of the local points for doing business. A special committee of the wholesale men of the city has been appointed to get together some data and prepare a statement showing what the average rates should be so that Nelson would not be discriminated against as a distributing point. One merchant says he used to sell goods in Fernie where he had a good trade. Owing to the changed rates he was shut out of that town altogether.

The situation in regard to through commodity rates from the east to the coast has not changed, nor has there been any further development in the matter of rates generally, such as are being looked into by the committee of the Vancouver Board of Trade.

British Columbia hops are getting a good foot-hold in the English market where recent sales were effected at top prices of $50 per cwt. of 112 lbs. In the past, shipments were sent from B. C. via Tacoma by skilled English hop growers from Kent. Indeed, a rural municipality on the lower Fraser is named Kent, partly from the fact that these Englishmen settled there and began hop growing. For some years the hop gardens which were set out were badly neglected and many ran wild, but the past year or so the movement has been back to the hop gardens, and cultivation is extending.

At Chilliwack, Agassiz, Squamish and in the Okanagan district are many acres of hop gardens, all yielding handsome profits. The class of hops grown is in the main excellent.

It is reported that the condensed milk factory erected at New Westminster three or four years ago and never operated is to be taken over by Mr. Robt. Hill of Elgin, Ill., who has gone East to secure some skilled hands for the place and also to gain from his brother who is in the same industry at Elgin some insight into the business. The factory is situated on the banks of the Fraser river close to the new bridge. It is a separate institution entirely from that at Mission, owned by the Western Condensed Milk Co., which was bought last Fall by the Reindeer people.

ticipating until it began to come in. It promises to keep up and increase as the open season approaches. Every steamer which has sailed recently has taken out large shipments of staples for White Horse merchants from the wholesale houses here.

The only market changes noted as a result of the war are the 10c rise per bbl. in flour, in sympathy with eastern increase and a rise of 30c. in the quotations on tapioca and sago. These latter articles are imported chiefly from Singapore, the Blue Funnel steamers bringing the goods. Flour quotation is now $5.60 here.

Cured meats are apparently strong and inclined to rise. The latest reports on lard, which has been cheap, indicate an advance likely before long.

Butter is confined to local creameries for fresh stock, and to rather limited stocks of held goods for the rest. The choice held stock both dairy a creamery is out, there being but little really fine goods yet in hand. Local creameries have held their price down to 30c. to keep out the California goods. On Vancouver Island the creameries are selling at 35c. with the result that they have had some California goods arrive there. At 30c. for local fresh, the California article cannot come in and compete at present figures.

The scarcity of fresh eggs, indeed of egg stocks of any kind, is the real feature of the market this week. Snow and cold weather has shut off the supply, the hens having given up the task of believing it was Spring. The supplies from Oregon and Washington, which are really all that can be got now, are short also. California eggs are scarcer and have gone up sharply in sympathy. A week or so ago they could be laid down for less than 30c. from 'Frisco. Now the best that can be done is 34c. for the next shipments to arrive. Other stocks have been wholesaling this week at 36c. and not to be had at the price.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Feb. 15, 1904.

BUSINESS has been a little on the quiet side during the last week. The weather improved somewhat and travellers were able to make their trips and secure a number of moderate sized orders, but trade shows the usual mid-Winter conditions and no great activity is expected before next month. There has been a better demand for fish stuffs consequent upon the Lenten season and enquiry has been brisk for certain grades of fish suited to the grocery trade. Flat mackerel are ruling high extras bringing from $10 to $20 a barrel at first hands. The Nova Scotia mackerel are very large this year and therefore there are less to the barrel, a point of some importance to the dealer who buys to sell out by the dozen. Grocery codfish have ruled high and are practically out of the market. Smoked herring also are scarce and the fish market generally presents a strong position.

Flour has been advanced during the last week on the local market, but still the Halifax quotations are lower than are justified by present mill prices. With the high price of wheat and the advanced cost of flour at the mills, one would suppose dealers would be inclined to hold spot stocks in this city at a premium, especially in view of the fact that under the present traffic conditions on the railways it would take a month to get further supplies here from Ontario. The delays in the delivery of freight by the railways lately have been unprecedented. A firm of packers in Pictou had to buy a thousand barrels of flour on this market last week because they could not get supplies from the west that had been en route for some weeks. Cornmeal has advanced slightly since last weeek and is now selling at $2.85. Oatmeal and rolled oats maintain their high position. They have advaned 20 cents since January 1st and are jobbing here at $5.20 per barrel.

Middlings are steady at $23.50. Bran is higher at $22.50, which is an advance of $1.50 per ton over the January prices. Ontario oats went up about 4 cents since the first of the year. P.E. Island oats are held at 43 cents bagged. Eggs are scarcer than ever and there is no regular market price, as high as 40 cents in some cases having been paid. Butter and cheese are dull and unchanged.

The provision market has been quiet for the past month or more but hogs have advanced in Chicago and are to-day one cent higher than in November. The opening of the Spring trade and the consequently enlarged buying demand points to higher prices. In fact this is usually the case around Easter when the market for hams and bacon is active. The only present change to note is a decline in hams to 13 1-2 cents.

There has been a good deal of complaint from the Prince Edward Island and other merchants regarding the Winter mail and passenger service between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. The Government steamers on two occasions have been caught in the ice for three or four days. The transportation of the mails was transferred to the Capes ice boat route, but this was no improvement as the N.B. & P.E. Island Railway became snowbound with ten feet of snow in the highways and the railway tied up the mails were forwarded at intervals by team service. In the meantime the steamers were freed and making trips with fair regularity. It is no doubt very annoying to merchants on the Island to have the mail service interrupted but at the same time it should be remembered that during the present severe weather the Island steamboats have given a much more satisfactory service than a number of railroads in the Province of Ontario.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Feb. 13, 1904.

THE bonspiel has been in full swing since Wednesday and good progress has been made in the big events. The attendance is very large there being some 140 rinks in all. Of course the curlers have been too busy so far to do anything but move from rink to rink, indeed the last draw Friday was at midnight and the last game concluded at 3 a. m. Saturday. Next week the visitors will have time to look about them and some buying will be done. It will be Saturday, the 20th, before the 'spiel is really over.

The war is absorbing the major portion of interest and although it has not materially affected prices so far some advances have taken place and others are contemplated.

Flour—Flour has been advanced 5c. per sack, making the current price for No. 1 patent $2.60.

The latest rumor is to the effect that flour is contraband of war and C. P. R. steamers will not accept shipments of flour for Japan unless Japanese furnish escort for the vessels. This is not confirmed.

Tea—Japan teas have advanced about 2c. per lb., making the scale of prices 20 to 35 against 18 to 32 formerly. This is a small item in this market as the consumption of Japan tea is small.

Rice—Japan rice has advanced ½ and is quoted at 5½ against 5c. previously and is very firm.

Coffee—The decline reported in New York has not been sufficient to materially alter prices here and No. 5 Rio is still quoted at 11c. by some houses and 10½ by others. No. 7 is quoted at 9½ to 10c. There is an active market for coffee at the present time.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—Apricots have again advanced and the price here is 13c. for choice and 12½c. for standard. Evaporated apples are very firm at 6½ and dried at 6¼. The high price of these fruits is having the usual effect of decreasing consumption and there is a heavy demand for prunes, prices for which range at 4 to 8c., according to size. Raisins are steady at $1.85 for fine off stock and $1.95 for selects and $2.00 for layers.

Canned Goods—The only canned goods that have changed prices this week are salmon which are higher and firmer owing to the demand of the Japanese for large supplies of cheaper grades. The advance at the coast is 25c. per case and the higher grades, the ones principally used here, are higher, though no definite advance is quoted. Canned vegetables are firm and in good demand with tomatoes at $2.65; peas $2.10 to $2.20, and corn $2.40 to $2.50.

Cured Meats—The anticipated advance in cured meats has not come but lard is higher, the 20-lb. pail of lard being quoted at $1.90 against $1.80. Hogs are plentiful just at present and packers are paying 5c. for standard bacon hogs live weight off cars Winnipeg.

Butchers' Cattle—In spite of cold weather the receipts have been ample for the market and the cattle are arriving in good shape. 3 to 3½ off cars Winnipeg are prices offered for good cattle.

Butter—The dairy situation certainly does not improve and the receipts of fresh table butter are almost nil. Fancy prices are obtained for the small lots coming in that can be classed as strictly fresh and sweet so that these prices are not fair bases of quotation.

There have been no increases in the egg supply and probably will not be until we get a spell of mild weather. Dealers offer 23 to 24c. for freshly gathered case eggs but the receipts of the week have been limited to a few cases.

New laid eggs retail at 45 to 50c. and are extremely scarce.

Vegetables—Potatoes have advanced 5c. and farmers' loads are quoted at 75c. The retail price is still $1.00 per bushel.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, are offering choice Barbadoes molasses, in puncheons, barrels and half barrels. This shipment is imported direct from the islands, and offered at satisfactory prices.

W. H. Gillard & Co. are offering for sale a very fine quality of corn syrup in several sized tins—something decidedly different and better than the ordinary syrup in flavor and merit.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are selling canned salmon at low prices.

Just received into store by the F. J. Castle Co., Ottawa, Lowney's and Peters' chocolates, Maccormobbies' jams, jellies and marmalades.

W. H. Dunn, Montreal, calls the trade's attention to the string of agencies controlled by him for Montreal. Reference to ad. in another part of this issue will show a list of goods whose qualities have been recognized throughout Canada as in the first rank.

McWilliam & Everist, fruit and commission merchants, Toronto, report the arrival of a car of Valencia onions also a consignment of very fine Messina bitter oranges which they are offering to the trade at record prices.

The Montreal branch of Salada Tea Co. report good sales during the past few weeks and Ceylon greens in increased demand.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, are offering a large assorted stock of canned fruits, vegetables and fish, at very attractive prices, samples and prices submitted on application.

Provost & Allard, wholesale grocers, Ottawa, are sole agents for Ottawa and district of Dr. J. O. Lambert's cod liver oil and tar syrup, and they report good business in same.

S. J. Major, Ottawa, are offering French shore and Labrador herrings, barrels and half barrels, at close prices. Two carloads are just at hand. Buyers should find them interesting during Lent.

A very good demand for Ceylon green teas is reported by L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, who advise arrival lately of about a thousand half chests of Nolanda brand.

Dawson & Co., fruit and commission merchants, Toronto, have received a car of lemons 360's, free of frost and offer the same at a low figure.

The F. J. Castle Co., Ottawa, have received into stock 1,000 30-lb. caddies of Japan tea, a line unobtainable now, which is claimed to be excellent value and offered at interesting prices.

Buyers of Valencia raisins should communicate with H. P. Eckardt & Co.

Armour's "Glenwood Brand" condensed mince meat may be had from H. P. Eckardt & Co.

McWilliam & Everist have just received a shipment of Havana pines. They are particularly fine stock.

The Eby, Blain Co. report, despite the competition of lower priced syrups, a very satisfactory increase in the sales of their "Anchor" brand of pure maple syrup. They have added a new size in quart bottles, which is selling very freely.

A feature with Provost & Allard, Ottawa, is a full stock, all varieties and shapes, of French and Austrian briar pipes, and as they have a very large stock same are offered at specially low prices.

White & Co. sent their representative to Boston this week to look after the arrival and transportation in heated cars of shipments of fruit from Mediteranean ports, thereby landing the goods here in prime condition.

"Wee Macgregor" Breakfast Food sales are increasing with the F. J. Castle Co., Ottawa. Some very large orders have been received from Montreal, Quebec and Halifax during the week.

The Eby, Blain Co. report a large trade in the various lines of "Napoli" macaroni, vermicelli and speghetti.

A carload of Montreal Canning and Preserving Co.'s catsup has just been received into store by S. J. Major, Ottawa. Quarts are offered at 80c. doz., and small pints at 42 1-2c. dozen.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Co., have a snap to offer in 1903 pack standard quality Sultana raisins.

Grocers handling cigars would do well to write the Eby, Blain Co. for the special offer of a handsome cigar cutter given with "Chamberlain" and "La Fayette" cigars.

Very fine quality of American short cut back pork of which a carload just to hand, with S. J. Major, Ottawa, is offered to the trade at tempting prices.

White & Co. received another car Spanish onions also a car marmalade oranges this week.

If interested in hand-picked white beans it will pay you to communicate with the R. & J. H. Simpson Co., wholesale grocers, Guelph, Ontario.

THE GROCER AS OTHERS SEE HIM.

I HAVE a friend up on Walnut street who is about as pleasant a man to spend an evening with as anyone I know, says a writer in the Modern Grocer. He is a genial sort of a soul and he is as good a lawyer as he is clever and entertaining.

I dropped in to smoke with him last week and found a young doctor from over on the avenue in my favorite seat. In some way we got to talking about grocers.

"I am a crank about my food, I suppose," said the lawyer, "and I simply cannot stand for a grocer who is not neat and tidy in his shop. It may be all fancy, for most of the stuff has to be cooked before we eat it, and I suppose that the cooking will sterilize it so that it makes no difference whether it was dirty before cooking or not."

The doctor assured him that this was the case, but added that he too was a trifle particular about the way things looked in the grocery shop.

"Near my flat," said the doctor, "there is a grocer who can have my money any day. He is a nice looking fellow and he seems to have better stuff than the rest of them. Every morning his face shines from close contact with the razor and he is always immaculately fresh and clean in a white duck coat and apron. His green stuff is in a sort of metal bin, over which a fountain sprays all day long, and the stuff looks so green and tempting that one cannot get away from buying. Every clerk is as clean and tidy as the boss, and I'll tell you that I am ready to pay the extra price he sticks on to everything just to have things look so nice and neat."

"I venture that his goods are no cleaner than those of any other grocer in the block," I suggested.

"Maybe not," answered the doctor. "You may be right in that, but when you walk into that market the whole thing strikes you. The woodwork is all in white enamel paint and it is washed often enough to be like a river steamboat. The floor is covered with fresh sawdust with no dirt or scraps about it. In the Summer time folds of white mosquito netting cover the shelving and the canned goods do not remind you of promenades of the ever present house fly. His green stuff is fine and crisp."

"It is crisp on account of the sprinkling," I ventured. "The next door grocer has stuff equally as fresh, and when you get it home a little water will make it as nice as that of your star grocer."

"That may be all right," remarked the lawyer, "but the stuff does not look so nice. Why I quit a grocer a short time ago simply because he did not put up this clean front. His stuff was always good and my housekeeper had gotten to trade with him. One day I walked in myself to do some marketing. The proprietor was smoking a stinking corncob, his coat was greased with escaped particles of butter and lard of many weeks' accumulation, his green stuff looked wilted and the woodwork was capable of producing on vigorous scraping enough dirt to fertilize an acre of ground. The man had several days' growth of beard on his face, and before waiting on me he wiped his hands with a pocket handkerchief which looked as though it belonged to the buggy oiling section of a livery stable. I cut the place out."

"I have always thought that the man who sells us his food ought to be as neat as a bartender," remarked the doctor. "The bartender has to crack ice, wash glasses and do all manner of wet and dirty work and yet in a good place he is always neat as a pin."

"But," I suggested, "the grocer who keeps himself and his clerks immaculate in white duck would have a big laundry bill each week. The profits are not those of the saloon."

"Then increase the prices," remarked the lawyer. "We will pay for appearances, and those who don't want to pay need not go to the grocer who keeps up so nice a front."

"Then white paint, sprinkled green stuff and white duck clothes are essentials to business success for the grocer and market man?" I asked.

"Well, godliness is certainly a virtue," answered the lawyer, "and you know what comes after godliness in the code of morals. I like a grocer who has a front window that is so clean you appreciate that there is nothing to hide."

LEMONS FROZEN.

The extreme cold weather has been particularly hard on imported green fruit. No less than 1,000 boxes of lemons arrived in Toronto during the week of February 8 so badly frostbitten that they were absolutely valueless.

PURE GOLD'S MONTREAL AGENCY

W. H. Dunn, Montreal and eastern agent for the Pure Gold Mfg. Co., Toronto, advises The Grocer that he now carries in stock at 394 St. Paul street, a full assortment of all Pure Gold goods. Through this arrangement the trade will be accommodated and no difficulty experienced in securing prompt delivery and complete supplies of the many grocery sundries manufactured by the Pure Gold Mfg. Co.

APPOINTED AGENT.

J. H. Maiden, Montreal, has been appointed agent for "Mrs. Dooley's Laundry Soap," for the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The merits of this laundry soap are enlarged upon weekly in the advertising columns of The Grocer. The manufacturers are the Metropolitan Soap Co., Toronto.

OTTAWA ITEMS.

C. H. Cochrane & Co., Ottawa, spice, coffees and grocers' sundries, reports trade satisfactory. Mr. Cochrane in an interview with a Grocer representative gives it as his opinion that trade outlook is good, and as far as his firm's business is concerned he anticipates that the increase of last year will be exceeded during the current year. Mr. Cochrane is a thoroughly practical spice and coffee judge and thoroughly posted on the requirements of the trade.

A visit to the office and mills of the High Grade Coffee and Specialty Co., Ottawa, this week by a representative of The Grocer, found them busy with orders. Their plant is modern and every convenience for the careful preparation of their specialties was noted. Mr. Mackenzie, the manager, expressed himself as very much encouraged with the amount of business done so far and the outlook for the future is bright. He reported satisfactory trade from Toronto in which city and district the company is represented by R. J. Laughlin, Princess Theatre Building.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N. B., Feb. 15, 1904.

BUSINESS continues rather quiet except in some of the staple lines, particularly provisions, caused by the higher prices owing to the war. As is no doubt the case all over Canada, sympathy is altogether with the Japs. In fact to a considerable extent it is thought they are fighting England's battle. Naturally flour has shown the quickest response to the present conditions. However, in cornmeal, oatmeal, pork, beef and lard, firmer, if not higher, prices rule. The election which has caused more than usual interest here, will be over before this is published. One thing is evident, our port is receiving more attention than ever before. The government are taking particular interest and it is generally believed that the time is not far distant when St. John will be made a national port. Letters have been received from the promoters of the Grand Trunk Pacific looking to facilities here. There is a mixed opinion however, in regard to these. There continues to be a feeling that Western Canadian importers are not as particular as they should be to have all imports via Canadian ports. This means a great deal to Canadian transport interests.

Oil—In burning oil prices are unchanged. As the season advances there is less demand. Attention is more given to lubricatings, which are firmly held. In this line it is more a question of quality. Paint oils are also receiving attention. Owing to local conditions linseeds are rather lower than market warrants. Turpentine keeps high. In fish oil prices are firm and stock light.

Salt—The stock of Liverpool coarse salt held is quite large. Prices are firm not only because of cost, but storage charges and carrying expense quickly adds to the price. Fine salt has but a light sale.

Hops—Owing to the high price of Canadian quite a quantity of American pressed hops have been sold. The price of these has lately been advanced. The outlook is for very firm prices. Sales are not large owing to light demand.

Canned Goods—Meats have more attention and the trade have placed quite large orders, the outlook being for higher prices. So far as the wholesale trade is concerned, the demand is for Canadian goods. Corn is very firm. Tomatoes are holding at full figures, but few American have as yet been received. Oysters are very firm, and shipments from Baltimore are very slow coming forward. Salmon are in quite full stock. Fruits are unchanged. Lobsters are high. Clams and finnan haddies are in very light supply. Some domestic sardines and kippered herring are still offered.

Green Fruit—This must needs be a rather quiet business at this season. In apples there is a steady sale but prices remain about as last Fall. Oranges sell freely chiefly Valencias. Jamaicas are still offered. Floridas are high. California stock is not largely sold though prices are low. Lemons have a fair demand at quite easy figures. Bananas meet a very light sale. Some nice cranberries are offered at full figures.

Dried Fruit—Sales are light. Dealers are rather overstocked in Valencias, though quantity held is not particularly large. In seeded there is a wide range of quality. We understand some twelve ounce goods are being sold. In comparing prices this should be remembered. Prunes have improved sale. The high price of apricots means little business. Dates are low. Evaporated apples are firmer. Onions show quite an advance. The higher price of peanuts is leading to lower grades being offered.

Sugar—While prices continue low, there is a general feeling favoring higher values and full stocks are being carried.

Molasses—New Barbadoes is being freely offered. In Porto Rico there is quite a range in price. Quite a large stock of old goods is still held.

Fish—The sale is for fresh fish. Quite a quantity of frozen herring continue to be received. Supplies of cod, haddock and smelt are not heavy. In dry fish prices are firmer. Pickled fish are rather easier. Sales are not large. Smoked herring are in very light supply and higher. Large shipments of finnan haddies continue to go West.

Flour, Feed and Meal—Flour has been the line of particular interest. Late advances of about fifty cents have taken place. Manitobas show firmest market. Dealers have bought freely. Oatmeal and cornmeal are both higher. There is a fair sale for feed. Beans are offered easier than a few weeks ago. It is thought they will at least not go lower. Peas are scarce and high. Barley is firm. In seeds dealers are now booking orders. Prices are lower than last season.

Timely Hints and Suggestions

A CORNER of the grocery store of Mowat & Wallace, Victoria, B. C., is shown in the illustration, and is a good example of the neatness and pleasing appearance that can be obtained in the arrangement of the grocery stock. Everything seems to have a place, and everything is in its place. The shelves are conveniently divided off as to height and width, and the space between the top of the shelf fixture and the ceiling is carefully filled in such a way as to present no haphazard arrangement.

The counter with a glass front is a form of the silent salesman, and as such has a great value both as a place in which to store stock and in which to display it. This form of counter is rather unusual in a grocery store, although dry goods stores and men's furnishing stores have for some time found it the most satisfactory kind. A good feature is the avoidance of the stacking on counters so commonly seen. Only the ends are here filled, leaving plenty of clear space on which to serve the customer. Seats are too seldom found in any kind of store, and it is very seldom a grocery store has them. Two appear in this small section, showing that the comfort of customers is well considered. A branch of an orange tree, with oranges, is an interesting novelty.

Although nothing perfectly satisfactory has been found to take the place of orange boxes for displaying the goods, such a fixture in a grocery store is greatly needed, as the rough boxes do not add to the appearance. This firm has overcome the difficulty in a small way by using a basket designed for such a service, but still the boxes are in sight. The building up of the space above the shelving with board is a matter of taste, very many preferring a plain, white surface, as more business-like, and as drawing the attention in no way from the goods themselves. In this case much of this space is covered with pictures that go with certain soaps and other articles.

A Corner in the Grocery Store of Mowat & Wallace, Victoria, B. C.

If the whole of Mowat & Wallace's store is on a par with this corner, they exercise great care in their interior arrangement. A photograph of their Christmas window, recently received, shows that the same attention is paid their windows. With a tasty interior and well-dressed windows, a merchant's success is almost assured.

NICHOLSON & BROCK, TORONTO

WALL ST. DOES NOT KNOW ALL.

A FEATURE of the situation in cotton is that a number of Wall street houses that had never before dealt in the staple and were unfamiliar with the machinery of the cotton market, which is altogether different from that of the stock market, went into it because it was the only thing in which the public appeared to be taking any speculative interest. Later they went into coffee for the same reason, knowing even less about the coffee market than they knew about cotton market. They found by experience that trading in these commodity markets is rather a dubious business unless one is prepared to tie up a lot of money. The Wall street confusion in coffee has been greater, perhaps, than that in cotton. Houses found to their great surprise that although their clients could treat coffee purely as a speculation, getting into it and out of it with the same facility as in stocks, the brokers could not, but, on the contrary, that they would be hung up with the commodity long after their clients had got out, and that the transactions tied up money in a way that was simply amazing. Cotton does, too, but the speculative interests in cotton being so much greater than that in coffee, cotton is much the easier to turn over.—New York Sun.

BISCUITS AND CONFECTIONERY

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAILERS.

A Confectionery Counter.

IN the grocery store of Michie & Co., Toronto, there is a well maintained confectionery department that receives just as much attention as any other part of the store, and has the advantage of a position just inside the door.

The glimpse of this department presented herewith gives some idea of the fittings which help to make it so important. The better class of confectionery is kept in a show case on a glass-fronted counter, thus preventing dust from reaching them and providing a place where a good display can be made. The cheaper kinds are set out in tins on the counter, making them easy of access, an important characteristic in the placing of lines that sell quickly. Candy drops and all small hard varieties are kept in fancy bottles which are tastily arranged around the department. These bottles keep the contents fresh, and occupy little space, or space that would not be of any use for anything else. The monotony of a straigt line of shelving is broken by the mirrors, which occur every ten or twelve feet. In the glass-fronted counters are displayed candle shades, fancy candy boxes and crackers.

The store is a very small one, but has the reputation and appearance of doing a very large business. Its space was valuable. The Grocer representative made it a point to enquire as to the volume of the trade that was being done in this department. The proprietor, who is a particularly shrewd and energetic young man, was enthusiastic over the success of his confectionery department. The goods were so well displayed and of such good quality that they practically sold themselves, the showcase for the chocolates and the the glass-faced tins for the biscuits acting as silent salesmen.

This is an instance of what the Grocer has been contending from time to time that a neat and tasty confectionery department will pay in any store, no matter how crowded for space it may be.

The Confectionery Department in the Grocery Store of Michie & Co., Toronto.

Small But Profitable.

THE GROCER'S young man dropped into a city grocery stand the other evening and the first thing that met his view was a handsome little showcase in which were temptingly displayed a few lines of high grade chocolates, around the base of the showcase and counter high, were arranged tins of fancy biscuits, the goods appearing through the glass fronts.

PURE GOLD TALK.

No. 5.

On the subject of Marmalade and Preserves we have the same enthusiasm that possesses us whenever we get talking on Pure Gold goods.

The Pure Gold guarantee applies to everything bearing the name Pure Gold. That guarantee is—All goods bearing the name Pure Gold are guaranteed as to attractiveness, saleability and quality. If they fail at any point, the goods can be returned, and the price paid for them will be refunded.

Not many goods the grocer sells have a "money-back" agreement. Why?

PURE GOLD MARMALADE AND PRESERVES are made solely from pure fruit and best granulated sugar. No filler of any sort—not even apple juice—is used in their making. Pure Gold Marmalade is purchased, for example by both The Grand Trunk and The Canadian Pacific Railways for use in their dining cars. This, the manufacturers think, is tribute of the highest value.

Why buy foreign made goods when equal or better quality is produced in Canada, and at less price?

We ask—Why?

GREEN FRUITS

The Outlook.

THE green fruit trade has been hit rather hard by the extreme weather and congestion of transportation. It has been unsafe to attempt to send fruit far from the centres of distribution and consequently trade has suffered accordingly. However, the demand locally has been particularly good and the fine quality of the fruit this year, oranges especially, has stimulated demand wherever it has been possible to place the goods. Pineapples are also beginning to arrive in greater volume and when the weather eventually moderates, and that must be soon now, there should be a decided impetus given to the fruit trade. The outside stocks must be pretty low by this time and numerous country orders may soon be expected.

In confirmation of this view may be quoted the New York Journal of Commerce, which in its issue of Tuesday says: Weather conditions, locally at least, were decidedly more favorable than for a week past and were promptly taken advantage of by the distributing trade to replenish badly depleted stocks. The result was an active movement, particularly in oranges, both Florida and California fruit going out freely. It was still too cold in the interior to risk shipments to any distance, particularly as the cold wave was reported to be advancing from the West. The California orange sale was the largest for the season by ten cars, the total quantity sold being 53 cars. There was an active demand for the good fruit, especially the large sizes, and better prices were realized on this, though about the same general average as recent sales was maintained by reason of the lower prices brought by the poorer stock. There were no developments in the lemon market apart from the increased demand. Prices were unchanged pending the result of the sale of the Monzibello's cargo, which is scheduled for to-day. Cocoanuts are in good demand, particularly from the confectionery trade, and with stocks well concentrated the market is firm. In the balance of the list there were no special features and no price changes.

The sugar beet industries in Ontario received $74,997 in bounties from the Provincial Government last year.

Britain's Fruit Bill.

THE orange shipments to Britain in 1903 were immense. They exceeded 6,000,000 cwts., valued at over two and a quarter millions sterling. Huge quantities of these fruits reach Glasgow each year. Spain is the largest sender, and the exports to the United Kingdom last year exceeded 500,000 cwts. Turkey and Italy come second and third respectively, although far behind Spain. An important feature of the orange trade of 1903 was the arrival of large quantities of choice Florida and Jamaica fruits. Onions are included in the list, because they are dealt with by the wholesale trade under the title of "green fruits." In 1903 the onion imports surpassed all previous records. They were 8,266,913 cwts., valued at £1,007,408. There was paid more than a million pounds sterling for onions last year. Ten years ago the imports were about half what they are to-day. The Spanish shippers send the bulk of these "green fruits." Three countries consign to British ports over a million bushels annually. They are: Spain, with 3,050,000; Holland, with 1,500,000; and Egypt, with 1,200,000.

Apricots and peaches were imported to the extent of 9,575 cwts.; cherries, 110,192; currants, 76,419; and gooseberries, 34,312 cwts. The first two show a decline compared with the arrivals of previous years, but gooseberries and currants were consigned in increased quantities. The largest imports of gooseberries arrive from Holland, and London obtains a fair share of them. A few come from Belgium, while the earliest supplies of all are the French, shipped when green as "first fruits." The strawberry arrivals were short, and below the average. Their total weight was only 32,644 cwts. They come from France and Holland. The French fruit made a poor show in the markets in 1903. Tomatoes were imported in larger quantities than ever last year. The total was 1,065,502 cwts., valued at £916,277. It was over 250,000 cwts. in excess of 1902. Ten years ago tomatoes were not considered sufficiently important to be tabulated separately. The bulk of the fruit arrives from Spain and the Canaries, both sending us about 250,000 cwts. France contributes 100,000 cwts. The Channel Islands send 135,000 cwts. The import tomato trade of Britain has again taken a new lease of life.

Strawberries to be Plentiful.

THE prospect for a liberal yield of strawberries the coming season is said to be good. Last year was notably bad, probably the worst in some localities in a long time, and many growers closed the season discouraged and decided they wouldn't undertake to grow them again. Reflection convinced them, however, that where their fields were already planted it would be folly to uproot them. Consequently acreage will be substantially the same as it was last year. In some localities it will be larger, because others will grow them for the first time.

According to estimates made by large handlers, about 12,000,000 boxes are received in New York in a year. It is impossible to estimate accurately because they are put up in different form and different sizes, but the receipts are probably not far from that figure. The loss on berries is very large, which accounts for some of the millions of boxes, and consumption during the season is also very large. Formerly it was not unusual for 75 to 100 cars a day to come to New York, but since the Californians introduced the plan of sending cars to all shipping points, New York receipts have decreased and now they rarely go over 50 cars a day. The largest receipts in any one day last season were 70 cars.

All the Southern states are producing berries now. Georgia, Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Delaware, Maryland, and many Northern states, including New York and New Jersey, both of which ship large quantities annually. Much depends upon the season regarding quality.

German Imports of Fresh Fruits.

United States Consul B. H. Warner, of Leipzig, Germany, under date of December 19, 1903, reports the following statistics on German imports of green or fresh fruits during the past four years:

Description.	1899.	1900.	1901.	1902.
Apples	$3,762,780	$1,893,670	$3,862,026	$3,155,642
Pears	805,630	815,150	1,099,560	1,158,108
Peaches plums apricots, etc.	3,179,918	963,662	845,376	1,210,468
Oranges, figs, lemons, etc.	3,056,872	3,328,430	3,299,394	3,390,786
Grapes	2,549,694	1,735,734	2 103,206	3,039,498
Total	$13,354,894	$8,738,646	$11,209,562	$11,954,502

The consul states that American apples, pears, oranges, etc., should be sold in Germany in large quantities, and that in subsequent reports in the near future he will deal with some of the reasons why they are not.

The Watermelon.

If 95 per cent. of the watermelon is actually water, says the Kansas City Star, what concentrated excellence must be crowded into that remaining five per cent.; what rare elixir must be wrought out in that fractional ingredient by the alchemy of the golden sunshine; what a marvelous laboratory, indeed, must be folded up within the compass of the watermelon, for the extraction of sweetness and ambrosia from the soil. Tender as the human heart chastened by sacred sorrow or sanctified by the power of unselfish love, is the rosy, melting core of the watermelon, incarnadined by all of the passion with which nature warms and enriches the material world.

TRADE WITH JAMAICA.

Canada's commercial agent in Jamaica writes to the department at Ottawa under date of Jan. 26, stating that within the next three or four months there is expected to be a marked revival of trade, on account of banana shipments. The effects of the hurricane of August last were severely felt. The report says that with the ratification of the United States Cuban reciprocity treaty, everything pointed to Canada being the marketing zone for British West Indies sugar, at least for the immediate future. The Dominion, however, cannot take the whole output, but most of it will go to Dominion centres. He is more firmly convinced than ever of the remunerative business that would follow closer trade relations between Canada and Jamaica. The sentiment in favor of Canadian products is strong on the island. The tourist traffic is good.

TRICK UNDER WATER.

IT looks very strange to see a man go under water with a lighted cigar in his mouth, smoke calmly at the bottom, and come to the surface with the cigar burning as nicely as if he were smoking in his easy chair, remarks an expert swimmer. Apparently he defies all natural laws, but of course he doesn't.

It is a simple trick, but it requires practice. Just as I throw myself backward to go down, I flip the cigar end for end with my tongue and upper lip, and get the lighted end in my mouth, closing my lips water tight around it. A little slippery elm juice gargled before going in prevents any accidental burning of the mouth. Going slowly down backward, I lie at full length on the bottom of the tank, and blow smoke through the cut end of the cigar. Just as I reach the surface again, another flip reverses the cigar, and there I am smoking calmly. The reversing is done so that nobody notices it.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Australia's Great Harvest.

MR. D. H. ROSS, Canada's commercial agent at Melbourne, reports to the Department of Trade and Commerce as follows :

The chief traffic manager of the Victorian railways has supplied a return, compiled from estimates furnished by the station masters throughout the State of Victoria, showing the quantity of wheat it is anticipated the railways will have to handle this season. This return shows an estimate of 25,152,192 bushels which, if realized, will exceed the best previous record of 1898-99, by over 8,329,556 bushels. Independent authorities state that the returns for Victoria will be nearer 26,500,000 bushels. It will require nearly 6,400,000 bags to hold the wheat, as there are no other facilities as yet, available for its transport. Owing to former estimates of the yield in the other states having been much lower than the actual, results are now fairly well assured of, previous advices have been greatly under-estimated. The latest official estimates for Australia are a yield of 73,000,000 bushels, which will leave about 48 to 50 million bushels of wheat available for over-sea exportation.

Elevator Company Fined.

JUDGE DESNOYERS, of Montreal, gave judgment last week in the case of the Harbor Commissioners vs. the Montreal Grain Elevating Company. The defendants were charged with neglecting to remove the wreck of an elevator which sank opposite one of the wharves in the river. His honor held that they were guilty and imposed a fine of $40 and costs.

The company alleged that the sinking of the elevator was the fault of the harbor commissioners, owing to a submerged wharf, upon which they claimed no signal was placed. The harbor commissioners, on the other hand, claimed that the fault lay entirely with the Montreal Grain Elevating Company, and they they were in no way responsible. A dispute arose as to the lifting of this elevator from the bottom of the river, where it lay a menace to navigation. The Elevator Company claimed that they had done all they could, and had failed to lift it, calling upon the harbor board to do the work. This the latter, for various reasons, refused to do, and served the company with notice that they would expect them to pay a fine of forty dollars per day for every day that their elevator obstructed the harbor. This lead to the suit, which was decided last week.

Is There a Shortage in Wheat?

AT present there is not any more good milling wheat in Canada than will be required for the Canadian market, said F. W. Thompson, vice-president and general manager of the Ogilvie Flour Mill Company, in an interview this week.

"In my opinion," continued Mr. Thompson, "independent of war conditions, prices for sound milling wheat will see much higher levels. Any exports that are now made will have to be at further advanced prices to protect the home market. The scarcity of good milling wheat must be attributed to the inferior quality of the last crop. This is shown by the inspections made at Winnipeg in January. Of the 1,939 cars of wheat inspected it was found that 938 cars were unfit for milling. Then, again, we have had to face the fact that the crop in the Canadian Northwest this season has turned out from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels less than the previous crop, and we estimate that the supply of milling wheat in Canada to-day is approximately 15,000,000 bushels less than at the same period last year. I have no doubt that similar conditions will be found to exist in the American Northwest, and as we have still eight months to go before another crop will be available the situation will become more acute daily. A further rise in prices is therefore imminent. Independent of all speculative conditions, it is evident that the legitimate conditions with regard to supply and demand warrant an advance.

"That we are trying to protect the home market may be gathered from the fact that during the last few days we have increased our price to Great Britain 2s. 6d."

Dominion Millers Meet.

At a special meeting of the Dominion Millers' Association in Toronto last week, a resolution was passed calling on the Minister of Trade and Commerce to appoint official weighers at the different elevators at all lake ports to prevent shortages in car wheat. The delay of the government in fixing the flour standards was also discussed, but no definite action was taken. It was reported that the railways would permit country millers in future to put in peas and beans with carloads of flour and charge only the carload rate. About thirty millers were present at the meeting.

Russia's Cereal Crop 1903.

According to statistics of the central statistical committee, the crop of cereals in the 72 governments and districts of European and Asiatic Russia is estimated at 2,196,907,700 poods (1,720,448,392 bushels), against 2,294,667,100 poods (1,832,590,755 bushels in 1902, as follows :

Sending Flour to Sweden.

Mr. Sontum, Canada's trade agent for Sweden and Norway, writing to the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, says that there is a remarkable increase in the importation of Canadian flour. One broker handled 30,000 sacks. Attempts have been made to bring in wheat, but there is a scarcity of milling facilities.

Cereal Notes.

The large plant of the Corn Products Company, Oswego, N. Y., was destroyed by fire last week, with loss estimated at 1 000,000.

The following notice to visitors has been posted at the office entrance of the Napoli Macaroni Co.'s factory at Toronto : "The manager regrets that owing to the rush of business, he will be unable to show visitors through the factory during the months of February, March and April."

The Best Are the Cheapest

For twenty years the National Cash Register Company has made the announcement that it could sell a better cash register for less money than any other concern in the world. We have never failed to do this in a single case.

We are the originators of cash registers and have naturally been the target of all other cash register companies. In the face of this competition we did a larger business last year than ever before. This was because our 365,000 users were well satisfied with their "Nationals."

Over two hundred concerns have failed in the cash register business because they could not furnish a cash register without infringing some of our 895 patents.

Some merchants are led to purchase low-grade cash registers by misrepresentation. Later they find they will not give satisfaction. If you are interested in a low-priced machine, don't buy till you see our agent. We guarantee to sell cheaper than anybody else.

FIVE THINGS TO REMEMBER. A "National" takes care of

1. Cash Sales. 2. Credit Sales. 3. Money Received on Account. 4. Money Paid Out. 5. Changing Money.

We employ 1,400 salesmen. If you would like further information, send in attached coupon. Our agent will then call. This puts you under no obligation whatever to buy.

POSITION OF COFFEE.

WILLETT & GRAY, in their weekly statistical report of February 11th, say :

The speculative position of coffee remains in a very unsatisfactory state. It is partly due to the continued liquidation of outside speculators and partly due to the feeling that coffee after a two-cent break should be low enough. When looking at the fact that last Summer option prices between July and September moved around 3.50c. for the spot month, it must also be considered that the market price for September delivery now is 3.50c. higher than it sold at last year, which is to be borne in mind equally as much as the fact that the market has declined 2 cents from the top.

Receipts at Rio are much larger than was expected, while at Santos the movement is about on the basis of predictions. The fact that New York market became the highest in the world, naturally attracted the merchandise, not only from Brazil, but also from Europe, a condition of affairs that becomes sensitive with the American Visible Supply at 3¼ million bags of Brazil coffee. It is favorable for the cofffee position in this country that the European markets have improved, so that they will have to take the balance of the current crop in Brazil as well as part of the stocks in the ports of Rio and Santos.

It is entirely too early to say how the market will act later on, but for the time being it is well enough to know that of our heavy supplies of 3,250,000 bags, about two and a half million (2,500,000) bags are carried by outside speculators who have no conception of what the stocks mean, or of coffee itself, or any details in connection with the business. Under such circumstances conservative coffee merchants will do well to stand aloof. After the very heavy deliveries of the first seven months of the current crop it is quite uncertain to what extent the country needs coffee or will continue buying, and this must remain the only factor of importance, moreso now than at any previous time, and large supplies are always felt most in the Spring months than at any other time.

Quotations are entirely nominal without any transactions being recorded, but possibly 7½ cents for Rio No. 7 and 8¼ cents for good selections Santos No. 4 are the proper prices to be considered just now.

February options, week ending February 11 : Highest, 6.20 to 6.30; lowest 5.10 to 5.15; closing 6.20 to 6.30, against last year closing 4.50 to 4.60. No. 7 last year 5⅞c.

MRS. DOOLEY'S LAUNDRY SOAP.

A REPRESENTATIVE of The Grocer found an example of a successful business in a visit to the Metropolitan Soap Co., Limited of Toronto, whose factory is situated on Atlantic avenue in the suburb of Parkdale. A year ago last November two young men with small financial resources but with the bountiful courage and faith of youth, joined forces and began the manufacture of soap. Their success even in the first month was beyond their expectations, and every succeeding month has seen an increase in their trade. It soon became apparent that they would have to enlarge the capacity of their plant. This meant the reorganization of their affairs and an ordinary partnership became a joint stock company with strong men as shareholders and directors, and with a paid-in capital sufficient to meet the needs of the expanding trade. At the beginning the factory had one tank with a capacity of 20,000 lbs. Soon a second tank was added with a capacity of 75,000 lbs. Since then a third tank with a capacity of 100,000 lbs. has been put in. The main business of the company has been the manufacture of textile soaps, with which they have had remarkable success. It has been stated to The Grocer's representative that his company is doing 70 per cent. of the entire soap trade of the textile manufacturers of the Dominion.

In July of last year the company began making a laundry soap, to which they have given the happy name of "Mrs. Dooley's Laundry Soap." This soap is made after the best formula known, and includes borax as a distinctive feature. The makers have determined to go after the laundry soap trade of Canada, and their faith in the goods they make and the methods they plan to employ should lead to large business.

The company has a capital of $40,000.

Its board of directors are Jas. Watt, Sr., long associated with the Toronto Globe; Peter Ryan, and F. M. Purdy, prominent Toronto business men; F. T. Weir and Jas. Watt, Jr. Mr. Weir is manager of the company and Jas. Watt, Jr., secretary-treasurer.

WASHINGTON SALMON PACK.

ACCORDING to the report of the Washington State Fish Commissioner, which has just been filed, the total output of the fishing industry of that state last year fell far below that of 1902. The principal falling off was in the Puget Sound district, there having been a poor season. On the Columbia River, however, the output shows a material increase over the previous year. The following is a comparative statement for the two years of the value of the output:

	1903.	1902.
Puget Sound	$3,945,579 50	$5,528,595
Columbia River	1,104,495 00	951,932
Willapa Harbor	205,225 00	286,343
Grays Harbor	81,560 00	165,000
Total	$5,336,859 50	$6,931,870

The salmon pack for the Puget Sound district aggregated 478,481 cases, as against 600,659 cases of the previous year. The salmon pack on the Columbia River was 95,440 cases, a decrease of about 1,000 cases from the preceding year. The Puget Sound output of crabs, herring and clams amounted to 22,000 cases. The Puget Sound district shipped and consumed 41,948,800 lbs. of fresh, salt and smoked fish, and the Columbia River district 6,283,000 lbs.

COTTON TO REPLACE SUGAR.

A number of the leading cottonseed oil mill companies have instituted a movement to induce Louisiana sugar planters to transform their cane fields into cotton plantations next season, says an American exchange. High-priced cotton and low-priced sugar is the argument. The companies have offered to erect a number of ginneries in Louisiana and y highest prices for cotton and seed or gin at market rates. Acreage data is being compiled and a big boom is expected in Louisiana cotton growing. The companies identified with the movement are the Southern Cotton Oil Company, Standard Cotton Seed Oil Company, the Union Oil Company, Columbia Cotton Oil Refining and Manufacturing Company, New Orleans Cotton Seed Oil and Manufacturing Company and Delta Delinting and Refining Company.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

The Pleasures of Smoking.

PROBABLY no deity of ancient or modern times has been the object of such devoted and consistent worship as the Goddess Nicotine. Of all who bow before her shrine, the wanderers—humble or otherwise—in the fields of literature have especially delighted to do her honor. Kingsley pays her an eloquent tribute; Jerome K. Jerome ferverently dedicates one of his books to his dearly loved pipe; J. M. Barrie's homage to the delightful goddess has won universal admiration, though he scarcely deserves it, seeing how basely he deserted her. But none of these go into the innermost heart of the matter; they have not analyzed and examined the motives which impel mankind almost universally to recognize the delights of her service. Nowadays the overwhelming majority of the male population, and a no longer insignificant proportion of the gentler sex, admit her claims, but few could accurately state wherein the delights of nicotine worship lie, says the Cigar and Tobacco World.

Why does such a large proportion of the human race smoke? To what senses does the fragrant herb appeal? The habitual smoker will admit that four of his five senses share in the pleasure.

To begin with there is the sense of taste, and to the connoisseur it contributes most to his delight. As he smokes his favorite brand, whether it be of tobacco, cigar or cigarette, he luxuriously yields himself to the full enjoyment of every draw. And how particular he is about always getting his special brand! Nothing else will do—the flavor of no other kind is equal to that of his own.

With a very large body of smokers the chief enjoyment of smoking lies in the sense of smell. Of course, all sane people in full possession of their senses like the scent of a good cigar. Cigarettes, too, appeal very largely to the olfactory nerve. If anyone doubt the part played by the nose, let him try a smoke when he has a bad cold in the head and can smell nothing, and he will probably soon admit that his pipe was not so satisfactory as usual.

Strange as it may seem to some, the sight takes its share of the general enjoyment. If the smoker can not see the clouds issuing from his mouth and the wreaths curling gently upward from his pipe his pleasure is incomplete. Most smokers find that smoking in the dark—I mean in absolute darkness—is not worth doing. To prove this just light your pipe, then lean back in your chair, shut your eyes and continue smoking. You will give it up, or your pipe will go out before many minutes are over.

Lastly, the touch adds its quota to the gratification. This is due to habit. If the inveterate smoker can feel something between his lips, even a straw or stem of grass, he will find it better than nothing. Plenty of men will sit contentedly working or reading with an empty pipe stuck in their mouths. Why is this? Simply because through force of habit they feel they must have something there. These, however, are not all the delights experienced by the offerers of incense to the sensuous goddess; rather are they the grosser ones.

Who can adequately describe the soothing effect of tobacco on the nerves, and the feeling of peacefulness and contentment that it engenders? My friend, if your temper has been ruffled, go light your pipe, and in solitude give yourself up completely to its enjoyment. Concentrate your whole thoughts on the enjoyment of that pipe and in a few moments your anger will subside—your feelings recover their customary evenness. It's an excellent prescription.

And what an aid, too, is a good cigar to meditation? Would you wander in thought through the infinity of the universe, would you mentally explore the world of science, would you attain the dizzy heights of Parnassus, go, make your sacrifice to the Goddess Nicotine!

Mineral Water on Tobacco.

A LONDON tobacco manufacturer has found, what he believes, to be a cure for the deterioration in aroma, which experts say that tobacco suffers in the course of a sea voyage, says a London cablegram to the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

At a private demonstration the discoverer told the story of his find. He had long been testing the properties of certain waters of mineral springs, which he used to moisten the leaf tobacco before cutting. This is a necessary process to prevent the dry leaf crumbling into dust.

While recently taking the waters at Marlock, he was struck by a revivifying influence of the well known petrifying spring which turns fruit into stone after a prolonged immersion. He resolved to try it on tobacco in conjunction with another mineral water famous for the amount of ozone it contains. The treated leaf proved so agreeably flavored that he has decided to apply the process to every cigarette that he makes.

Several days ago a parcel of Virginia leaf was divided in half, and one portion was sprayed with the mineral waters and the rest with ordinary water after the old method. The leaf was cut and made into cigarettes. When smoked there was a marked difference. The treated cigarettes had a softer and peculiarly fresher flavor, which the demonstrator attributed to the ozone. This treatment improves Turkish tobacco as well as Virginia. The discoverer does not believe that the treatment alters the flavor of the tobacco, but that it restores the original aroma lost during the sea voyage to England.

Some Deadly Smokes.

IT is a curious fact that while cigarettes made of the leaves of the coffee trees are declared to produce an unconquerable aversion for tobacco, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly, yet the smoking of the coffee bean is extremely harmful. It produces a peculiar kind of sore throat, which may actually prove dangerous if the practice of coffee smoking is persisted in.

Tobacco is without doubt the most wholesome of vegetable substances used for smoking, but it is by no means the only one so employed.

One of the chief of these substitutes is Indian hemp, or "bhang," the use of which has increased of late years in the East even more rapidly than that of opium.

The leaf is prepared by drying and powdering, and is then mixed with ordinary tobacco and smoked in a common tobacco pipe. Or sometimes it is made into balls with tragacanth gum, and smoked like opium in a very small pipe.

Indian hemp is literally a tobacco of death, for it has been used from time immemorial to excite the passions of fanatical murderers. The Indian sepoys were made mad with bhang before taking part in the awful scenes of the Indian mutiny.

Another name for bhang is "hasheesh," whence comes the word "assassin." A third name for Indian hemp is ganjah, which is the term that Indian coolies use.

A petition has recently been circulated in Jamica that the government will forbid the sale of ganjah to the East Indian coolies who work on the banana and sugar plantations in that island. Habitual users of the drug become maniacs with homicidal tendencies, and are given to running "amok" and killing all in their path.

The physical effects of the smoking of Indian hemp are varied and terrible. Sometimes the smoker giggles insanely, at other times he goes balancing along first on one foot and then the other, rubbing his hands and talking to himself. His appetite becomes furious, and he will eat even clay and grass.

Catalepsy is a frequent result of indulgence in this horrible drug; in other cases dropsy supervenes, and the inevitable end is death.

THE OFFICE

DEVOTED TO THE OFFICE STAFFS OF BUSINESS ESTABLISHMENTS

A SIMPLE METHOD OF BOOKKEEPING FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

By C. T. Inman, Denver, Colo.

THE books to be used are as follows: Ledger and two common manila two-column sales books (journal ruling). On the first page of the ledger enter a statement of assets and liabilities containing at least the following data:

Assets.	Liabilities.
Cash.	Accounts Payable.
Stock (Mdse.).	(Other Indebtedness).
Accounts Receivable.
Other Assets.

The difference between the assets and liabilities will be the dealer's net worth.

Head the last eight pages in the ledger as follows:

1. Goods sold for cash.
2. Goods sold on credit.
3. Goods bought on credit.
4. Goods bought for cash.
5. Cash received on account.
6. Cash paid on account.
7. Expense.
8. Goods returned from customers.

Take one of the sales books, head columns as in form (A).

As credit sales are made, enter customer's name and items bought, but carry only the total of the purchase into the first column. Any goods returned by the customer should be entered as above, except that the total would be entered in the second column. As the page fills up, foot each column separately and carry to corresponding column on next page until the end of the month, when the total of the first column is entered on the page in the ledger marked "Goods sold on credit," and the footing of the second column is entered on the page headed "Goods returned by customers."

If duplicate sales tickets are used, simply enter the customer's name, date and amount of sale or return in its proper column and file the sales ticket in shape for convenient reference. Now, at such time in the day as is most convenient the sales are entered in the ledger as charges to the customer's account and the returns as credits, and checked in the sales book to show that they have been so entered.

Now turn to the last page of the sales book and head columns as in form (B).

As goods are received from the wholesaler the invoice is, of course, checked for quantities, prices and extensions. Any returns or deductions are noted on invoice and deducted from its footing. Now, on this last page enter the name of the house the goods were bought from, the date of the invoice, and the amount after making all deductions. Treat all invoices in this manner until the page is full, then carry footing over to the preceding page, and so on to end of month, when footing is carried to ledger page marked "Goods purchased on credit." After so entering the invoice, file alphabetically.

No ledger account is necessary with the people of whom the retailer buys goods, as they have to keep his account in shape for convenient reference and will send him statements periodically, at which time he should check with invoices on his file and notify them at once of any difference. If retailer discounts his bill, the discount should be taken from invoice when it is checked up and net amount of invoice entered.

Freight is considered as expense and so entered through cash book.

For the cash transaction the retailer will use his other manila sales book.

Skip the first page and commence work on the second. On the right-hand page rule an extra column beside the two already there, as in form (C). On the left-hand page mark first column "Cash on account," and second "Cash sales." As customers pay on account, their names are entered and the amount placed in the first column from which it is placed to the credit of the customer's account in the ledger. As cash sales are made, the amounts are placed in the second column.

On the right-hand page head the extra column "Cash paid on account," the next "Goods bought for cash," and the last "Expense." As money is paid out on account, or in settlement in full, enter amount in first column opposite the name of person to whom paid. All cash purchases are entered in second column, and all cash paid for running expenses, freight, rent, clerk hire, etc., placed in the third column.

As soon as either page is full, foot each column separately and carry to proper column on next corresponding page, always remembering that "Cash receipts" are on the left-hand page and "Cash disbursements" are on the right. At the end of the month, carry the footing of each column to its proper page in the ledger. The difference at any time between the footing of the left and right side of the cash book is the amount of cash there should be on hand. The bank account is considered as so much cash. As checks are drawn, the dealer considers them exactly as he does the money he pays out, and makes his entries accordingly. When making his deposits, he should consider that he is taking money out of one pocket (the cash drawer) and placing it in another (the bank), hence no book entry is necessary; his check stubs show at any time his balance in bank.

Now, if the dealer's cash balances, the cash book entries are correct; if it does not, the difference must be located and adjusted. If the dealer so wishes, he can prove his customers' accounts in the following manner:

Add to "Accounts receivable," as shown in statement of assets and liabilities, the footing of ledger pages marked "Credit sales," and deduct the footing of ledger pages marked "Goods returned from customers" and "Cash received on account." If his work is correctly done, the footings of each amount due from his customers, as shown by their ledger accounts, will equal this amount exactly.

The comparison shown by the eight pages in the ledger will be of a highly interesting and instructive nature to the dealer, and will aid greatly in determining his future operations and help in a great measure to stop leakages, by keeping him thoroughly conversant with the principal features of his business.

DEALING WITH DISHONEST DEBTORS.

By J. E. W.

WHAT to do with dishonest debtors has always been a perplexing question. The law is not favorable to incarceration for the offence and, on the whole, it is no doubt well that this is so. Otherwise, there might be abuses of the privilege that would quickly unbalance its salutary results. There are, however, from time to time, debtors whose transactions reveal such systematic and premeditated dishonesty, that some more adequate punishment seems absolutely necessary as a public safeguard; and, that creditors are not armed with some such weapon to meet—or rather prevent—this class of offenders, is at times exasperating.

Some Instances.

For instance, a meeting of creditors is called. The usual vague explanations follow, with fictitious accounts of losses, etc. Unheard of relatives and sundry persons make their appearance as creditors, and finally, on calls for an "offer," the debtor produces his wife or brother or sundry other person who is "willing" for disinterested reasons, to buy the stock and outfit if the creditors will accept, say 25c. on the dollar. This is the ordinary "hold up," and it is quite complete. The offer is accepted because it is the only thing in sight.

Prompted by Shrewd Lawyers.

This farce has invariably for prompter a shrewd if briefless lawyer, and, so far, there seems to have been invented no iniquity for the fathering of which his services are not available. Not that we find fault or rail against the profession in particular. Indeed, we should all of us, no doubt, find the laws rather irksome and tedious if we had no one to help us break them.

The injury the dishonest tradesman inflicts is not confined to the creditor he thus defrauds. In fact, his is probably the least. One example. By systematically cutting prices, say down to a point that shuts out his honest neighbors, he demoralizes trade conditions at every point within the sphere of his influence. Indeed, if he obtained his goods by out and out burglary to put on the market, the conditions would be the same for the honest competitor, who has to pay for his goods and sell them at a profit. What's to be done?

Getting Lukewarm.

Sometimes it looks as if we were growing amiable towards corrupt practices in every direction. Common old-fashioned honesty is too dull for our new-fashioned wits and we are apt to wink at the "clever" men who "do" one another, if only it be within the law and wear a look of respectability—for this is the criterion.

But we are not going too deeply into the psychology of the matter nor yet to usurp the province of the pulpit. We are interested just now in the business aspect of the matter purely, and feel that something ought to be done along these lines for the protection of the honest traders scattered all in this broad country.

Lists of Dishonest Debtors.

Associations exist now in practically all classes of trade to maintain parity of prices and in other ways promote equilibrium, and prevent trade fraticide. Could these associations post the names of dishonest debtors in the same way that names are listed by them for other purposes and privileges? The decision of the creditors meeting on the point might be taken to determine whether or not the debtor has placed himself in this category. Mercantile reports of course, confine themselves to the fact, that a compromise was effected, but honest men, also are sometimes unfortunate and obliged to compromise. The trade report dare not classify if it could. A trade journal, too, might be a convenient plan, but would at once give the debtor the advantage of the "legal aspect" in the libel proceedings that would inevitably follow. The judgment of a creditor's meeting would not avail in law, unfortunately, nor protect a journal without special legislative enactment. The association, therefore, seems to have the best appliance, at present, within its own reach.

But (and here the whole question is reopened), we are reckoning without the cupidity of the merchant. The dishonest debtor may be posted and blacklisted, but is the merchant born who can refuse good money, even if dishonestly made. And supplies will therefore continue in proportion to risk only.

There is the loss of the past to overtake and the profit on present transactions both to tempt. He knows that if he refused, the merchant across the street would not, and there we have it. So that until the merchant, himself, in the interest of the honest tradesman, put his foot down firmly, the question will probably remain there, or be relegated to that other, last melancholy old-fashioned day of reckoning when honesty will not be at a disadvantage.

Leading Canadian Accountants and Auditors

This list is for the purpose of placing retailers, manufacturers' jobbers and other readers in touch with reliable and competent accountants and auditors whose services are so frequently required for such purposes as opening books, adjusting and auditing accounts, arranging partnerships or organizing joint stock companies, devising special office systems, making collections and investigations, handling estates, making valuations, etc.

That THE CANADIAN GROCER is a most valuable advertising medium for those who seek the trade of the grocers and general storekeepers of Canada is as plain as day—yet some folks can't see it.

Like the man who was looking all over the house for his glasses when they were on his forehead, there be some who are looking for more business among grocers yet can't see that the easiest and cheapest way to get it is through advertising in THE GROCER.

And as long as they won't listen to nor see the reasonableness of our arguments in favor of their advertising in THE GROCER, just so long are they going to be denied the business that GROCER subscribers are continually sending to GROCER advertisers.

Economic Conditions in Russia

By George Kennan.

AT first glance, the financial position of Russia would seem to be fairly strong. Her public debt—a little more than $3,300,000,000—is large, but her credit abroad continues to be good; her bonds recommend themselves to prudent and conservative investors—the New York Life Insurance Company, for example, holds $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 worth of her guaranteed railway securities—she has recently refunded $1,400,000,000 of her 5 and 6 per cent. interest bearing debt at 3 1-2 and 4 per cent., with an increase of only $30,000,000 in the principal; and her reserve of gold now amounts to something like $400,000,000, with an additional sum of $340,000,000 in circulation. This, on its face, would seem to be an extremely good showing; but it must not be forgotten that the stability of national finances depends, ultimately, upon the prosperity and earning capacity of the people who compose the nation; and that a government which has despotic power may, for a long term of years, make a good showing to its creditors while at the same time it is impoverishing its people and exhausting the source from which it draws its supplies.

Seventeen years ago, Mr. E. I. Utin, one of the most distinguished lawyers of the St. Petersburg bar, a close observer and a man of wide information, said, in a discussion of this subject: "A clever finance minister may, for a long time, make ends meet by devising new methods of taxation, by raising excise and customs duties, or even by juggling with figures; but there is no hope for the finances of a country like ours, where the taxpaying power of the population as a whole is steadily decreasing."

Statistics compiled by the zemstvos of 49 provinces of European Russia in 1891 showed that 891,000 peasant families, representing a population of perhaps 7,000,000, had only nine acres of land per family; and that 2,219,444 peasant households representing a population of about 18,000,000, had only 21 acres each, although hundreds of thousands of such households consisted of from eight to 25 members. A family of, say, 12 persons might gain a subsistence from a farm of 21 acres—or even from nine acres—if the land were all arable and fertile; but the Russian peasant allotments include land of all sorts—pasture, woodland, desert and swamp—and even the part that is arable has become so impoverished from lack of fertilization, that it often yields less than half of a normal crop. In European Russia, as a whole, the average yield of grain is only 39 poods (1,404 pounds) to the decetine (2.7 acres); while in Italy it is 55 poods; in Austria, 68; in Germany, 74; in France, 75; in the United States, 81; and in England, 122. The average productiveness of Russian peasant land-allotments, therefore, is only half that of American farms, and, if other conditions were equal, twice as much of it would be needed to support the average family.

But this is not the worst feature of the situation as regards land. Statistics show that the quantity of land owned by Russian peasant proprietors, per capita, and the gross per capita product of that land, are both decreasing, and have been decreasing steadily for many years. A commission appointed by the Minister of Finance in 1899 to ascertain if possible, the reasons for the decline in the economic condition of the peasant farmers of European Russia generally, and of the "black-soil provinces" in particular, reported that in the 50 provinces of European Russia the per capita amount of wheat and rye harvested in the years 1891-1896, as compared with the quantity produced in the years 1861-1865, showed a decrease of 35 per cent. in the "black-soil provinces" where the economic distress was greatest, the decrease was 44 per cent., or nearly one-half.

This marked decline of 35 to 44 per cent. in the per capita production of Russia's two great staples—wheat and rye—was due to a variety of causes, one of the most important of which was a large increase in the population, without any corresponding increase in the available area of land. Between 1876 and 1896 the quantity of arable land per capita decreased in European Russia as a whole 16 per cent.; in the "black-soil provinces," 20 per cent.; and in the southern and southwestern provinces, 24 to 26 per cent. In many parts of the country the pressure of the increased population on the land was so severe as to reduce hundreds of thousands of families to a condition of hopeless poverty. In the Province of Ufa, for example, there were 20,000 families that had only 5.7 acres each, including land of all kinds. In the district of Shadrinsk, Province of Perm, there were 24,000 peasant families that had neither horses nor agricultural implements, nor food supply nor seeds; and these families constituted 38 per cent. of the whole population of the district. In the Province of Samara there were 405,000 persons who had to get their subsistence from less than three acres of land per capita, and 25 per cent. of all the peasant farmers in the province had no hay fields at all.

In the Province of Riazan 32,000 peasant proprietors out of 80,000 had no horse, and 21,000 out of 80,000 had neither horse nor cow.

Between 1860 and 1871 the number of horses in the "black-soil provinces" decreased 15 per cent.; in 1889 the decrease amounted to 30 per cent.; and in 1895 it reached 48 per cent.

The economic condition of the average Russian peasant in the central provinces, where the distress is greatest, may be shown in another way, by comparing his earnings and expenses. The statistical committee of the Province of Voronezh has made a careful and detailed investigation of the annual household budgets of 67 peasant families in that province, selected in such a manner as to be fairly representative of the whole agricultural population. It appears from the committee's report that the average peasant farmer's family consists of eight persons. Its annual gross revenue, from all sources, amounts to $212.20. Of this sum $105.08 is in money, and $107.12 in farm produce at its cash value. Of the cash receipts, $48.80, or nearly one-half, goes to pay taxes and rent for additional land, leaving $56.28 in cash for clothing, tea, sugar, salt, kerosene, soap, agricultural implements, household furniture, etc., for a family of eight persons during a period of one year. The committee finds that such a family spends annually $8.84 for clothing; $1.96 for tea and sugar; $1.64 for household furniture; $1.20 for salt; 88 cents for kerosene; 39 cents for soap, and 4 cents for "articles of personal comfort." It is hardly necessary to comment upon the economic condition of a rural population in which the average family pays $48.80 in taxes and rent, and is then able to spend only $8.84 a year for clothing, 88 cents for lights, 39 cents for soap, and 4 cents for "articles of personal comfort."

The increasing exports of grain from Russia in recent years have been taken as an indication that the agricultural population of the Empire is becoming more and more prosperous and is raising a larger and larger annual surplus of food products, but such is by no means the case. Under pressure of desperate necessity, the Russian peasants are selling breadstuffs that they ought to consume, and are increasing their exports at the expense of their health. This was clearly shown by Mr. Sharapof at a meeting of the Society for the Encouragement of Trade and Industry in St. Petersburg; again by Mr. Marres in a report to the statistical section of the Moscow Juridical Society; and a third time by Professor Isaief in a report to the Russian Free Economic Society of St. Petersburg. Mr. Marres declared that Russia exported 17 per cent. of her grain product, while the United States exported only 8 per cent.; that the Russian peasant consumed only half the quantity of bread that he ought to eat; and that in 20 provinces of European Russia the population was underfed. Professor Isaief showed that the amount of food eaten by the peasants of European Russia generally was 20 per cent. less than the smallest quantity that the rules of hygiene prescribe The Russian peasants sell a disproportionate quantity of their grain product for export, not because they have a surplus—not because they do not need it for themselves and for their families—but because they must get money with which to pay their taxes.

If we test the economic condition of the Russian peasant by his taxpaying power, we are brought by another route to the same result. In the Province of Voronezh, for example—the same province in which one-third of the peasants had neither horse nor cow—the unpaid arrears of taxes were $15,566,000, while in Samara, including the land-redemption tax, they amounted to $28,801,000. Between 1871 and 1875 the arrears of taxes in the "black-soil provinces" never exceeded ten per cent. of the annual assessment. In 1896 they amounted to 42 per cent., and in 1900 to 177 per cent.

The Comptroller of State, in his report to the Czar for 1902, called particular attention to the fact that the arrears of land-redemption taxes in European Russia as a whole had increased from $47,000,000 in 1897 to $61,000,000 in 1902, and that in many provinces the peasants had practically ceased to pay these taxes. In the Province of Simbirsk the arrears were 282 per cent. of the annual assessment; in Samara, 403 per cent.; in Kazan, 562 per cent.; in Orenburg, 583 per cent., and in Ufa 613 per cent. These figures show, the Comptroller says, "how far beyond the strength of the peasants this burden is."

One would naturally suppose that when a prudent and far-sighted government discovered that is people were becoming impoverished, it would remove, if possible, the cause of the impoverishment, and lighten the burden of taxation by restricting expenditures. Russia has done neither of these things. The agencies that were hampering and crippling the productive activity of her agricultural classes ten years ago are still at work, and her annual budget has increased meanwhile from $520,000,000 to $1,036,000,000. But some of her statesmen have taken alarm at last. At a general meeting of the Council of State, on the 12th of January, 1903, Mr. de Witte, the late Minitser of Finance, informed the members of that Council that "the imposition of direct and indirect taxes upon the population has reached the last possible limit. To lay any further burden upon the taxpaying power will not only be fruitless of results, but can hardly be regarded as permissible in the present economic condition of the country. The aim of an enlightened financial policy now should be to seek means of decreasing, gradually, the burden of taxation."

After hearing and discussing the facts presented by the Minister of Finance, the Council of State resolved: (1) To ask his Imperial Majesty's permission to instruct the ministers and heads of departments to take most energetic measures to prevent further increase of expenditures; and (2) to direct the Minister of the Interior, in conjunction with the Ministers of War and Communications and the Comptroller of State, to investigate the reasons for the costliness of the Government's railway operations, and to report their conclusions to the Council at the earliest possible moment.

From the facts above set forth it clearly appears that the economic condition of the Russian people is extremely unsatisfactory; that they have been taxed to "the last possible limit;" that the Minister of Finance narrowly escaped a deficit in 1903; and that the Council of State finds it necessary to warn all ministers and heads of departments that they must take "most energetic measures to prevent further increase of expenditures." Can a government that is in such a financial condition as this carry on a long war in the Far East without imminent risk of imperiling its credit abroad and its prestige and security at home?—The Outlook.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

LONDON PROVISION TRADE 1903.

THE London, England, Grocery regards the year 1903 as a disappointing one in the provision trade. In its last issue it summarizes the prevailing conditions as follows:

Bacon—The year commenced in London with a slow demand, and prices for bacon gradually declined until, in February, when they stood at the lowest point. The large proportion of stout meats, especially of Canadian, was mainly responsible for the decline, but at the lowest rates a better demand was evidenced.

Values steadily improved during the next few months, helped by the demand from the north of England, where the short supply of American meats enabled the surplus stock of Canadian and Danish descriptions to be cleared out at more satisfactory prices than would have otherwise been the case.

In August the highest prices of the year prevailed, leanest Irish and Danish touching 68s., and Canadian 64s., against about 52s. for all selections in February.

The last quarter of the year, however, was a disappointing one, trade all round being very dull, and prices gradually fell away and closed at near the lowest, leanest Irish and Danish being obtainable at 52s. and Canadian 50s.

Supplies on balance were larger than in 1902, the decreased shipments from America being more than counterbalanced by the heavier arrivals of Canadian and Danish. Lard has experienced a declining market throughout the year.

Supplies from the United States were on a more liberal scale, and with consumers displaying a considerable hesitation in their dealings, substantial declines were accepted to induce business. Prices, after opening at about 55s. for pails, fell with temporary reactions down to 35s. Towards the close of the year, however, the extremely low level of values attracted more attention and a better demand prevailed, final rates being about 2s. above the lowest.

Hams—Although supplies, especially from the United States, were on a less liberal scale, trade has ruled very slow almost throughout the year, and prices all round have been adversely affected. At the end of the year, however, a better demand was noticeable, especially for light averages, and with a scarcity of these weights, good prices were made. The heavier descriptions although participating to a minor degree in the improvement, remained comparatively cheap.

Butter—Commenced the year under unfavorable circumstances, supply, in spite of the failure of the Australian season, owing to the drought, being swelled by heavier arrivals of New Zealand produce and a large stock in cold storage. Values under these circumstances were naturally weak, and with speculative holders forcing the stuff on the market, a substantial decline was produced. The warm and wet weather also operated against any advance, while the larger English make checkend the demand for imported stuff to some extent. During the Summer months trade was without special feature, but towards the end of the year, the new season's make of colonial butters coming forward freely, gave an easier tendency to the market, and closing prices were well below those of 1902.

Cheese—The market for Canadian has undergone extreme fluctuation during the past year, but prices, after being forced up to a very high level, have resumed a more satisfactory basis. Canadian opened at the full prices of 1902, and on small stocks and restricted arrivals of New Zealand produce steadily advanced until in March up to 71s. was paid. Later, however, as the new season's make came forward, values fell rapidly, the price in July being 47s. to 49s., but a better demand at the lower prices soon led to a reaction, which was helped by the strong tone of the Montreal market, and prices went up to 57s. in September. Moderate fluctuations then occurred, but, with the demand slackening off, values eased slightly, and closed at 52s. to 53s. English makes were generally good and plentiful, and met with a steady healthy trade throughout.

Food For Soldiers.

PACKERS know from experience how every nation of consequence feeds its soldiers, says the Butchers' Advocate. They began to learn it when France and Germany were at war and the packing industry was very young. At different times since they have filled orders for other countries, and learned what the people of each country want. The Russian Government does not worry about the quality of meat, but wants plenty of it. It buys meat that is made from range cattle. It is cheaper beef than the United States army of these days would use. The English are getting particular about their meat, too, and want a better grade than the Russians or French. Years ago the United States bought such beef. The soldiers of the Civil War would have been glad to know that they could have as good for every meal, but the standard required by the United States has been gradually raised, and England is the nearest nation behind the American in the improvement of the food furnished its soldiers. While a few millon pounds of beef does not make a very big hole in the supply at the various big packing houses there is reason for believing that the war between Russia and Japan may send the price of cattle up to where it was eighteen months ago. Japan bought beef during its war with China and will doubtless buy again.

Russia has made a good start with its orders and will probably make more and larger orders. That will certainly take away the surplus beef and the farmer of the West will find the packer more than ready to buy his steer and pay a fair price for it if the demand shall get above the supply that can be reasonably expected at present prices.

Provisions—The disruption of transportation facilities has been felt in the receipts of dressed hogs which are consequently rather higher in price. This is reflected in the price of cured meats although the same cause mentioned above has very seriously contracted trade. Locally, however, where trade can be executed at all the outlook is more encouraging. Lard, which has been for some time on a low basis, has advanced another 1-4 cent since last week. Barrelled meats are unchanged. We quote:

Butter—Receipts have not been large this week either of creamery or of first-class dairy, any of the latter was quickly disposed of. Much of the dairy received is of under quality. Demand about clears out receipts and dealers are wary expecting that so soon as the lines of communication are again opened up that receipts of butter will be very materially increased. There is, however, an immediate tendency to hold prices firm under present conditions. We quote:

Provisions—Both pure and compound lards are quoted higher this week, and the market is firm at the advance. Jobbers are now quoting pure lard at $1.72 1-2 in pails, and Boar's Head brand at 7 3-8c., tierce basis. American short cut clear pork is also quoted higher, by 50c., in small lots, wholesale grocery houses selling at $20 to $22 per barrel. Smoked meats are firm, especially hams, for which 1-2 to 1c. advance is asked in small lots. The market for dressed hogs is quiet at $6.15 to $6.50 per 100 lbs. in carlots. We quote:

Butter—The situation on the butter market is very little changed from last week, and the same prices may be quoted. Since the commencement of Lent there has been a better demand, as is usual at this season, but apart from local business there is not much doing. Sales of finest Winter made creamery are reported at 20c., and of some choice Fall goods at 21c. We quote as follows:

Summer goods	0 19	0 19½

Cheese—Local stocks have been much reduced during the past month or so, and several large shipments have gone forward. Buying in the Old Country is, however, about where it was last week, and holders here are still firm in their views. Indeed some exporters here are not offering at all, and have withdrawn their goods from the market. The goods are in strong hands here, and with the exception of a few lots held by one or two small, weak holders, there have been almost no sales for English account. Some seconds and medium goods were sold at about 9 1-2c., but the market price for good stock is still 10 1-2c. for October cheese, and 11c. for September make. Most of the September goods are held here, and cables from London state that the bulk of the cheese there is late October and November make, most of the holders of Canadian cheese not offering September at all. Considering that it will be about three months and a half before grass goods can be sent to the Old Country, buyers here feel not a little confidence in their ability to maintain prices on present stocks.

St. John.

Provisions—In these lines firm prices continue to rule with a steady upward tendency, particularly in barreled pork. Sales are not large. While pure lard is rather higher, the price is still low. Refined lard has been advanced and higher prices expected. In hams and rolls sales are light. Prices, however, have been held quite firm. In fresh meats there is little change. Pork is rather higher. Several cars of Western stock have been received. Beef, both Western and domestic, is quite plentiful. Lamb is firmer and supply quite light. Mutton brings a fair price for best stock. Some nice veal is offered. We quote:

Mess pork, per bbl	$17 00	$19 00

VISITOR FROM JAPAN.

A VISITOR to Montreal this week is Mr. R. S. Kitajima, manager of the Fuji Co., Yokohama, Japan. Mr. Kitajima who was seen by a representative of The Grocer, at the offices of Shaw T. Nishimura of the Japan Central Tea Traders Association, is paying his annual visit to the markets of Canada and the United States.

The business controlled by Mr. Kitajima's company, is a very large one. They have tea firing establishments at Fuji Goshi Kaisha; Horinouchi, Enshu, Motohamacho, Yokohama. The head offices are at Fuji Goshi Kaisha. The American branch is at 12 Front street, San Francisco. The company are very large growers and exporters of Japans, and their Canadian business is done through Mr. Nishimura.

Asked as to the prospects of teas this year, Mr. Kitajima expressed the opinion that prices will be as high, if not somewhat higher than last season, quality, however, will be very fine. There was no doubt that there would be a scarcity of labor in the tea industry of Japan, owing to all able-bodied young men flocking to the army.

Mr. Kitajima is very optimistic as to the successful outcome of the war at present going on, and like every Japanese, is thoroughly convinced of the justice of Japan's cause, and loyal to the same. Mr. Kitajima leaves Montreal, visiting Buffalo, New York, Cleveland, St. Louis, and sailing from San Francisco in about a month.

LETTERS PATENT, ETC.

National Cash Register.

Letters patent have been issued under the Ontario Companies Act authorizing the National Cash Register Company, a corporation incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, to buy, sell and deal in cash registers in Ontario, provided that in so doing the company shall not use in Ontario any larger amount of its capital than the sum of $40,000, unless authorized by supplementary letters patent. Frank Eben Mutton, sales agent, Toronto, is to be the attorney of the company.

Increased Capital.

Supplementary letters patent have been issued under the Ontario Companies Act confirming a by-law of the Carter-Crume Company, providing for the increase of the capital stock of the company from the sum of $1,975,000 to the sum of $2,050,000 by the issuance of 750 shares new cumulative preference stock of $100 each.

Osgoode Dairy, Limited.

Osgoode Dairy, Limited, with a capital stock of $40,000 divided into 400 shares of $100 each, has been granted a charter empowering it to carry on a dairy business in all its branches, to dispose of the whole undertaking for cash or for shares of another company having similar objects, or to make purchases and pay for same with the capital stock of the company. The provisional directors of the company are Andrew Graham and Francis John Ferguson, milk dealers, George Reginald Geary, solicitor, and the other members of the company Fitzgerald Douglas Byers and Allan Angus Magee, students, all of the city of Toronto.

T. Boudreau, general merchant, St. Francois De Sales, has assigned; V. E. Paradis is provisional guardian; meeting to appoint a curator advertised for 25th inst.

AN INTERESTING MONTREALER.

A GLIMPSE of a strong character who survived 50 years of active commercial life in Montreal, may be found in the life of the late Thomas Lilley. In the vernacular, one is apt to style such a man "an old-timer." The word has a varied significance. Indeed in the midst of the eager babel of operators in the market to-day, when the clink of the coin on the counter is the chief sound that greets the ear of the interested party, it is a pleasure to step aside and refer to the man who made money, who lived a family life, who cultivated a fad as a musician, yet in a simple manner avoided the sordid walks that sap the well-springs of the heart.

Thos. Lilley was a rugged character, he was a teamster, called a cartage agent to-day, yet had he chosen any other walk of life, he would have been just as particular, just as correct, and just as attentive, and his efforts would no doubt have brought their reward. Thos. Lilley was a son of John Lilley who founded a cartage business now known as the Lilley & Cameron Cartage Co., so that the present partner of the business is a grandson of its founder. When Thos. Lilley died the other day, the procession of sorrowing citizens was the best testimony to his honored life, but this is quite irrelevant to the remarkable life which he lead. Actions count. For 50 years he earned the reputation of being a man whose word was as good as his bond.

A retrospective glance must be taken of 50 years ago when he drove carts, for large Montreal importers, all the way from Montreal to London, Ont., and other western points. If he did not go himself, he sent a reliable man. The use of railway freight cars was a dream in those times, it was up to the strong men, just as in another way it is to-day. Lyman & Sons, Sinclair, Jack & Co., with their immense stocks of imports, had no C. P.R. or G.T.R. to call upon. It was Thos. Lilley. His worth was well-known when his usefulness had decayed, and yet this can hardly be said with an aggressive spirit, for he made his price for his cartage, and he always got it. If it was worth so much to cart bales to Lachine, to Hudson, or to any other remote point of industry, Mr. Lilley simply made his price, then he did the work. He drove sometimes through wildernesses. Always the driver was accompanied with food for himself, and frequently for his horses. There would be no change of the horses on these long journeys, as they frequently did in England where much shorter journeys were covered (and by the way, Mr. Lilley was an Englishman). The judgment of the driver was left entirely to control the trip. If he met a friendly farmer, there, he would take his meals, there he would spend his night, and if necessary reward him accordingly. If not he could always feed himself and his horses.

Just before the C.P.R. was built, Mr. Lilley carted all the machinery for the Joliette Paper Mills. and some interesting tales are told of those terrible roads he had to encounter, which to-day are among the best in the country.

The old days of sailing ships serve as interesting reminiscences, for the big wholesale grocers were accustomed to forward their imports by the teams of Thos. Lilley. There were no wharves in those times, and this strong, determined old Englishman would order his carts backed into the water, where he would meet the sailing vessel's side, and there receive the groceries that were to supply the largest portion of Canada.

In those days, before the Lachine canal was completed, batteaux were frequently struck above Lachine, and the Lilley carts were familiar sights as they filed away with loads of flour and other cargo for Montreal, and thence to the sailing ships to be distributed to the great markets of the Old Land.

As an instrument of commerce, such a man cannot be over-estimated. His will was iron, and his methods were correct. There was no blundering in the delivery of his goods; no carter could drink whiskey and survive the regularity of the Lilley cartage system. The Lilley Cartage Co. to-day is larger and better than it ever was, and is now carried on by the third generation, Major Lilley being now with Mr. Cameron. Yet the same old firm of Lyman & Sons have all their carting, which is a hundred times more than they had in those days, done by the Lilley Co.

As an illustration of the evolution of business integrity, if old John Lilley who founded the firm, and who left it to his son Thomas, 50 years ago, could look at the busy cities of Montreal and Toronto, London and Winnipeg, and see the nervous vitality of the ever growing West, he would be at least amazed and interested, and perhaps proud of his early efforts.

As a contrast in remuneration to employes, it may be mentioned that in Thos. Lilley's early days, his best drivers received only about $2 a week and their board, while to-day men in similar positions with a great deal easier time, receive $10 to $15 per week, and sometimes more.

Mr. Lilley's chief fad was love of music, and also love of his own home. He lived round the neighborhood of Colborne street the greater portion of his life, and often laughed in later years when he remembered the chance he had of buying the land where the Windsor Hotel now stands, at a rate simply ridiculous, lower in fact, than he could buy it in Griffintown. As he said when alive it would have been just as likely then that the Windsor Hotel would have arisen from the graveyard that then existed, as that a palace of fine arts might appear in the Mount Royal Cemetery before long.

However, Mr. Lilley passed away full of years and honors and has left a record however unostentatious that would be worthy of imitation anywhere.

MR. BERNARD REPLIES.

Editor, Canadian Grocer: In reply to Mr. Larkin's letter appearing in your issue of February 5th, I would like to ask him to be candid enough to inform your readers as to the very large percentage of Ceylon green teas that are imported by him to Canada and reshipped to the United States and therefore should not appear in Canadian statistics of consumption.

As regards the inference that the Canadians are unwilling to pay for good tea, why is it that the popular price in Canada is 25c. and in this country 60c.

The enclosed Salada advertisement taken from one of our daily papers calls attention only to their 60 and 70c. tea. How much of these grades do they sell in Canada?

The conditions for buying are precisely the same in the two countries but the cheap teas that are so favored in Canada are not wanted by the average American.

Touching the question of quality as your readers are all more or less tea experts it is hardly necessary to discuss the superior merits of Japan teas over Ceylon and India greens as they know perfectly well that what they are seeking all the time is to find a Ceylon green tea to resemble as nearly as possible in flavor a Japan.

Yours faithfully,

C. M. BERNARD.

Why Take Chances.

WE REALIZE that all sorts of offers are being made to grocers every day to handle certain brands of Coffees. You probably have had some experience in this line yourself and realize the fact that such experiments are often expensive to you. Goods that you do not know about fail to give satisfaction. They come back and your trade loses confidence in your judgment. Our brands of Coffees have been time tried, and, as you are aware, always give satisfaction.

She discovered a new idea in soap-making, namely: adding Borax to other ingredients.

The Soap she has made bears her name—and it has sold well from the first day the public learned about it.

Mrs. Dooley's Laundry Soap

The Soap is being sold with energy. Besides being a better Soap than any other ---no matter how good others are,---it pays the grocer about 10% more profit, and most grocers want this 10%.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Ontario Fisheries.

THE report of the Deputy Fishery Commissioner of Ontario handed down this week values the season's catch for Ontario at $1,547,464 as against $1,265,705 in 1902. In 1892 the value was $2,042,198, in 1890, $2,009,637. The total value of the fish taken from Ontario waters since 1870 is $37,742,615. The quantity of fish taken last year shows a large falling off in many important classes, and the higher prices resulting from the scarcity were accountable for the increased value of the catch.

The following figures show the catch and the decrease or increase in class:

	Catch. lbs.	Decrease. lbs.
Whitefish	2,632,770	227,900
do., salted	34,400	14,100

FEW HERRING IN LAKE ONTARIO.

Whitefish increased 66,965 pounds in Lake of the Woods and Rainy River district, 165,007 pounds in Lake Superior, decreased 337,170 pounds in Lake Huron, north channel, increased 10,790 pounds in Georgian Bay, increased 2,812 pounds in Lake Huron proper, decreased 1,000 pounds in River St. Clair decreased 20,250 pounds in Lake St. Clair and Detroit River, decreased 146,606 pounds in Lake Erie, increased 19,909 pounds in Lake Ontario, and increased 20,100 pounds in Nipissing district.

Herring decreased 75,520 pounds in Lake Superior, increased 1,111 pounds in Lake Huron, north channel, and 441 pounds in Lake Huron proper, decreased 1,625 pounds in Georgian Bay, increased 3,200 pounds in St. Clair River, decreased 200 pounds in Lake St. Clair and Detroit River decreased 791,750 pounds in Lake Erie, decreased 945,519 pounds in Lake Ontario and increased 14,630 pounds in Nipissing district.

Trout increased 33,576 pounds in Lake of the Woods and Rainy River district, 307,784 pounds in Lake Superior, 496,455 pounds in Lake Huron, north channel, 46,803 pounds in Lake Huron proper, decreased 187,280 pounds in Georgian Bay, increased 2,007 pounds in Lake Erie, and 6,588 pounds in Lake Ontario.

The fishing industry has grown rapidly during the past few years, and last season there were engaged in the fishing business 124 tugs, with 589 men, 1,295 boats and 2,296 men.

There were 93,701,000 fry distributed in the waters of the province by the Dominion Government from Dominion hatcheries during the year. The total number of fry distributed by the Dominion Government in Ontario waters since 1868 is 1,574,862,200. In 1902 it was 101,895,000.

Right of Firing Guns.

The Ontario fishery officials have asked to have the right conferred on Provincial overseers of firing a gun to compel poaching vessels to lay to when hailed. In regard to this Prof. Prince, Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries, says: "It is an error to suppose that Dominion overseers have this power. The power is a very special one, more for Dominion cruisers in dealing with the encroachment of fishermen of foreign nations, and incidentally for revenue cutters in the prevention of smuggling, and can only be exercised by Admiralty warrant, which involves the formal commissioning of officers and the flying of the blue pennant."

Inland Oysters.

The latest departure in the oyster business is that of "oyster farming," viz., raising oysters on the shoals of "Salt River," near Mammoth Springs, Ark. The peculiar flavor of the oysters found there has enabled a firm of planters to establish a good business, a ready market has been found for these oysters, capital has been interested, and the work of developing this oyster mine will be pushed.

TO THE TRADE:

It would appear from the form of "Salada's" acceptance of our offer, that they would have preferred to compare their entire Canadian sales with the Blue Ribbon sales of one Province. We are pleased to notice this change of tone, and hope that it will continue so that the trade will not in future be favored with any more of such notices as—

"Our increase alone in sales of Salada Ceylon Tea in the past year "over our sales in 1902 was greater than the entire business, etc., etc."

The comparison which "Salada" has actually agreed to is—

"Whether the quantity of Blue Ribbon Tea sold for consumption in "Canada during 1903 exceeded quantity of Salada sold for consumption "during the same period."

That is to say we agree to compare a portion of our tea business with "Salada's" entire Canadian trade.

Our deposit is in Messrs. Clarkson & Cross' hands, and we would be glad if "Salada" would cover it and allow the investigation to proceed.

With regard to Salada's advertisement in the last issue of THE GROCER we regret that Salada should pretend to be ignorant of what they and everyone who perused our letter must have been well aware of, namely, that our offer to compare Salada's increase with our entire business was simply an expression of our willingness to accept what we understood to be the terms of Salada's original challenge. Whilst we were surprised at this attempt to misrepresent our position, we were more than surprised at Salada's pretence that they understood we wished to include our general grocery business other than tea in the comparison. Can anyone credit that Salada believes anything of the kind? The correspondence from beginning to end shows clearly that tea alone was under discussion, and Salada's statement regarding our general business is too absurd to be accepted seriously.

When Salada's extraordinary challenge first appeared business men in the West wondered why no Eastern merchant took it up. Perhaps Salada's last advertisement throws some light on the subject when in referring to our offer to accept what we believed to be the terms of their challenge, thus treating the matter seriously, Salada said this was the greatest compliment they had ever received. We shall certainly pay Salada no more compliments, nor will we make any further effort to arrive at the meaning of their challenge. Mr. Ince's enquiries having produced no result, and our own having met with ridicule and evasion, we do not care to press the matter further, particularly when Salada's anxiety to escape responsibility for their challenge is so great that they must needs deliberately misrepresent our position. We shall therefore treat Salada's challenge as withdrawn and have nothing further to do with it.

It is, of course, understood that the investigation by Messrs. Clarkson & Cross into the Canadian sales of Blue Ribbon and Salada during 1903 will proceed as soon as Salada puts up their deposit.

Salt—Reduced Prices

Having completed alterations and improvements we are now in a position to fill all orders. Our plant, as reconstructed, is the most modern in existence, and has the largest capacity in the British Empire for the production of high-grade Salt.

The improvements made having enabled us to effect a considerable saving in the cost of manufacture, we have issued new Price Lists, showing very large reductions.

As it is almost impossible to secure cooperage stock we suggest that our customers order ordinary fine Salt in sacks. Write for new Price List.

NEW ZEALAND PREFERENCE.

AFTER due consideration of the tariff recently adopted by New Zealand, the particulars of which were published in a recent number of The Grocer, the Dominion Government has decided that on the whole it is quite favorable to Canada and accordingly an order-in-Council has been passed extending to New Zealand the full Canadian preference of 33 1-3 per cent.

This mutual preference should stimulate trade between Canada and her sister colony of the Antipodes. The foreign trade of New Zealand for the fiscal year 1902-3 aggregated over £25,000,000, imports being £11,747,435 and exports £14,-923,135. Her imports covered nearly all lines of goods; her exports were chiefly wool and sheepskins, frozen meat, gold, kauri gum, flax, butter and cheese. Of this trade Canada imported from New Zealand goods to the value of $41,903 and exported to that island goods to the value of $462,538. We are evidently not getting a very large share so far.

Of course as New Zealand is a pastoral and agricultural country we can not expect to sell her much agricultural produce, but there should be a good opening for our manufacturers to develop a trade which, insignificant as yet has great possibilities.

GREEN TEA POSITION.

THE position of Indian and Ceylon green teas in Toronto at the present time is a curious one. While there is a very fair demand from the retail trade for these lines, the jobbers appear to be well stocked for present requirements and there is considerable in warehouse on consignors' account. In regard to this latter opinions of buyers and sellers differ and the former being supplied for present requirements will not touch the spot tea except at a concession, while they are at the same time buying reasonably freely for importation in anticipation of future requirements. While therefore there is an active demand from retailers for Ceylon and Indian greens, and jobbers are placing orders for importation, brokers with consignments in warehouse are finding no little difficulty in getting their prices.

CUMULATIVE VOTING.

THE experiment of cumulative voting as tried in Toronto has not been a decided success. In fact the City Council has resolved to ask the Legislature to do away with the system established only last year and substitute another.

The system afforded unexampled opportunities for the election heeler to get in his fine work, in fact the opportunities were such that these gentry overdid themselves and so attracted attention which resulted in the present investigations and revelations. That this hidden crooked work has been unearthed should perhaps be placed to the credit of cumulative voting, but this after all is a left-handed credit.

The system gives too much power in the hands of corrupt coteries, party cliques, and society groups and enables such undesirable bodies to exercise an influence by no means beneficial and out of all proportion to their number as compared with the ordinary decent citizen who distributes his votes among the men he deems most qualified for office.

It is not in the interest of the business man that this undue influence should be placed in the hands of men of the professional politician type, who seldom have any business interest and little respect for the rights and needs of business men.

The proper principle is one man one vote. In cases where more than one is to be elected, the elector who wishes to indulge in the luxury of plumping should have no right to pile up two or three votes for his particular choice. The country would be served better were he given the alternative of distributing his full quota of votes or restricting himself to one for his favorite.

THE BONDING PRIVILEGES.

IN a recent number The Grocer had occasion to rebuke Cold Storage, a London, England, publication, which in the course of an editorial arguing the inability of the colonies to supply the food needs of the Motherland under a preferential tariff, made the unwarranted and misleading statement that Canada was at the mercy of the United States for four months of the year owing to the ice closing her ports.

In the issue of Cold Storage just at hand the writer tacitly admits that he was wrong in stating that our ports were icebound for four months of the year, but attempts to escape by pleading that compared with Boston or Portland our maritime ports are not commercially possible, and triumphantly quotes statistics to show that 69 per cent. to 81 per cent. of our food products shipped during the Winter months pass through Portland and Boston. It is quite simple to Cold Storage that all the United States has to do is to withdraw the bonding privilege, and Canada is undone. In support of this inexorable logic Cold Storage quotes the Times, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech on the introduction of the Grand Trunk Pacific bill.

Cold Storage has fallen into the error common to people who reason from incomplete premises.

In the first place its own statistics show that the proportion of Canadian produce shipped through our maritime ports increased very considerably last year, and the increase this year will be found to be still greater.

But apart from this altogether, is Canada at the mercy of the United States in the matter of bonding privileges? Decidedly no! Cold Storage should know that the United States does not extend such valuable considerations as bonding privileges as a matter of courtesy. They have their quid pro quo, and having as usual the long end of the bargain are unlikely to do any such foolish thing as to abrogate the convention under which we are now working.

Suppose the bonding privilege were abrogated, the blow would fall at the same time upon the United States ports of Boston and Portland as upon Canada, and while we might be inconvenienced for a short time our "commercially impossible" ports in the Maritime Provinces would perforce take care of the diverted traffic more or less adequately. Portland and Boston would lose a lucrative traffic permanently.

But on the other hand the United States enjoys very important bonding privileges at the hand of Canada. The three great American lines from the middle west to the Atlantic seaboard, from Chicago to New York, the Michigan Central of the Vanderbilt system, the Wabash, and the Pere Marquette all run for 250 miles from the Detroit to the Niagara River through Canada. The Welland canal between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, the St. Lawrence canals, giving outlet from Lake Ontario to tide water, are all through Canadian soil. If the United States were to withdraw the bonding privileges could we not do the same?

While the withdrawal of the bonding privileges on the part of the United States might very seriously inconvenience us for a time, retaliation would paralize a great part of the United States traffic which centres in Chicago and has for destination the Atlantic seaboard.

In the face of these facts it is absurd to speak of Canada being at the mercy of the United States, the Times to the contrary notwithstanding. One is never at the mercy of an enemy when possessed of equal weapons and the same opportunity to wield them.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's appeal on the introduction of the Grand Trunk Pacific bill, to the patriotic desire of all Canadians for an all Canadian route for our products all months of the year is very far from an admission that we are at the mercy of our southern neighbors.

As intimated in our first article the editor of Cold Storage should travel. A visit to Canada would convince him that Canada is quite capable of producing any quantity of food required by his little sea-girt isle, and that the withdrawal of the bonding privileges is but a bugaboo to frighten the timorous.

PERMANENTLY PROFITABLE BUSINESS.

EVERY progressive merchant should look not only to immediate profits but to the establishment and maintenance of a business which will prove permanently profitable. Such a business can be built up only by securing the trade of the better class of customers. This is the class of people who have money to spend and with whom, no matter how careful they may be in money matters, quality is the first consideration. There are few customers who will more than once pay an excessive price for an article, but there are very many who want high-class goods and are willing to pay the regular price. These are the customers whose business is permanently profitable because it can be retained.

The bargain hunting class can be interested only so long as they are getting something for nothing—or believe that they are—which is the same thing. They drift from one store to another, and there are few merchants who find their trade profitable. They are useful only because they are always ready to relieve a merchant of his otherwise unsaleable stock at bargain prices.

The other class—the profitable class—are not so easily attracted in the first instance, but, once secured, their trade can be retained by treating them right, by supplying them with reliable goods only, with the brands for which they ask and with which they are satisfied. It is dangerous to offer these customers something "just as good" unless the salesman is absolutely sure of his goods.

This being the case, it is strange that retailers in general are not more careful in their buying. Often they are influenced in their purchases by the salesman who tells them they can make greater profits by handling his lines than from the sale of the established brands with which they are acquainted. Retailers should remember that most of these well-known brands which have stood the test of time are already on a rock bottom price basis. They are sold as low now as it would be profitable to sell them, and the difference in the price of the two brands very often represents pretty accurately the difference in quality. Hence to handle the new line at the same price is to give a customer an inferior article for his money. The immediate profit may be larger but a customer will not be deceived twice.

By all this is not meant that a merchant should never consider the advances of a new firm. The older firms themselves would probably be the last to claim the right to monopolize the trade of the country. No person disputes the right of a firm commencing in business to expect that patronage from the trade to which the merits of its goods entitle it. Moreover the country is growing, and will probably continue to grow, so rapidly that these firms will be unable to keep up with the demand.

But the merchant has his own reputation to sustain. His name has come to represent among his customers a certain class of goods. His firm name is, or should be, a guarantee of excellence.

The manufacturer's name should also be a guarantee of excellence, and the merchant who has a reputation at stake should insist that the goods he sells bear the name and trade mark of their maker. The manufacturer who has confidence in his own goods, and believes that they will bear comparison with other brands now on the market, will not hesitate to comply with this requirement. It is usually the case that goods which do not bear the name of their manufacturer are made for the sake of immediate profits only, and it is not expected that their quality will give them a permanent hold on the market. The merchant who is looking for a permanently profitable business among the better class of customers can not afford to handle these goods.

HALIGONIAN CHOCOLATE MAN.

F. J. WARD of John P. Mott & Co., Halifax, N.S., was a visitor to Montreal this week, passing through on his way east from a trip through the Ontario and Quebec trade. Mr. Ward expressed the opinion that the demand for chocolate and cocoas was on the increase in Canada and as far as their trade was concerned satisfactorily so. "Of course," Mr. Ward stated, "Mott's chocolates and cocoas have for many years been before the trade and enjoyed a desirable reputation. A branch of our business is the manufacture of confectioners' chocolates, and in this connection I am pleased to say, our goods are in the front rank."

Mr. Ward is enthusiastic as regards the outlook for the future, and stated that all their agencies, in Toronto, Winnipeg, and Montreal were closely looked after. While in Montreal Mr. Ward's commercial headquarters are with J. P. Taylor, his firm's representative for this district. He left for Quebec and the east on Tuesday, 23rd inst.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. R. W. Ritchie, of the Eby, Blain Co., has been laid up with a severely sprained ankle.

F. W. Fearman Co. have a large and well assorted stock of cheese, white colored and Stiltons that they are offering at good value.

Mr. J. S. Donaldson, Front street, Toronto, has been appointed selling agent for Small's Maple Creams. These creams have established a good reputation.

Mr. A. H. Brittain, of A. H. Brittain & Co., Montreal, representative for Black Bros. & Co., Halifax, is on a visit to the latter city in the interests of the company's fish foods.

Mr. W. L. Hunter, Eastern Ontario representative for L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, dropped into the Montreal offices of The Grocer this last week. Mr. Hunter reports that despite the extremely cold weather and blocked and unfavorable roads business has been satisfactory. When the roads get opened up more he expects trade will revive materially.

Mr. W. F. Leonard, senior member of the fish house of Leonard Bros., St. John, N.B., was a visitor to Montreal during the week, visiting their Montreal warehouses which are under the management of Mr. J. Byrne. The cold weather while restricting the fresh fish trade somewhat has, on the other hand been beneficial to the frozen fish business, and taking one condition with another Mr. Leonard is of the opinion that New Brunswick fish business is in a satisfactory state.

AT CANNERS' CONVENTION.

J. W. WINDSOR, of the J. W. Windsor Canning Co., Montreal, has just returned from Columbus, Ohio, where he had gone to attend the National Convention of the Canned Goods Association, which was held in that city, from February 8th to 13th.

Mr. Windsor's trip was a very pleasant one, and he expressed himself as very much interested in the entire proceedings. The display of canned goods machinery, in connection with the convention, was a most magnificent one. Every modern appliance, for the prompt and safe packing of canned goods was in evidence.

The attendance was very large, from 500 to 600 canners, and parties interested in the canned goods industry, from almost every state in the Union being present.

Some very interesting lectures and speeches were delivered, touching on the manufacture of canned goods, buying and selling, and the position of the trade as regards the jobber, etc.

One of the speeches, that of W. B. Timms, of the firm of Austin, Nichols & Co., wholesale grocers, was in the nature of a heart to heart talk with the canners, dealing as it did with the honest and proper carrying out of contracts made by the canners with the jobbers.

The address of Prof. E. W. Duckwall, of the Sprague Laboratory at Aspenwall, Pa., and chemist for the H. J. Heinz Co., Pittsburg, and which was illustrated by steriopticon views, was divided into three branches, touching the subjects of artificial colors, tin plates, and preservatives. This address particularly, was considered highly instructive by Mr. Windsor. Of one fact Mr. Windsor is convinced, and this is demonstrated by the analysis of tin plates as shown by Prof. Duckwall, and that is, that the quality of tin plates used by Canadian packers, is of a higher grade than that used by the American canners.

The high character of the addresses delivered on the different subjects of interest to the canning industry show that a great deal more interest was taken, particularly on the subject of putting up high-grade, and absolutely reliable goods, and it is Mr. Windsor's opinion that these annual gatherings are productive of great good, not only to the canning industry, but to the jobber, the retailer, and the consumer.

INQUIRIES RECEIVED.

We are requested by Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, to state that from the great number of inquiries they are receiving in answer to their offer to send readers of The Grocer one of their beautiful "Bee" starch hangers, it is evident that such an attractive store ornament is appreciated. Any one not having received a hanger can obtain one by dropping a card to Snowdon, Forbes & Co., 449 St. Paul street, Montreal. They have a full supply on hand now.

OFF FOR FLORIDA.

Mr. Chas. Chaput, senior member of the wholesale grocery house of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, accompanied by Mrs. Chaput, left on Monday 22nd inst. for St. Augustine, Fla. Mr. Chaput has well earned his vacation and The Grocer wishes him and Mrs. Chaput an enjoyable and beneficial holiday. It is expected that they will not return until after Easter.

GROCER A WELCOME GUEST.

Mr. J. W. Watson, general merchant, Minden, Ont., has sold out his store to D. J. Naetle and is offering his stock en bloc or in detail. Mr. Watson writes that The Grocer has always been a welcome guest with him and he always found it in the van. He moreover wishes to thank many members of the wholesale trade for many kindnesses which, he remarks, can never be repaid in coin.

A BUSINESS HELP.

H. N. Bate & Son, Ottawa, are sending out their improved patent combination order book to the trade. This is a most complete and convenient affair containing as it does a supply of order sheets, a grocer's want list, pocket for envelopes, price lists, catalogues and a small calendar. Grocers interested will be able to secure one of these order books and will find it a convenience when placing their orders with the firm. H. N. Bate & Son send these order books out three or four times a year.

MILK CHOCOLATE.

The manufacture of milk chocolate has been made a specialty of by the Cowan Co, Toronto, who have introduced the finest grades for eating and drinking. As a confection milk chocolate is one of the daintiest, purest and most nutritious.

The Cowan Co. are now introducing this chocolate as a sweet coating for confectioners' use. They report making only one grade, the bery best, so that Cowan's milk chocolate may be relied on for quality, fine flavor and absolute purity.

THE SAME OLD GAME.

The wholesale grocer is endeavoring with some success to again load up his customers with Japan Teas on the strength of the WAR. The figures we gave a few weeks ago, showing that in four years the imports of Japan Teas into Canada declined from 11,666,-757 lbs. in 1899 to 4,879,078 lbs. last year, prove conclusively that Japans are to go out of consumption like China Teas have.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, Feb. 25, 1904.

Groceries.

THE trade is still suffering from the freight blockade. Railroads are refusing to accept goods for delivery on certain branch lines and consignments have been lost since the middle of January. Money is as might be expected, slow. Orders are however quite ample if they could only be filled. The outlook, however, is promising once the Spring opens up. There is an active interest in canned goods since the rise. Coffees are without movement pending an equilibrium. Spices are firm. Syrups and molasses are meeting a good demand at firm prices. Rice and tapioca are both strong. Teas are active and the tendency is generally upward. Dried fruits are in fair demand especially prunes. Currants are higher and California raisins a cent lower. Cured fish are in good demand. Sugar has been strong both in New York and locally. Tuesday afternoon an advance of 5 cents was recorded for yellows.

CANNED GOODS.

A more active interest has been taken in canned goods since the recent advance, and stocks have been replenished at the new figures in anticipation of firmer prices yet. The market is strong, the severe Winter having done away with much of the fresh vegetables usually kept over the Winter. We quote:

SUGAR

The market has again taken a turn for the better and there have been free sales of raws at 2 1-32c. c. and f. New York for Cuba centrifugals 96 test and at close there are buyers on this basis with sellers talking 2 1-16 and the tone of the market is in favor of sellers. The course of the week has again been interrupted by a holiday in United States markets, but prices have held firm and conditions continue favorable to improvement. This view is encouraged by stronger European markets, beet sugar having advanced 2 1-4d. per cwt. for 88 test, quotations as we go to press being 8s. 11-2d. basis f.o.b. Hamburg, or fully 35c. per hundred pounds over the cost of cane sugar in New York markets. There is a strong impression that prices have already touched bottom and unless beet sugar reacts it would look as if conditions had generally changed to improvement in the various sugar markets of the world. United States refiners meltings continue large and indicate a heavy consumption and refiners' stocks have declined over 8,000 tons for week ending February 17th. At that date being only 88,000 tons. Receipts for week ending February 17th were 33,965 tons, being 12,000 tons less than previous week, while for same period meltings increased 5,000 tons to 35,000 tons, leaving total stocks in all hands of 110,302 tons, or about 30,000 tons less than corresponding week last year. For same period combined stocks of United States and Cuba show a decrease of 69,904 tons from last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,452,302 tons, or 107,641 tons excess over 1903. The largest holdings of sugar at present time are in European Continental countries which are 200,000 tons more than same time last year. Statistics of other principal countries such as United Kingdom, Cuba and the United States showing considerable reductions. The tone of American refined markets for week under review has been towards improvement with Arbuckles price advanced 5 cents for 30-day contracts, and other United States refiners granulated in small barrels advanced 5c. per hundred pounds for certain states. Locally all yellows were advanced late on evening of Tuesday, 23rd inst. 5c. per hundred pounds, making the difference between No. 1 yellow and granulated only 60 cents per hundred pounds. The ostensible reason for this rise has been the difficulty experienced by refiners in securing suitable grades of raw sugars from which to make yellows. From present indications it would seem wise to carry sufficient stock of all grades for all immediate prospective requirements. We revise quotations below as follows:

Paris lumps, in 50-lb. boxes	4 73

COFFEES.

The New York market still continues unsteady and the trade scarcely knows where they are. There is practically nothing doing locally, there having been considerable buying in the early stages of the rise. Rios and Santos are reduced from last week's quotations. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is a very good demand for these lines. Molasses is very firm at quotations. The customs department is said to have under consideration a point as to the proper classification of molasses being received from New Orleans whereby the cost laid down here may be increased several cents. We quote:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Rice is very firm. There has been an advance of 3 cents per cwt. on Japans

TEAS.

The market for tea is quite active and prices firm. In Ceylon and Indian greens the trade is pretty well stocked for present demands, stocks being quite sufficient but there is considerable buying for importation. Retail demand is good. A cable from Colombo on Monday reports good Pekoe Souchong firm at equal to 14½c. Toronto, with advancing tendency. Anything with flavor is worth more money and strictly fine flavoring teas are very scarce indeed. There are still a few teas afloat for London and quotable for trans-shipment to Canada being offered on this market, and business is being somewhat freely done in these as the present offerings are practically the last of the season and buyers are aware they must wait till next Fall before having another opportunity to buy similar teas in transit. There is more enquiry for China greens and the price asked in Canada is probably a cent more than these teas could be bought for before the outbreak of the war in the East. The quantity offering however, is not very large, but seems fully equal to the reduced demands for these goods. Japans are still selling rather freely at about a cent advance on prices of a month ago. Even admitting the consumption of Japan teas has fallen off considerably, the small quantity in first hands is considered inadequate to keep the trade fully supplied till the advent of the new crop in May. There is a disposition on the part of some buyers to stock Japans at present prices for next year's business. We quote :

Foreign Dried Fruits.

There is a fair demand for dried fruits —prunes leading. French reports on shelled walnuts continue conflicting, some houses advising agents that in a very little while there will be none to be had. Reports of other shippers are not at all so alarming. They, in fact, attribute the high prices to the speculation of the houses of first named class, as quotations have been reduced several francs by recent cables it would seem that this latter information is well founded. Currants are a little stronger and prices slightly higher. Prices for California raisins have been reduced 1 cent to the Canadian trade. We quote :

Country Produce.

EGGS.

We withdraw our quotations this week for cold storage they being off the market. Receipts of new laid have been slightly improved selling at from 35 to 40c. It is difficult to quote pickled, which are also practically exhausted, those not being delivered on contract bringing almost the same as new laid. At the price there is scarcely anything doing. Bakers are taking what is going, but even some of these have had to quit making cakes, not being able to get the eggs. Others are making what eggs they get go a long way to quote one dealer. What they use as substitutes has not transpired. We quote:

POULTRY.

Fish.

The demand for fish continues brisk, with stocks gradually becoming more scarce. The recent fish famine in New York did not affect Canadian trade materially since fish supplies here are obtained from a different source. The demand for fish has never been so brisk as this season, and it is not improbable that the unusually large stocks laid in early in the season will be used up before Spring fishing opens up about the 15th of April. Gold-eyes are out of the market. There is practically a famine in oysters. We quote:

Green Fruits.

Since the moderation in the weather, fruit merchants have been doing a brisk trade. There is still a brisk demand for California navels and stocks are first-class. Shipments of Valencias are coming freely; stocks were never better quality. Seville bitter oranges in chests are practically out of the market and are uniformly easier in price. Jamaica oranges in barrels are also out of the market. Valencias 714 case show a slightly wider range in price; Valencias 420 case are easier in price. Large Valecias are firmer in price. Lemons are scarce and are likely to continue so until the regular Montreal Spring shipment arrives. Very few lemons are on the way and prices will probably advance. Frosted stocks which have been an incubus on the market have nearly disappeared. Bahama grape fruit is firmer in price. Pineapples are beginning to arrive although the demand as yet is not great. Bananas are firmer in price; they are becoming plentiful on the market; demand is good. A few export shipments of apples have been touched by frost en route to shipboard. Our quotations are:

Vegetables.

There is a brisk demand for vegetables this week with stocks more plentiful than for some time past. A big trade is doing in potatoes and the demand for onions is one of the features of the week. Onions are scarce and white onions have advanced from 25 to 50c. in price. They are likely to become still firmer. Canadian celery is scarce and shows a range in prices wider by 25c. than last week. White turnips are out of the market. Rhubarb is becoming more plentiful and in bundle lots is 5c. easier. Watercress is noticed on the market for the first time this week. Our quotations are:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

Grain is lively this week and prices continue to soar. The speculative tendency is strong and is the principal factor in influencing the situation. Manitoba wheat is strong but the impression is that Ontario is altogether too high. Indications are that the rise in prices will continue and taking the present high delivery price of May wheat as evidence, the general impression seems to be that if the market should be in strong hands, there is more reason why May wheat should continue to advance materially than there was in 1898 at the time of the Leiter boom. The war also has influenced the wheat situation as well as the tie-up in traffic on the railroads as a result of which very little wheat can be moved. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, is 9 to 9 1-2c. firmer; No. 1 Northern is 10c. and No. 2 9c. firmer respectively. White wheat is 11 1-2c. firmer and red wheat 11c. firmer. Barley has advanced 1c. and oats 1 1-2c. Buckwheat is 3c. firmer and rye 8c. firmer. Peas continue unchanged. Our quotations are as follows:

Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, per bush, Toronto	1 10	1 11

FLOUR.

Excitement prevails in the flour market this week, the cause being the Russo-Japanese war, and the manipulation of the markets by speculators which was initiated in Chicago. A continued advance in prices is not improbable. Manitoba flour is 40c. firmer than last week and Ontario 50c. firmer. Our quotations are as follows:

Ontario wheat patents "	4 90	5 15

BREAKFAST FOODS.

The demand for breakfast food continues lively, and indications point to a natural advance in prices, which however will largely be controlled by the war in the East. The only change in last week's prices is in rolled wheat which is 25c. firmer. We quote as follows:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, Feb. 25, 1904.

Groceries.

THE cessation of extremely cold weather has not, so far, made much impression upon trade, though, should it continue, a rush of business is looked for shortly. There have been no startling changes in the grocery trade during the week. On the local market, sugars, teas, canned goods and other staples have been for the most part steady. Teas continue to show great strength, and some dealers are again putting up prices. Coffees and spices have remained unchanged. Wholesale houses are now quoting the higher prices on canned goods, under a continued brisk demand. Green fruits are quiet and unchanged in prices. Some kinds of fish have advanced and in green cod, haddies and smoked herring there is a great scarcity. The dairy markets remain in about the same position as last week, and our quotations, which for export are practically nominal, still stand good. In provisions and hog products the tendency of prices is upwards, and in pure lard another advance is quoted, while smoked hams also show some advance in small lots. Following the advance in certain brands of self-raising flours of 10 to 20c. per dozen, quoted in this column last week, other brands are being advanced to bring them up to the same level. Butter tubs have advanced 10 per cent., and are now worth from 17 to 30c. each, according to size. Jobbers are quoting American short cut clear port at an advance of 50c., making the price $20 to $20.50 per barrel. Evaporated apples, on account of the limited supply, are again higher. The market is now firm at 6 1-2 to 8 1-2c. All woodenware advanced 10 per cent. on Tuesday.

SUGAR.

Business in Montreal refined sugar has again been quiet throughout the week, on account of the difficulty of getting shipments made westward. The demand locally has also been small, but the market has remained steady, the business done having still been on the basis of $4 for granulated and $3.30 to $3.35 for No. 1 yellows. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market for Barbadoes molasses continues easy under a slightly better demand, and at present a fair trade is doing, puncheons being quoted at 33c. per gallon. It is now said that the lot of new molasses at first thought to be destined for Montreal, was for one of the Maritime ports. Syrups are moving out freely, at unchanged prices. We quote as follows:

TEA.

The probability of future advances in Japan teas is being taken full advantage of by the trade, so far as it is possible for them to have orders filled. The demand during the week has been quite brisk, and a material improvement over that of a week ago has been the result. For good quality Japans there has been an exceptionally good demand, and very firm prices rule. A slight advance is noted in some grades. Ceylon greens are moving out steadily, and prices are firming up. We quote:

COFFEE.

Coffee on the local market has remained quite firm, under a steady demand locally, and in spite of the speculative changes in New York, where prices have advanced and declined in response to the pressure brought to bear on the market. There is no change here. We quote:

SPICES.

The market is quiet, but prices rule firm. Peppers and cassia are both very strong and tend higher. The same way be said of cloves. Nutmegs are firm, but steady at present. We quote:

RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Tapioca continues in fairly good demand and rice is also moving out somewhat better. There has been no further advance in tapioca since the 1-2c. of last week, but the tone of the market is still firm, and higher prices are by no means an unlooked for possibility. Our quotations are:

NUTS

There is not much doing on this market, and the only quotable change shown occurs in Brazil nuts, which are easier this week ,and quoted at 11c., instead of 11 to 12c. Shelled almonds and walnuts continue firm as last quoted. Peanuts are also firm. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

Jobbers are now selling at the advanced prices quoted by the canners. Corn at $1.15 is very firm, and in some quarters it is predicted that it may go to $1.20 before long. Tomatoes are also firm as quoted below. In spite of the advanced prices there has been no falling off in the demand, which continues active. The trade apparently must have the goods. Peas continue firm. Stocks of most kinds are light, and the market is not expected to east off. Canned salmon is in brisk demand. We quote:

Fish.

The fish market is now very active, and stocks in many lines are running low. Bloaters are now out of the market till next Fall; and the fresh cod are also finished. Pike, haddock and smelt are from 1-2c. to 1c. higher. No. 1 green codfish have now been practically sold up, though there are still a few No. 2 left, and some pollock. Stocks of haddies are also practically exhausted, and smoked herring have become very scarce; indeed, are almost unobtainable. All sorts of fresh frozen fish are in good demand; stocks are running low, and prices tend upwards. Fish dealers state that they had some trouble last season in procuring sufficient supplies of haddock, due to the continual diminishing of the catch; and they confidently expect to have great difficulty next season in obtaining what they want. Green cod is another fish which is decreasing greatly in numbers year by year. It is predicted that No. 1 green cod will advance another 50c. very shortly. Bulk oysters are scarce, but the heavy demand is over for the season. We quote:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

Receipts of eggs have not been large, though a day or two of mild weather seemed to make some improvement in the offerings. Fresh laid stock sold this week as high as 42c. in small lots, and pickled were sold at 30 to 35c. It is reported that much old stock is being mixed up with the fresh eggs. We quote:

New laid	....	0 40

BEANS.

The market is quiet and easy, sales being reported at $1.35 to $1.40 for car lots and $1.40 to $1.45 in small lots.

HONEY.

There is no change. The market is quiet and prices steady. We quote:

Clover and basswood	....	0 08½
Buckwheat	0 07	0 08
Comb honey	0 13	0 13½

POTATOES.

There have been very small offerings of car lots, though considerable stock is on the way here delayed by weather conditions. Prices meantime are firm, and car lots are quoted at an advance of 3c. per bag, now being 68 to 70c. per bag. Small lots, ex-store are quoted at 80c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The market is quiet. There have been no quotable changes, and prices are as follows:

Maple syrup, in wood, per lb.	0 05½	0 06
Maple syrup, in large tins	0 70	0 75
Pure sugar, per lb.	0 07	0 07½

EVAPORATED APPLES.

Wholesalers are quoting an advance in evaporated apples, and one house quotes prices of 6 1-2 to 8 1-2c., which of course is for small lots. Quotations on car lots are given at 5 1-4 to 5 1-2c. There is not much activity on the market at present.

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

Manitoba and Ontario flours are again higher, millers having put prices up 15c. on Saturday. The market is quite active, and in sympathy with the advance in wheat, prices are firm. We quote:

ROLLED OATS.

There is a fairly good demand and the tone of the market is firm. For barrels the price is $4.45 to $4.50, and for bags $2.15 to $2.17 1-2, an advance of 5c. over last week's prices.

Baled Hay.

Offerings have been very light, owing to weather conditions, and prices are quoted higher for the present. We quote:

Clover, mixed	7 50	8 50

ASHES.

There are no pearls on the market at present. First pots have advanced, and are now firm at $6.10 to $6.20, and seconds at $5.70 to $5.75.

HIDES.

The market is dull and featureless. Prices have not changed, and we still quote:

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Feb. 22nd, 1904.

BUSINESS throughout the province continues quiet. At country points the business of retail merchants has been checked by the difficulty of travelling, which has kept farmers at home and prevented them from doing the usual amount of trading. Travellers for Halifax wholesale houses are sending in moderate orders and all are now looking forward to the improved trade conditions which the month of March is expected to bring. The failures in Nova Scotia since the first of the year were more numerous than traders have been accustomed to, but it is felt that the worst is over. A good many were the result of the stock speculation of a year ago, the wholesale houses having assisted their customers to carry their losses for a time, but in a number of instances this only postponed the final reckoning. At present collections are reported fair.

The chief feature of the markets this week is the advance in flour. Local jobbers have advanced their prices in the last two weeks fifty cents a barrel on all grades. Cornmeal has also been advanced 15 cents, and all breadstuffs are very firm. The city bakers have given notice of an advance in the price of bread. Stocks of flour are light in this province and with the present state of the railways it is impossible to count with any certainty on arrivals from the mills. This has led jobbers to place a premium on goods which they have on hand.

Provisions are also firmer. Local packers have not made any change, but the price of American pork is higher as a result of the sharp advance on the Chicago market. The molasses market is very demoralized and the interest which started in to cut prices is finding that a reduction in price has not had the effect of increasing sales to the extent anticipated.

A statement of the quantities of goods carried from Halifax to Great Britain during 1903 by the Furness steamers shows that the traffic via this port is increasing. The quantities carried by these steamers were as follows: Apples, 320,701 barrels; lobsters, 126,380 cases; cheese, 28,981 boxes; canned meats, 12,963 cases; deals, 8,988 standards; timber, 596 carloads; pulp, 4,854 tons; cattle, 1,684 head; general cargo, 97,777 tons. The Furness agency paid to stevedores here for handling the above cargo $55,000, and the total of the Furness live traffic for the year must have been worth $100,000 to the working men of this city.

At the meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association, held here last week, a statement was made which has set the orchardists of the Annapolis valley thinking. Mr. George Johnson, the Dominion statistican, who is a native of Western Nova Scotia, asserted that if the forests which line the slopes and summit of the North Mountain range are destroyed, the fine orchards of the valley from which some 600,000 barrels of apples were this year shipped to England, would be rendered valueless. Prof. Macoun also advanced this view, saying, "Once let the Bay of Fundy air into the Annapolis Valley and you may bid good-by to your apple orchards."

MANITOBA MARKETS.

Winnipeg, Feb. 20, 1904.

THERE have been no very important changes in prices this week. Trade has been fairly active and values generally firm.

Flour—In face of the strong position of wheat, flour is very firm with a rising tendency.

Tea—Japan teas continue strong and the reflected influence gives an added interest to other lines.

Rice—Japan rice is firm at 5½ cents.

Coffee—The New York market has not yet found its equilibrium. Prices here have not been materially affected as yet. No. 5 Rio is quoted at from 10½ to 11c. and No. 7 from 9½ to 10c.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—California dried fruits are on a high level, and as a result there is a more limited consumption, except for prunes. Raisins however, are easier.

Canned Goods—The orders of Japanese Government for low grade salmon is regarded by the trade as a good move, clearing the market of some undesirable lines. Canned vegetables are very firm.

Cured Meats—Prices remain about unchanged, with demand quite firm. Stocks are ample. Best hams are worth 13½c., backs 11½c., shoulders 9c., long clear 9c. Lard is somewhat firmer.

Butter—There is good demand for choice, which is hard to obtain. Good fresh pound prints are worth 22c., and in tubs 16c. to 17c.

Eggs—Receipts have been very limited. Case eggs are worth about 30 cents, and strictly fresh somewhat above this price.

Vegetables—The vegetable market has been affected by weather conditions and is rather on the quiet side. Potatoes are firm at 75 cents for farmers' loads.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 19.

THE published advices from the customs department have set at rest all doubts concerning the shipment of flour, feed and grain to ports of the two belligerents in the far East. Following the advices allowing the shipment of all such foodstuffs, there has been every sign of continued activity in shipment. Cargo space has been applied for so freely that the Empress of China, which is due to sail from this port on Monday, will not be able to take out all that offers. There will be one large shipment of barley, at first refused until definite ruling was received on the point. The consignment, which totals 550 tons, was imported from Washington and brought in this week by the Pacific Coast S. S. Co.'s steamers from Tacoma. This barley is consigned to Japan direct, but its ultimate destination is not given here. The shippers are the Brackman-Kerr Milling Co., which had several large orders for flour and grain, the latter principally for horse feed. It is not given out, but the likelihood is that the consignment is for the Japanese Government.

Large shipments of flour are also being stowed in the holds of the Empress for shipment to Japan. So much flour has been shipped to the Orient during the past season that it was thought there would be a lull in the shipments. This idea was more prominent when the price of wheat and flour began its recent rapid advance. But evidently there is confidence in the duration of the war and the consequent demand for staple provisions, for there is so much demand for cargo space for flour that the steamer Athenian, due in port on the 20th, is likely to be despatched again with all speed. Last year the cut rates prevailing in flour freight rates from 'Frisco, by reason of the China Commercial Co.'s competition, induced very heavy export of that staple from this coast. The rate was but $1 per ton for months, and at that rate the flour was sent almost as ballast, causing great stores to be gathered at several Oriental points. The rate is now firm at $4 per ton for flour and wheat, the same as has prevailed since the first of January. The Orient Freight Traffic Association has just declared the rate to stand for March as well.

Interest in the Northern trade developments has continued to be excited steady reports from the north. The indications now are most emphatic that there will be a big traffic there in the Spring no matter how the fields turn out. The evidence that there is good pay to be obtained there is repeated by every man who returns from the North, and the number of people going in increases every day. The last steamer which sailed from this port, the Ramona, taking the trip in place of the Cottage City, which was damaged, had nearly 100 tons of cargo and twelve passengers from this port. The goods were consigned to White Horse merchants and the passengers were nearly all bound for the new diggings. The C. P. R. steamer Amur, due to sail on Sunday, 21st inst., has a large cargo awaiting shipment from wholesale merchants here, most of which is provisions and supplies for the new district. A number of people are also preparing to go on the Amur. Many intend leaving here about the middle of March to get in before the winter roads break up.

An interesting shipment of nursery stock was sent down to be shipped to China by M. J. Henry, a local nurseryman, this week. It was a general lot of fruit trees and small fruits, including strawberries. The lot, which is the third consignment to the same parties, is for the American Board of Missions, Tien Tsin, China, having been ordered by Rev. Mr. Tewksbury, who first ordered a consignment when here three years ago. At that time he said the mission employed a number of Chinese about their plantation and sold their cultivated strawberries at 35 cents per box. The fruit trees taken out then have thriven in the Chinese climate, and the beginning of a general trade in nursery stock is apparent.

Mr. R. M. Palmer, provincial fruit inspector and agent for freight rates, says he anticipates great activity in the fruit industry during the coming season. Many settlers are now buying orchards and lands adapted for orchard-planting, principally in the different parts of the Okanagan district. At Kelowna one ranch of 3,000 acres has been subdivided and is being sold in small ranches at $200 per acre. On the lower mainland and Fraser valley, there is also great movement in ranches, especially those which have fruit plantations. Mr. Palmer says that the Provincial Fruit Association has in hand a scheme for giving practical instructions to ranchers in marketing of fruit.

The projected improvement of the up-coast steamship service and a very great increase in the number of steamers in that traffic, is indication of the expansion of trade along the Northern coast of the province. It is not alone in timber and fisheries that activity is noted. Many small mines, or rather mines worked in a small way, are being placed in the list of producers, and each requires some degree of service, and the supplies for all must come from the cities of the coast, which are the natural distributing centres for all business even hundreds of miles North along the coast of B. C. The coming season will bring with it much greater volume of business in the way of supplying staples than ever before. It has been growing so every year that now wholesale houses are sending their travellers up every Spring and Summer, some of them making several trips to the points along the coast.

Market conditions for the past week show but little movement, no very great changes to be noted, except the additional rise of ten cents in flour, consequent upon the rapid stiffening in price of cash wheat. The increase last notified, 15 cents, has barely been put in effect here, but no very great stocks are carried, so that dealers will not only be compelled to take in that increase but the 10c. increase notified this week.

Groceries—The steamer Inverness of the Turret line is due in port from Java about the middle of March with a cargo of raw sugar for the B. C. Sugar Refinery. The steamer left Batavia a week ago.

The Provincial Legislature passed a resolution before adjournment urging upon the Dominion Government the desirability of strict enforcement of the "Pure Foods Act," especially in respect to jams and jellies sold in this province. A large percentage of these goods, though labelled "genuine" or "pure," is adulterated to a degree that pure goods cannot compete in price. The publication from time to time of the Dominion Govern ent analysts' reports and lists of foods adulterated, might be a good course for the government to adopt.

Produce—Prices of eggs are away up, not only for local fresh which still bring whatever is asked, almost, but for the imported stock. The only case goods now coming in are from California. This week's importations are practically on a 26 or 27 cent basis, 'Frisco, which with freight and duty, and other charges, brings them up to 31 or 32 net to the wholesale trade. The jobbing price has been 35 cents this week.

Butter is very scarce at the present moment, that is, really fine stock. The only goods to speak of, now in hand, are held stock and small supplies of local fresh creamery, for none of the B. C. creameries shut down in the winter. The price for held creamery is about 25 to 26 cents, while the local fresh is quoted at 30c. This latter price has had the effect of keeping California butter out of Vancouver so far, though Victoria has had some in. The fact that the Island creameries are asking 35 cents gave the California goods a chance to get in. Otherwise the price is still too high.

A car of eastern creamery of high class is said to be on order to arrive here shortly. If so, it is the very first lot of Eastern creamery to come into the market here this season. The stocks from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories have held sway entirely, except of course for the local make. The Clover Leaf brand is the lot supposed to be coming, and it is being shipped from Montreal.

Fruit—The market for oranges is so easily over-stocked at this season any year, that it is small wonder in this season of exceptionally low prices that there is a plethora of stock. Prices were never lower since California came into the trade as an exporting country. A very goodnavel was sold last week on California basis of $1 per box, which would make it possible to job them here at $1.55. The range of prices in California at the present time is from 90c. to $1.65 per box. Seedlings are simply not quoted, so that they must have dropped out of sight, the price being so low that it does not pay to ship.

Lemons are low in price too, selling here at $2.50 and up. More of this line of fruit is being sold than usually moves at this season of the year. A little grape fruit is in the market, but the cheap price of oranges will prevent much movement. Apples are not so plentiful as they were, but some good stock is still obtainable, principally from the Okanagan and Kamloops districts of the interior. Washington and Oregon have not shipped apples to this market all all this season.

Vegetables are still quiet. Some demand for choice potatoes exists but the market is not yet active enough to make the shortage of good stock which exists felt very acutely. In other vegetables there is not much to note this week. The New Westminster produce market has been featureless for the past few weeks, as little farm produce is being offered.

GROCERS VISIT BAKERY.

ON Friday evening of last week the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, in response to an invitation from Mr. George Weston, paid a visit to the Model Bakery of which Mr. Weston is president, to view the manner in which the staff of life is converted from the flour to the delicately browned loaf.

The party, which numbered about 36, were received by President George Weston, Vice-President J. L. Spink, Foreman C. Upsall and the company's salesmen.

The visiting grocers were first shown through the offices, passing thence through mixing room No. 1 where 36 troughs of dough were being mixed. mixing rooms Nos. 2 and 3 to the cake and biscuit department, where they saw some of the 85 varieties of biscuits being made. The store and shipping rooms of the biscuit department were next inspected before going down stairs to the oven rooms. Here were seen 21 ovens each capable of 350 loaves; one oven being specially designed for baking Vienna bread. On the night in question 32,000 loaves were being baked, the average daily output being 20,000 loaves requiring 775 barrels of flour per week. Thirty varieties are made.

The stables attracted considerable attention. Here 55 horses are kept and the cleanliness and roominess was particularly striking. From the stables the party passed through the yards where are kept the 45 delivery wagons, to the offices again, where some time was spent in social intercourse.

After cigars were passed around President Johnston expressed to Mr. Weston on behalf of the association theri appreciation of his kindness and courtesy in showing the grocers through the factory. Mr. Johnston said he had no idea the factory was so large, airy and clean. He thought all present had benefited in seeing in the course of manufacture the most important article of food of the day.

Mr. Weston expressed the pleasure it afforded him to welcome the grocers of Toronto, to make their acquaintance and to show them through his plant.

Mr. Bond added his testimony to what Mr. Johnston had said, congratulating Mr. Weston particularly upon the success of his biscuit department.

Mr. J. L. Spink, who has charge of the milling end of the Model Bakery, said he expected bread to advance further in price, as he anticipated wheat would be $1.25 before the end of March.

Mr. John Butcher warmly commended the biscuits made by the Model Bakery, and Mr. J. Weston, on behalf of the biscuit salesmen of the Model Bakery, thanked the grocers for the kindly reception they had given him and his associates.

Messrs. B. Panter, D. Bell, and D. Clarke also spoke along the above lines. Finally on motion of J. S. Bond and A. Johnston a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Weston and the staff of the Model Bakery.

MONTREAL'S GROCER ALDERMEN.

THE grocery trade of Montreal are indulging a very pardonable pride over the very prominent place their ancient and honorable guild has taken in the civic government of Canada's greatest commercial city. Not only is the Mayor himself the head of a well known wholesale grocery house, but one-sixth of the whole council are grocers. Montreal grocers challenge any other city to show a better record and produce the following list of Montreal grocers elected February 1st for the next two years:

Mayor—H. Laporte, of Laporte, Martin & Cie., wholesale grocers.

Ald. R. Turner, late president of the Retail Grocers' Association, the oldest alderman in time of service and the Nestor of the council.

Ald. N. A. Lapointe, also an ex-president of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

Ald. S. D. Vallieres.

Ald. Lariviere.

Ald. G. H. Paquin.

Ald. Ricard.

This is surely an honorable record and shows that among the grocery trade there are men who are willing to give some of their time to the interest of the community at large. In the words of Jonothan to David, "Go ye and do likewise," ye other cities.

The Grocer presents to its readers in this week's issue a cut of Ald. R. Turner, the respected father of the council.

A UNIQUE IDEA—SEND FOR ONE.

The Edwardsburg Starch Co., Montreal, Toronto and Cardinal, are sending out a small sample of their "Crown" brand pure table syrup. This sample is a model, in miniature, of the original 2-lb., 5-lb., 10-lb. and 20-lb. pails. The idea is a good one, as the merchant can see at a glance exactly the style of the package, and at the same time obtain a sample of the syrup.

These small pails are sent out in patent wooden screw top mailing boxes, and every subscriber of The Grocer dropping a postal card to the Edwardsburg Starch Co., at 164 St. James street, Montreal, will have one o fthese unique samples mailed to them promptly.

DEPARTMENT STORES' TAXATION.

The grocers' section of the Toronto Retail Merchants' Association Monday night passed a resolution asking the special committee of the Legislature on the assessment bill to increase the business tax assesment rate of departmental stores to 75 per cent. The reason given for this resolution was that the retail merchants are paying such large amounts for local improvements in the streets. A resolution was also passed warning shoppers to be careful in purchasing alleged patent medicines, offered for sale in some grocery stores, which druggists do not sell. George Good presided.

COFFEE SITUATION.

IN their last weekly statistical report of February 18th, Willett & Grey summarize the coffee situation as follows: During the past week the markets have been in a very unsettled state The Europeans have bought from this side a very large quantity of options in their own markets at top prices; and as Havre and Hamburg are holding record stocks, these heavy purchases at high prices do not strengthen their position. Some 40,000 to 50,000 bags coffee have been shipped and partly arrived from Hamburg and Havre to New York and a considerable quantity has been purchased there for later shipment to this side.

The position of Europe which was opposed to the advance, and the markets there were bearish during Autumn and Winter at lower prices, being now reversed at high prices, is not particularly promising, as the capital employed in the coffee trade over there had already been impaired by the previous experiences when they were constantly bulling coffee in declining markets. In this country, while the interior trade never showed any particular desire to buy during the whole crop year, still the deliveries for the first seven months of the season are 300,000 bags larger than the same period last season so that the coffee has gone into the country on direct importations from Brazil in larger quantities than the trade had been aware of. Just now, with the unsettled state of affairs, it is not likely any particular buying power will develop. The local market is so largely traded in by outsiders that coffee people will probably await to see how values will settle.

INQUIRY AND COLLECTION BUREAU.

AMONG the projects under consideration of the Montreal Grocers' Association mentioned in these columns a few weeks ago was that of the formation of an Inquiry and Collection Bureau. Since that time such interest has been manifested in the project that it is now proposed to go deeper into the matter and discuss the subject more thoroughly.

Before going any further, credit for the project now on the table of the Montreal Grocers' Association should be given to its energetic secretary, J. A. Beaudry, who spares neither time nor trouble, to assure its success.

The fact that this project is the work of the secretary of the Montreal Grocers' Association, does not mean that its application may apply to that trade alone. In fact, it interests every merchant who sells on credit. Butchers, bakers, grocers, dry goods men, milkmen, all, would derive benefit from the formation of an Inquiry and Collection Bureau.

It may be interesting to know, first, that in the city of Montreal the retail grocers alone lose from $200,000 to $250,000 every year through bad debts.

Let us suppose that the Provincial Government or the City Council should take upon themselves to impose a new revenue tax on the retail grocery trade of Montreal, to the amount of $200,000. There would not be enough stones on the Island of Montreal to throw at the heads of the promoters of such a move. The grocers would agitate and unite themselves so strongly, that the tax would never be imposed.

However, the grocers are really paying the tax of $200,000 every year, without being compelled to do so, and if they pay it, it is only because they give credit without any information, and cannot spend time collecting bad debts.

An Information Bureau that would enable the merchants to give credit intelligently, and would at the same time collect the accounts the merchants were unable to collect themselves, would prevent the grocers writing to the account of loss, the yearly amount of $200,000, which now remains in the hands of delinquent customers.

At present the retail merchant gives credit upon the appearance of the customer. He has to give credit not only because his competitors are giving credit, but because in many districts the buyer who pays cash is the exception.

The appearance of a customer; the position of the husband, does not mean much as to stablity. A man may be well dressed and not pay his tailor. A woman may be elegantly dressed, and may owe big bills to the dressmaker and dry goods man. The house may be well furnished and the furniture not paid for. The man may draw a big salary, and the family may spend twice his revenue. It is impossible to rely upon appearances.

It is much more important for the merchant to know if the customer who asks for credit is good or bad pay, to find out the way he pays his creditors. That is the object of the Information Bureau; to tell the merchants if Mr. X pays, or does not pay; if he pays on short or long terms, and also what is the limit of credit to give him. The bureau inquires for the merchant and gets him information which the merchant would have many difficulties in obtaining for himself.

The bureau might be at the same time a collecting agency. The retail merchant knows by experience how difficult it is sometimes to collect the accounts of even reliable people. The merchant who has a certain number of customers who do not pay regularly, knows what to do when big bills fall due. If one way or another he cannot meet his obligation, he knows what precious time he has to spend to get his money back. How many bankruptcies have happened which would not have occurred if the merchant could have collected what was due him, without leaving his business?

It is an Inquiry and Collection Bureau such as aforesaid that the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association is seeking to establish, and the proposition fathered by Mr. Beaudry certainly deserves the most careful consideration of all merchants engaged in supplying the consuming public.

A feature not touched upon by Mr. Beaudry, but which has in the public press and The Canadian Grocer received discussion, is the change that is necessary in the law, making it possible to collect from civil servants. Why Government employes should be exempt from paying their grocery, butcher, baker, etc., bills has never been satisfactorily explained, and the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association can find themselves occupied while engaged in their commendable work, in furthering some scheme to make a change in this unjust law.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TARIFF QUESTIONS.

FOLLOWING are the questions which the Chamberlain tariff commission sent out to the manufacturers in Great Britain. As they will doubtless interest business men in Canada they are herewith reproduced.

1. State the nature of your trade or trades, and whether your sales are for the (a) home, (b) foreign, or, (c) the colonial markets.

2. What was the weekly average number of persons employed by you during 1903, distinguishing, if possible, men from women and children?

3. What are the principal articles that you manufacture for the home trade in respect to which you experience foreign competition?

4. Are any articles similar to those manufactured by you imported into this country below your cost price? If so, please state particulars as far as you can.

5. Have you any information leading you to conclude that such imported articles are placed upon the British market at or below the normal cost of production in the country of origin? If so please state particulars as far as you can.

6. Is your trade subject to adverse competition from foreign countries in consequence of any difference in the rates of wages, in the hours of labor or in other respects? If so, please give such particulars as you can.

7. Has your export trade suffered in recent years by the operations of the tariff of any country? If so, please state your experience.

8. What amount of the reduction of the tariff of any country would enable you to compete successfully within that country with commodities made therein similar to those you manufacture?

9. What is your experience in respect of foreign competition in the colonies in your trade?

10. Do you suffer any disadvantages from operations of the patent laws or registration laws in other countries? If so, please state particulars.

11. Please state whether you would be willing to furnish to the commission any further detailed information; and, if so, on what subjects.

The address of the secretary of the commission is 7 Victoria street, London, S.W.

BRANTFORD GROCERS DINE.

The Brantford grocers and butchers held a very jolly dinner at the American hotel last week. The speakers were Messrs. Gardner, C. B. Heyd, M.P., W. B. Wood, D. B. Wood, J. P. Hoag, Stewart and Smith, of Hamilton, Alds. Hartneau and Westwood, Fred Harp, and Mr. Wooderoft of Hamilton. Songs were sung by Messrs. J. D. Leddell, L. R. Wooderoft, Cliff. Todd and Sam Burnley.

The officers of the association are Henry Moore, president; H. A. Foulds, vice-president; Fred Harp, secretary; and A. L. Vanstone, treasurer.

The banquet committee consisted of Messrs. Foulds, chairman; Harp, secretary; Bloxham, Brohman, Gress, Vanstone, Harris and Moore.

PURE GOLD TALK.

No. 6.

We almost fear to announce a new grocer's specialty. Perhaps it is an ignoble jealousy, but to us it smacks more of business rectitude. We are making PURE GOLD SALAD POWDER to be retailed at 10 cents.

The contents of the package make an imperial quart of delicious Salad Dressing. It is just as sure as we are in business that in preparing this article we have given some one's cupidity a spin, and we look from now on for another Salad Dressing Powder, and when it comes it will almost surely resemble in its dress our package.

Nobody ever heard of the Pure Gold Company's being in the ranks of imitators.

We don't lay claim to having all the genius there is in the world in the service of The Pure Gold Company, but we do claim to be pioneers in many worthy grocery specialties.

This Salad Dressing Powder—have you ordered it yet? If not, do so. You will delight a good many prized customers, and at the same time cement your connection.

ENQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade received recently at the Canadian Government office in London, Eng.:

1. A well-known ropework company are open to appoint a firm to represent them for the sale of their goods throughout Canada.

2. A gentleman with experience of the African market is seeking the agency for the United Kingdom of a Canadian shipper of wood work for building construction.

3. Inquiry comes from Russia for the addresses of some good Canadian firms exporting frozen salmon and lard.

4. A Dutch manufacturer of household and toilet soaps desires to get into touch with importers in Canada, and would reserve to reliable buyers the monopoly of various brands.

The following were among the inquiries received at the Canadian Section of the Imperial Institute, London, S.W.

5. The manufacturers of decorated wall paper and fabric specialities wish to introduce their goods into Canada, and would like to hear from Canadian firms interested.

6. A firm of merchants and exporters in the Midlands possessing a large connection invites correspondence from Canadian firms seeking buying or selling agents.

7. A firm in Belfast would like to represent, upon a commission basis, a first-class Canadian manufacturer of Furniture able to handle export trade.

8. A firm of manufacturers of high-class confectionery is open to appoint representatives in Montreal, Toronto, Halifax, St. John and Winnipeg.

9. A firm of general agents who claims good connection among the grocery and provision trade, nvite offers from Canadian shippers either upon a commission basis or as actual buyers.

10. A company manufacturing ochres, oxides and colors, wish to hear from Canadian importers.

11. The manufacturers and shippers of oils of various kinds and greases, would like to obtain a share of Canadian trade.

[The names of those making inquiries may be obtained from the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

VEXATIOUS REGULATIONS.

The Brokers' Association of Toronto is making a strong effort to induce the Minister of Customs to abolish the regulation requiring the production of the English Custom house certificate to secure free entry of tea bought in London. It is claimed that the Customs regulation in this respect gives great trouble to English shippers besides putting them to very considerable expense, which of course is transferred to the Canadian buyer in the cost of the tea. The requirement of the certificate, it is urged moreover, serves no good purpose whatever, and the people engaged in the tea trade see no good reason why in matters of inspection, teas imported from London should be subjected to different treatment from teas imported direct from Ceylon, India, China or Japan.

GREEN FRUITS

National Conference.

AT the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association at Bridgewater, it was mentioned that the Dominion Minister of Agriculture had received a communication from leading fruit growers of Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, asking him to call together at Ottawa a conference of representative fruit growers from all the provinces of Canada to discuss matters of national interest; such matters as might call for legislation by the Federal Parliament or matters that might require unanimous action on the part of the fruit growers of this country. In this connection Mr. U. A. MacKinnon, chief of the fruit division, Ottawa, referred to the advisability of concerted action regarding such subjects as transportation, legislation, uniformity of packages, etc., and said that Hon. Sydney Fisher and Prof. Robertson would welcome a full discussion of the proposal and an expression of opinion from the Nova Scotia and other provincial Fruit Growers' Associations. The matter will accordingly be taken up by a committeee of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association, some members of which suggested the formation of a Canadian Pomological Society of national character and scope.

North of Ireland Market.

Once again the attention of the fruit division, Ottawa, has been called to the excellent market that exists in the north of Ireland for first-class Canadian fruit and other food products. This time it is Mr. R. Andrews, 56 Clifton Park avenue, Belfast, who mentions the fact that this market is not properly cultivated by Canadian shippers, and who desires to be put in communication with some of these gentlemen. He is in a position to do general commission trade, and would undertake agency for Canadian manufacturers as well as produce in the north of Ireland, where he has good connections.

A similar request has also been received from Albert Cabaret, 77 Bd. Gouvion-St.-Cyr, Paris, France. Mr. Cabaret is prepared to handle all lines of Canadian goods, including fruit, of which considerable quantities have been exported to France this season.

Best Kind of Strawberries.

W. T. MACOUN, Horticulturist of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, says: "The strawberry is, undoubtedly, the most popular fruit in Canada. It is also one of the most, if not the most, profitable fruit to grow. There is, however, a great difference in the productiveness, firmness, appearance, and quality of different varieties, and the profits in growing this fruit will depend largely upon the kinds grown. At the Central Experimental Farm nearly 400 named varieties have been tested during the past 16 years, and a large number of unnamed seedlings. This long and wide experience with varieties makes it possible to recommend certain kinds which have proven superior to others. After having discarded a large number of varieties, a three years' test was made with 110 kinds. Taking the average for the three years, the most productive variety, the Mele, yielded at the rate of 12,709 pounds per acre, and the variety 25th on the list, Arkansas Traveller, yielded at the rate of 7,629 pounds to the acre, a difference of 5,080 pounds per acre between the best and the poorest of 25 varieties. Among the best varieties, both as regards productiveness and other points of merit, are: Buster, Glen Mary, Sample, Warfield, Greenville, Bisel, Marie, Baderwood, Lovett, Barton's Eclipse, Rubach, Daisy, Afton, Williams, Thompson's Late, Enhance, Stevens' Early, Howard's No. 41, and Mele, the last-named variety having proved the most productive of all. It is, however, a little under the size, and rather soft."

Cold Storage Warehouse Burned.

About one o'clock Saturday morning fire was discovered in the large new cold storage warehouse owned by the Apple and Produce Cold Storage and Forwarding Company, and the entire contents, together with all its new valuable machinery, is a total loss. Nothing but the bare walls are left standing. The building was just completed last Fall. The company has a capital stock of $100,000. The total loss is about $60,000, covered by insurance.

Fraudulent Apple Packing.

Another Ontario fruit man was fined at Winnipeg last week for attempting to sell apples in this market which had been falsely marked and packed. The offender had not even the excuse that he was ignorant of the law to offer and his guilt was even increased by the fact that he had been warned for the same offence before. If we are to judge the Ontario fruit shippers by the proportion of them fined here for dishonesty of this kind the opinion would be formed that more than an ordnary percentage of them are worth watching in business; and if we are to judge Ontario business men generally by the standard which this would set up for the fruit men, there is danger that the good opinion of them heretofore held will have to be considerably modified. The number and extent of the frauds exposed by the operations of the inspectors working under the Fruit Marks Act has been such that the public may well believe that before the Act went into effect honest packing was the exception rather than the rule. It is to be hoped that the recent Police Court experiences of Ontario shippers to this market, of which the above mentioned case is a sample, will have the effect of stopping the dishonest practices which, if continued, can only have the one effect of driving Ontario out of this market altogether.—Winnipeg Commercial.

Apple Barrel Staves.

A leading Guelph apple shipper writes the fruit division, Ottawa, that he can use from 12,000 to 15,000 barrels every year, and that it is his intention to buy the staves and make his own barrels hereafter. He says: "The trade will have to make great preparations, because all staves in the country will now be very green wood, and I should specially warn your department to urge all stave dealers to get drying kilns working so that stock will be O.K. when needed."

Canadian Apples in France.

That only the finest qualities of firm fruit will bring profitable returns when exported to Europe is again made manifest. Writing to Mr. W. A. MacKinnon, chief of the fruit division, Ottawa, M. W. Richaux of the firm of Champagne Freres, Limited, Paris, says: "In August and September last we had occasion to write you and take advantage of your kindness to obtain information about the apple business in your country. As was forseen and for the first time, this year Canadian and American apples have come to France in important quantities, on account of the French crop being almost a complete failure, and we are glad to say that the best goods have obtained satisfactory prices, although the market is not so very good at present. We are, however, of opinion that it will soon recover, and that prices will rise again, but what we want in France are the best qualities and hard and strong apples, that will arrive in good condition. Any arriving in somewhat doubtful condition will sell very much lower. We have started this business ourselves, and hope to receive some Canadian apples and obtain satisfactory results."

Fruit Men Anxious.

Fruit farmers in the Niagara district are beginning to feel anxious about the crop prospects for next season, says the St. Catharines Standard. The extremely cold weather is causing some of the plum trees to burst open in the trunks, and it is feared the peach trees may have suffered from the frost. However, there is nothing definitely known yet, as to this, and it may be that the peach crop has not been killed any worse than is usually reported in the Winter time. So much ice as there is at present on the land is regarded as a dangerous element for the strawberries, as well as the wheat.

THE COWAN CO. EXHIBIT.

At the recent Food Fair at the Carsley Co., Montreal, the display made by the Cowan Co., Toronto, was one of the most attractive and the young lady demonstrators were kept busy serving delicious cocoas and chocolates. The opinion that goods "made in Canada" are worthy of patronage and support by the consuming public, judging by recent observations, is being confirmed and strengthened more every day. The Cowan Co. are known as one of the leading manufacturers of Canada engaged in the manufacture of goods recognized particularly as subject to foreign competition, but it is also felt in the case of this company that the old saying of "a prophet being not without honor save in his own country" is a fallacious one, as their goods speak creditably for themselves throughout the land.

Territorial Grain Growers.

AT the conference of the Territoritorial Grain Growers' Association in Winnipeg last week the delegates present, after full consideration of the General Inspection Act, unanimously decided to recommend to the Dominion Government that the Act be amended in the following particular:

That section 4 of the schedule, relating to wheat and other grains grown west of Lake Superior, be amended so as to provide that the Western Grain Standards Board, in addition to the present method, shall be called together on five members making a written request for a meeting to the chairman of the board.

That the following recommendation, in regard to the carrying out of the present provisions of the Act, be made to the Honorable the Minister of Trade and Commerce: (1) That all persons, appointed as members of the Western Grain Standards Board, be resident within the Manitoba Inspection Division. (2) That a majority of the persons appointed as members of the Western Grain Standards Board, be producers of grain.

That the Provincial Government of Manitoba and the Government of the Northwest Territories be respectfully informed that this conference strongly recommend that the three members of the Survey Board, provided for in the General Inspection Act for the Manitoba Inspection Division as to be nominated by each of them, be so nominated by them on the recommendation, when practicable, of the producers of grain.

Cereals in Trinidad.

GORDON, GRANT & CO., in their commercial review dated Port of Spain, Trinidad, January 28th, say: We have to report a firm and steady market for all American foodstuffs with stocks much lighter than usual. The s.s. Grenada arrived two days ago with the usual supplies for which full prices are being obtained viz.: Bakers' flour $6.25 to $6.50 for bags and barrels respectively, extras $6.10 to $6.25 as to brand and supers $5.25 to $5.50—as to grade—$3.90 to $4 corn meal and $2.60 to $2.75 for imported bread and crackers. Demand is good and values are likely to be well maintained for some time. The Italian liner Piemonte from New York is due. There is very little doing in imported yellow rice and the position is unchanged. The London steamer Sibun brought 400 tons chittagong—the bulk of which has been stored and stocks of all descriptions are ample. Split peas are selling very slowly but fresh Urhur Dal is wanted—Koli and Mussur are not enquired for at present. For oats and oil meal there is a steady enquiry but American corn is neglected.

Wild Scene in Wheat Pit.

A SENSATIONAL advance of 4 1-4 cents a bushel was scored in 30 minutes on the Chicago wheat market Saturday by wheat for May delivery. The phenomenal price of $1.07 was reached, the chief incentive being rumors of the Russo-Japanese war spreading to other nations. Talk of stoppage of wheat shipments from Russia and from Argentine was a secondary factor. Compared with Friday the final figures on Saturday were three cents higher for May wheat and two and one-fourth for July. May corn went up three-fourths to seven-eights of a cent; oats three-fourths and provisions 15 to 37 1-2.

The pit was the centre of uproar and clamor, which never ceased or abated until the gong announced its close. The nerves of every trader were at the highest tension every minute of the session. The advance was irresistible. Armour, who for months has been the almost undisputed monarch of the wheat pit, sold millions of bushels of the grain, but for every bushel offered there were two demanded by the professionals or outside traders, imbued with a desire to buy that was little, if anything, less than frantic. The market hesitated somewhat at the outset, and a momentary calm prevailed, but suddenly a buying wave struck the pit. It fairly swept brokers off their feet. By leaps and bounds the May price, which slipped from $1.04 at the opening to $1.02 5-8, went soaring up to $1.07, or over four cents above the close the previous night. Pandemonium accompanied the advance. Brokers rushed madly back and forth between the pit and the telegraph counters with their hands full of orders. These, because of the state of the trade, it was almost impossible to fill. The crowds which packed the visitors' gallery were dazed by the wild scenes that were enacted on the floor below.

20,000,000 Barrels Flour.

FLOUR exports from the United States in 1903 were larger than in any preceding year in the history of its commerce and aggregated practically 20,000,000 barrels, says the Interstate Grocer. The value of the flour exports also exceeded that of any preceding year, with the exceptions of 1892 and 1893, when the value slightly exceeded that of 1903, but the quantity exported was materially less. The total number of barrels of flour exported from the United States in the fiscal year 1903 was 19,716,634, valued at $73,756,404, while in 1893 the number of barrels was 16,620,339, but the value was $75,494,347, prices of that year being materially higher than those of 1903.

In the calendar year 1903, ending with the month of December, the total exports of flour amounted to 19,551,411 barrels, valued at $75,188,050. This calendar year statement gives the very latest figures of flour exports, and a comparison of these figures with the wheat exports of the calendar year indicates that considerably more than one-half of the wheat exported in the calendar year 1903 was turned into flour before exportation. The total value of the wheat exports of the calendar year 1903 was $53,329,441, and that of the flour exports, $75,188,050.

Mill Lacks Fuel.

The flour plant of the Ogilvie Milling Company, Winnipeg, had to close down last week as a result of the fuel scarcity caused by the snow blockade along the railways. The flour mill, employing about 150 men, has not been able to turn a wheel since Thursday morning, and the oat mill is running on half-time, power being contributed from some lightwood fuel.

Manitoba Grain Marketed.

H. D. METCALFE, of Montreal, who has just returned from an extensive trip throughout the Western States and the Canadian Northwest, states to the daily press that the prospects for export trade in Manitoba wheat this Spring are not very bright, owing to the fact that there is little held by dealers in Winnipeg, and from all the information he could gather farmers have marketed their crops pretty well. Consequently, he says, when the weather does moderate, the supply to come forward from the interior will be limited. The supply of oats and barley left in that country is small, and therefore the shipments this way in the Spring will fall short of a year ago.

Mr. Metcalfe says the adoption of the option trading in wheat by the Winnipeg Grain Exchange will be a great benefit to Canadian exporters, as they will be able to hedge their cash deals in the Canadian markets, instead of sending their money to the United States, as they have been doing for many years past.

Morden Mill Burned

SHORTLY before midnight on Wednesday of last week the flour mill on the west end of the town of Morden, Man., was burned to the ground. The building was owned by Mr. C. F. Heckels, and was leased for a term of years to Mr. I. Snider. Mr. Heckles' loss will be from $10,000 to $12,000, with $5,000 insurance. Mr. Snider's loss of $1,200 or $1,500 is fully covered by insurance.

The structure was an old frame one, being built 20 years ago, but the mill had lately been furnished throughout with the most expensive and up-to-date machinery procurable. The fire started in the engine room and before the fire apparatus could be taken through the deep snow the whole building was doomed.

National Granaries Advocated.

Mr. R. A. Yerburgh, M.P., speaking of the food supply in the time of war at the Imperial Industries Club, London, advocated the storing in the country of 10,000,000 quarters of corn in national granaries, meeting the cost by a registration duty of a shilling on corn.

Sir Edgar Vincent, M.P., looked with the deepest apprehension on the British food supply from America, Russia, and Argentina. A sensible modification of the fiscal impost would develop the resources of our own Empire in the best way.

Professor Maldon said the 4,000,000 acres of potatoes made it impossible to starve England in any length of a siege.

The chairman said in view of the present way the Government should not only lay in large stores of food, but place such a tax on wheat as to induce British farmers to till the millions of idle acres.

Australia's Good Harvest.

A cable from Australia says: There will be no imports of wheat or flour required this year, the Australian harvest having proved sufficient for all local requirements and leaving a few million bushels available for export. This has necessitated American vessels coming in ballast to Australia for coal, but the reduction of 1s. per ton in the selling price will assist in lessening the losses sustained by charterers.

Much of the Australian wheat is going to Japan, together with heavy shipments of lead and coal. The promise of a good season 1904-5 is causing preparations for considerably extending the wheat area in the Commonwealth.

Gold Medal for Swiss Food.

P. McIntosh & Son, have just received word from their English agents reporting that Swiss Food has been awarded the gold medal at the Colonial Products Exhibition recently held in Liverpool where it attracted considerable attention.

P. McIntosh & Son are naturally very much gratified at this recognition, particularly as Swiss Food was only introduced on the English market three or four months ago.

Grain Growers' Requests

At a meeting of the grain growers in Winnipeg last week the following resolutions were passed: "That the following recommendations in regard to the carrying out of the present provisions of the grain act be made to the Minister of Trade and Commerce: First, that all persons appointed as members of the western grain standards board be resident within Manitoba inspection division. Second, that the majority of persons appointed as members of the western grain standards board be producers of grain.

That the Provincial Government of Manitoba and the Government of the Northwest Territories be respectfully informed that this conference strongly recommends that three members of the survey board, provided for in the general inspection act, for the Manitoba inspection division to be nominated by each of them, be so nominated by them on the recommendation, when practicable, of the producers of grain.

Flour and Bread Soaring.

A PRESS despatch from Montreal on Monday reports flour as quoted there at $1.20 a barrel more than the price at same date a year ago. First grades sell at $5.40 and seconds at $5.10. As a result the Master Bakers' Association have made a further advance in the price of bread. After next Monday small loaves will sell at nine and eleven cents, instead of eight and nine cents, and large loaves at 18 and 20 cents, instead of 16 and 18 cents. Those are the prices set now, but they are not likely to stand if flour goes on advancing at the rate of ten cents a day, as it has the last three days. The Lake of the Woods Milling Company are actually shipping wheat from Fort William back to their mills at Keewatin. That unusual state of affairs is accounted for by the fact that since the close of navigation the western farmers have delivered very little wheat, but have acted on the belief that as good milling grain is scarce the price is likely to advance still higher. The Executive of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company foresaw the possibility of the present situation and prepared for it by storing the grain at Fort William. Now they are simply drawing on their reserves instead of being forced to pay the high price in order to keep their big mills at Keewatin running.

Mill for Norwich.

Cawthorpe & Co. are proposing to build a grist mill near the West Station, Norwich, Ont. The building to be of brick, with stone foundation, fitted with the most modern machinery, with a capacity of 75 barrels per day, at a cost of from $10,000 to $12,000 with a railway siding at the door.

Cereal Notes.

Montreal master bakers have decided to increase the price of bread by 2 cents for six pound loaf.

"Force-thoughts"

BY SUNNY JIM

II.

I READ a book the other night which told of a busy man who planned to spend a certain evening at home with his family—because he felt he'd been neglecting them.

¶ At supper his mind was on an important transaction with a firm in Calcutta. All during the evening he was engaged mentally in working out that same Calcutta deal, and when the "home" evening was over he had just time to rush back from Calcutta to say goodnight to his family. Which suggests several things.

¶ That you are in reality where your thoughts are.

That wherever you are, you'd better be there just then.

It's the way to eat your breakfast, for instance. Don't eat your breakfast with your mind at the office, or when you get to the office your breakfast will be on your mind.

¶ Even a breakfast of "FORCE" is helped by really "being present" while you eat it.

Be Sunny!

Yours truly,

Sunny Jim

FAMOUS COFFEE DEALS.

ONE of the first attempts in coffee history to corner the commodity, says the New York Times, and which is now especially interesting, occurred in 1887, when a panic was precipitated on June 13 of that year, and three firms in that city suspended because a Brazilian syndicate which had been upholding the market preliminary to a corner had to let go. B. G. Arnold & Co., Mackay & Small, and Norton, Weyl & Bevan suspended with liabilities reaching approximately $1,000,000. Utter disruption was prevented only by the timely action of Joseph J. O'Donohue and W. H. Crossman & Brothers, who purchased some 200,000 bags and checked the downward course of values in a market which had sagged of its own weight.

From 1880 to 1886 the amount of coffee produced had been quite sufficient to meet the consumptive demands of the world, but early in the latter year a syndicate composed of New York and Havre capitalists obtained possession of about 50,000 bags, and within a year are said to have cleared a profit of 7½ cents a pound. But the Brazilian syndicate refreed to above was fooled in its calculations by the larger crop of 1888, and precipitated the famous slump of June 13, 1887, when prices dropped over night about 7 cents a pound. Another squeeze was also attempted in September, 1888, by Hamburg and American bulls, but the attempt was a dismal failure.

History again repeated itself in September, 1901, when another failure to corner the supply completely failed. An endeavor was made to advance prices by a bull clique said to include Skiddy, Minford & Co., W. H. Crossman & Brothers, and Gruner & Co. The receipts at Rio and Santos had been running low for some time, but suddenly they increased to the highest on record. Vigorous opposition had been shown by the Havre market, and on September 17 the September option dropped from one-half to three-quarters of a cent on the local exchange, and 75,000 bags were sold in Havre, Hamburg, London, and Brazil within a short time.

The Kaltenbach fiasco was another notable instance of a coffee corner which it was impossible to hold. The central figure in this operation was George Kaltenbach, a well-known speculator in the coffee trade who lived in Paris, and who was reputed to be worth 60,000,000 f. His first deal was in September, 1891, when he succeeded, with the aid of three operators in Havre, Hamburg and Antwerp in breaking the corner in September options, in the New York market, causing prices to drop from 17.25 cents to 10.80 cents. The syndicate then changed its tactics and commenced to buy coffee in all the markets of the world.

The bulls became scared and sold extensively, and with consumption increased by low prices ruling, the market gradually advanced. When values reached about 15 cents a pound the syndicate liquidated its holdings and took profits. Kaltenbach alone continued to bull coffee and increase his holdings, but the others turned bears. Then came news of serious damage to the coffee crops, and as the unfavorable reports were circulated from time to time, he bought more and more. His profits at the time were said to be $1,000,000, but it was afterward learned that he had never actually carried more than 300,000 bags. Then came the collapse of the Kaltenbach corner in May, 1903, which involved thirty firms in Havre, Hamburg, and Rotterdam. It was estimated that only about one-fourth of Kaltenbach's holdings had been actual coffee, the remainder consisting of futures and options. He was unable to furnish T. M. Parr & Co., his New York agent, with requisite margins, and the coffee held for his account was consequently thrown on the market, resulting in a heavy decline in prices and the failure of T. M. Barr & Co.

Guzman Blanco, president and dictator of Venezuela, also planned a big coffee corner. He was reckoned as worth $20,000,000. In April, 1895, he was residing in Paris. He purchased about 200,000 bags of spot coffee, which were deposited in Havre warehouses, while his line of futures was extensive. Reports of cholera in Rio, combined with estimates of reduced crops in Brazil, made it look for a time as though the oft-attempted coffee corner had arrived, but the regular coffee slump which comes ever so often made its appearance and all the vigorous attempts were for naught.

The Lewisohn deals should also properly be mentioned as among the prospective coffee coups which have gone astray, although they were not attempting a corner, but simply investing with idea of holding their coffee for two or three years. It was in March, 1891 that they, together with some of the Standard Oil people, tried to control the surplus of coffee. They were supposed to have an understanding with the Rothschilds, who were heavy creditors of the Brazilian Government. The "metal element," as the Lewisohns were called, bought extensively and put up prices a cent a pound from January to March. Their purchases included both spot coffee and futures, and from time to time they succeeded in advancing values temporarily. The enormous crops of coffee which were produced in those years gradually dragged the market down, and W. H. Crossman & Brother, who were the bear leaders, are credited with large profits, while the Lewisohns carried their coffee for a long time and lost heavily.

CONSUMPTION OF COCOA INCREASING.

STEPHEN L. BARTLETT, of Boston, general agent for the United States and Canada for Bensdorp's "Royal Dutch" cocoa and chocolates, paid a flying visit to Montreal last Friday, 19th inst. A Grocer representative had the pleasure of a brief interview with Mr. Bartlett at the Windsor. Mr. Bartlett expressed himself as being satisfied with the increase in the consumption of high class cocoa in Canada, considering the fact that Canadians as a whole are not given so much to drinking this healthy beverage as the people of the United States. "You Canadians are drinkers of tea while on our side of the line we confine ourselves largely to coffee, and the transition in taste from coffee to cocoa is not so hard as from tea to cocoa, moreover an educative feature with us towards the consumption of cocoa, chocolate, etc., is the soda fountain in Summer and the hot drinks department of our drug stores and restaurants in Winter. Why we have in the city of Boston drug stores dispensing gallons of our Royal Dutch cocoas and chocolates daily. Another thing tending to the more general use of cocoa with us is that children are served with it more frequently and this feature is bound to leave its impress on the rising generation. There is hardly any well-to-do family in our country where cocoa or chocolate is not served once or twice a week, and it is this use by the better classes that has increased the sale of such cocoas as are recognized in the first rank. My experience with Canadian trade has taught me that the time is bound to come when, with the era of prosperity through which your country is passing, the consumption of high class cocoas will be almost as general as it is with us. May the day come soon!" Mr. Bartlett is represented in Canada by W. H. Dunn, Montreal, M. F. Eager & Son, Halifax, and the A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, and satisfactory business is reported from all sections. Mr. Bartlett is known personally to the jobbing trade of Canada and makes annual visits to the trade.

The Best Are the Cheapest

For twenty years the National Cash Register Company has made the announcement that it could sell a better cash register for less money than any other concern in the world. We have never failed to do this in a single case.

We are the originators of cash registers and have naturally been the target of all other cash register companies. In the face of this competition we did a larger business last year than ever before. This was because our 365,000 users were well satisfied with their "Nationals."

Over two hundred concerns have failed in the cash register business because they could not furnish a cash register without infringing some of our 895 patents.

Some merchants are led to purchase low-grade cash registers by misrepresentation. Later they find they will not give satisfaction. If you are interested in a low-priced machine, don't buy till you see our agent. We guarantee to sell cheaper than anybody else.

FIVE THINGS TO REMEMBER. A "National" takes care of

1. Cash Sales. 2. Credit Sales. 3. Money Received on Account. 4. Money Paid Out. 5. Changing Money.

We employ 1,400 salesmen. If you would like further information, send in attached coupon. Our agent will then call. This puts you under no obligation whatever to buy.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by
John C. Kirkwood,
TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Advertising Success and Failure.

EVERY succeeding year sees a growth in the volume of advertising. Some of those who can't or won't see the business side of advertising now will have their eyes opened next year. Advertising is a new force in getting business and it is not to be expected that it will be employed by everybody straightway. There was a time when the coal stove was looked at askance; when the self-binder was an experiment; when the stem-winding watch was regarded with distrust. The conversion of men to new things is a slow process, and perhaps it is well that it is so.

The men whom it is the most difficult to persuade to take up advertising as a business force are those who have memories of the "good old days" before the advent of modern advertising, and with a fine loyalty to the customs of the past they hold out against the newer order of things.

It must not be thought, however, that it is only the older men who see only waste in using printers' ink to get business. There are many young men who have made up their minds on the subject, and who wouldn't give a snap of the fingers for all the newspaper advertising in the land. To both these classes arguments to support the efficacy and value of advertising are vain.

There are others who are open-minded, willing to be educated in the matter of advertising, with legitimate doubts, with inquiries that as yet have not been answered, and who are not advertising simply because they have not seen that advertising is all that is claimed for it as a business factor. Such men constitute a hopeful class.

There are yet others who have advertised, so they assert, and who have obtained no results; therefore, they say, advertising is "no good." There were men who tried some centuries ago to find a passage to the Far East by way of the Atlantic Ocean. Many of these navigators failed in their efforts, yet Columbus succeeded where they failed,—did not succeed in finding a highway to the Orient, but nevertheless succeeded, and discovered a new world. Because some fail is no reason why there should be failure. Why men fail is a subject for study, for inquiry.

The failures in advertising are traceable. It may be that the newspaper is at fault, in not providing an adequate circulation; it may be that the advertisement inserted in the newspaper was of such a character that results from it could not be expected. Possibly the advertisement remained unchanged week after week, month after month. I have before me an advertisement in an Eastern Ontario newspaper that contains an announcement that a certain hardware dealer is supplying ice cream freezers and fly screens. This advertisement has been running so for months past. In the town where this man does business is another firm in the same general line of business who are known for many miles beyond their natural territory and whose business has grown into wholesale proportions. This latter firm advertise,—a fresh statement each week, and one timed to the needs of each particular season.

An Example of Good Advertising.

Some advertising does not pay because it is not trusted. The merchant who writes the advertising is able, it may be, to prepare a most tempting advertisement; it fairly bristles with well said and well set news; it suggests needs that before were not felt; it crystalizes indecision into action. The buyer finds alas! upon going to this store to make a purchase that the advertisement deceived him; that his expectations are far from being realized; that misrepresentations were made. Confidence is lost not to be restored, and the sinning merchant may use whole pages and a barrel full of adjectives, red ink and pictures, without avail.

Advertising to prove effective must be persistent. The occasional announcement is not impressive. If advertising is good at all, it is good all the time. The man whom one meets and listens to oftenest is the one who is heard and heeded. There are other reasons why advertising does not pay, but there are few reasons, if any, why advertising cannot be made to pay. If this business factor is to be productive, it must be attended to. Neglect in this direction is not only folly,—it is worse, for it is waste. The man in business should work with all his might at his business quite as much as the toilers in other directions. And one of the mighty engines at his command and set for his use is advertising.

Notes.

Mr. J. A. E. McCrea, of Guelph submits several examples of his work for review. In writing he says: "The most I can say for them is that they have been good trade bringers. Have been doing my father's advertising for nearly a year and find it very fascinating work. Your department has been a great help and inspiration."

Mr. McCrea's development as a writer of advertising has been notable. These advertisements he submits have manifestly had their inspiration in the hum of busy trade. I have little adverse criticism to offer. His statement, "they have been good trade bringers" baffles criticism. The Canadian Grocer is glad to learn that this department of Advertising Criticism and Suggestion has done our readers good and thanks Mr. McCrea and others who have testified as to its helpfulness.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Tobacco Chronology.

THE first tobacco cultivated by a European within the present limits of the United States was grown by John Rolfe, at Jamestown, Virginia, in 1612, five years after the settlement of the colony, says the Cigar and Tobacco Journal. As early as 1615 the fields, gardens, streets and public squares of Jamestown were planted with tobacco. It was the one commodity which sustained the struggling settlement, because it readily commanded in reciprocal trade with the mother country, the necessaries of life. It was the medium of exchange and the standard of value.

In New England some tobacco was grown in the decade ending with 1650, but its cultivation was abandoned until the beginning of the nineteenth century, when it gradually revived.

The first cigars consumed in the United States were imported, but the exact date of the importation is not known, because it was included in miscellaneous merchandise.

The separate tabulation of imported cigars was begun in 1804, in which year 4,001,000 were received, principally from the West Indies.

The first cigar manufactories in the United States were established in Connecticut in 1810, but it is believed that the household manufacture of cigars had been carried on in the Connecticut valley for several years prior to that date.

Kentucky followed Connecticut in the establishment of cigar factories. The industry gradually diffused through the state, and into Ohio and Tennessee. In 1825 comparatively small factories were found more or less widely scattered through New York and Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

The first cigars made in the United States were almost exclusively the product of domestic leaf, but the importation of Cuban tobacco began early in the history of the industry, and in 1847 had assumed such proportions as to be tabulated in the customs returns.

The first internal revenue law laying a tax on cigars and other forms of manufactured tobacco was passed to meet in part the exigencies of the civil war, and took effect July 1, 1862. By this act the revenue tax on cigars varied from $1.50 to $3.50 a thousand, according to value.

The organization of the bureau of internal revenue for the collection of taxes under the elaborate system of excise dates from the act of 1862, and statistics of all forms of tobacco since that time are more complete and reliable than formerly.

Substitute for Tobacco.

HOW would you enjoy a pipeful of wood shavings, saturated with a strong solution of pepper, as an after-dinner smoke? Strange as this may seem for a substitute for tobacco, it is, says the Family Doctor, nevertheless used as such by Indians along the Alaskan coast. Their mouths are often made raw by the practice, and the eyesight of many is affected by the strong fumes. It is no uncommon practice among farmers to smoke the leaves of the tomato and potato plants. While these plants both contain a narcotic poison, the smoking of leaves in moderation is harmless. Excessive use, though produces a heavy stupor, from which the smoker awakens with a terrific headache and a feeling of utter exhaustion. Insanity and suicide have often been caused by the immoderate use of these two weeds. Rhubarb, beet, and even garden sage leaves are all smoked by farmers, but are perhaps the least harmful of substitutes for tobacco.

Coltsfoot tobacco is smoked by the rustics in small country places in England, and is called by them "the finest remedy on earth for catarrh." It is simply a powdered form of the leaves of the common coltsfoot a plant found growing wild in chalky soil. The smoke causes no terrible after-effects, although some say that it is injurious to the eyes and it certainly does relieve difficult breathing.

In Sweden a weed found growing in the Alps, called mountain tobacco, is smoked in great quantities. Like coltsfoot tobacco, it is powdered before using, and causes the smoker to become a mental and physical wreck. Dried holly leaves, the bark of the willow tree, and leaves of the stag's-horn sumach are all smoked by the American Indians, and are the least harmful of the substitutes for tobacco. Indian tobacco, or the leaf of a kind of lobelia, is smoked extensively, and is extremely poisonous. Tombeki, another species of lobelia, is largely used in Asia, is smoked in a water pipe and produces a decidedly unpleasant odour. Those who smoke it regularly become intensely nervous and are subject to curious hallucinations.

Coast Cigar Factory.

A NEW industry will be in full blast in Vancouver as soon as the builders can put up a two-storey brick structure on Westminster avenue. Tenders have been called for and will be opened to-day by Blackmore & Son, for the construction of a two-storey building on lot 7, block 24, Westminster avenue, near Princess street, to be occupied as a cigar factory. Mr. J. C. Zoining of Seattle, proprietor of a cigar and cigarette factory in that city, is erecting the building and will occupy it immediately upon its completion.

The ground floor, which will be 25 by 75, will be occupied as a rawleaf tobacco warehouse and storeroom for manufactured goods. Above, the whole floor will be given up to the manufacturing department, and benches for 25 men will be installed. There will be room for five more men should business warrant, as well as for the usual boys for stripping and packing.

To the rear of the main building a cottage will be put up and occupied by the foreman of the factory. The concern is expected to be in full running order before the Summer.

Tobacco Industry in Ireland.

Colonel Everard, of County Meath, who has always taken an active interest in the growth of Irish tobacco, has in contemplation a scheme for the development of the tobacco growing industry in Ireland, which he intends shortly to put into operation. For some four or five years past Col. Everard has been carrying on experiments on his lands at Randalstown, County Meath, in the cultivation of tobacco, with a view to starting it as an industry. Having satisfied himself that tobacco can be grown in Ireland as a commercial supeculation, he inaugurated a movement for the remission of duty on home-grown tobacco, and mainly through his efforts and those of Mr. Wm. Redmond, M.P., the Government at last consented to remit a considerable part of the duty.

Women Deceivers Ever.

A CLERK in a certain Montreal cigar store tells a story, which is chronicled in the Cigar and Tobacco Journal, of two women who came in not long ago, saying they wanted to look at pipes suitable for presentation to a college friend. Pipe after pipe was withdrawn from the case, and a considerable array soon covered the top of the showcase. But every one shown had some characteristic which blocked its sale. In desperation the man behind the counter asked if they would look at cigar cases, tobacco pouches, match boxes or any other of the numerous things in a tobacco store that are suitable for ladies to give to their male friends. No, they would have none of these.

"Cigars?" asked the clerk.

Well, perhaps they would look at some cigars.

They looked, the clerk toiled. The ladies were shown all the leading brands and also some "stickers" that had been in stock for years. They liked the latter best—the labels appealed to them—but alas! there was not a single box that quite met their requirements. Would the clerk be kind enough to show them some cigarettes?

The clerk would—and did. The cigarette assortment was pretty thoroughly gone over, when one lady suggested to the other:

"Wouldn't it be a joke to send 'him' two boxes of those little plain white ones?"

The other agreed, and the sale was made—two boxes of Sweet Caporal cigarettes.

It was the first such experience this particular clerk had had. He was comparatively new at the business, you see. So he took the trouble to do a little investigating, just to satisfy his curiosity. A little judicious inquiry revealed the fact those women had no friend at college. The cigarettes were for their own sweet selves. But they were victims of the departmental store kind of shopping fever, and they just had to overhaul the stock before they could think of buying.

The Perverse Sex.

Speaking of the habit women have in New York of patronizing those dining rooms where smoking is permitted, instead of others in the same restaurant where it is prohibited, a cynical smoker says: "It is merely the perversity of the sex. If I happened to light a cigar on the woman's side of a ferry-boat or in the seat of an open car where smokers were not allowed, any one of these women who sit here contentedly from choice sniffing this tobacco smoke, would probably protest and glare at me until I got out."

DOMINION WHOLESALE GROCERS' GUILD.

THE Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild held its annual meeting in Montreal last week, a reference to which with list of members present appeared in our issue of the 26th ult. The meeting, in point of attendance and as regards to the number and importance of the matters discussed, was one of the best ever held by the Guild.

A large proportion of the matters discussed at this meeting were of such a character as to be of interest to the members of the Guild, relating as they did to certain features of the harmonious working of the different associations composing the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

One of the questions of general interest considered was that of the responsibility of public carriers for goods carried in transit and the fixing of such responsibility upon the last carrier in cases where goods passed through the hands of two or more carriers. A strong committee was formed to consider this and other matters in connection with freights.

The question of canned goods, the basis of packers' prices, terms, contract deliveries, and the position of the wholesale grocers to the Canners' Association was thoroughly gone into and some very warm discussions resulted. The presence by invitation of W. B. Innes and D. Marshall, of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated Co., was an interesting feature in the debate, and the attendance of these gentlemen was an evidence of the interest taken by the wholesale grocers of Canada in this important branch of their trade, and the desire on part of the canners to facilitate the more harmonious workings of all parties. It is reported, though unofficially, that certain objectionable features and discriminations that the trade were subjected to were thoroughly gone into and a basis arrived at for the present season's business.

The meeting passed a cordial vote of thanks to the council of the Montreal Board of Trade for its courtesy in placing its handsome council room at the disposal of the guild for the meeting.

Invitations to hold the next annual meeting of the guild were received from St. John, N. B., Toronto and Winnipeg, but owing to Toronto being more conveniently located than the other cities it was decided that the next meeting would be held there. The members, however, being anxious for an opportunity of visiting Winnipeg, are considering the advisability of holding an extra special session of the guild in Winnipeg towards the end of July, at which the Dominion Exhibition is to be held in that city. Arrangements are being made looking to the attendance of about 100 of the grocers from the various cities in the East.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, H. Laporte, of Montreal; vice-presidents for the various provinces,—Nova Scotia, H. G. Bauld, of Halifax; New Brunswick, C. H. Peters, of St. John; Prince Edward Island, W. H. Aitkin, of Charlottetown; Quebec, Hon. Richard Turner, of Quebec; Ontario, Col. J. I. Davidson, of Toronto; Manitoba, K. Mackenzie, of Winnipeg; British Columbia, J. H. Todd, of Victoria.

The Banquet.

The banquet tendered to the visiting members of the guild by the Montreal section, held at the Windsor Hotel, on the evening of Wednesday, February 24th, was a most enjoyable affair and the various speeches were of a high order, breathing loyalty to the interests of the guild and the trade.

In the absence of L. E. Geoffrion, president of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Association, on account of his recent bereavement, Mayor H. Laporte, president of the Dominion Guild, presided, Albert Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie, ex-president of the Montreal Guild, acting as vice-chairman. Occupying seats on the right and left of the president were Hugh Blain, of the Elby, Blain Co., Toronto; A. C. Cross, of Hall & Fairweather, St. John, N. B.; L. E. Dubuc, of Cote, Boivin & Cie., Chicoutimi, P. Q.; H. C. Beckett, of W. H. Gillard & Co., and K. MacKenzie, of Kenneth MacKenzie & Co., Winnipeg. The following gentlemen were also present: William Logan, Thos. Kinnear, John Sloan, F. W. Humphrey, W. Ince, jr., H. Blain, Toronto; A. G. Olive, Brantford; S. M. Kenney, Belleville; L. M. Smith, J. Scott Chisholm, Halifax; Chas. H. Peters, W. C. Cross, St. John, N. B.; D. Marshall, A. G. Osborne, H. C. Beckett, H. C. Balfour, Hamilton; A. M. Smith, Wm. Turnbull, London; Wm. H. Innes, Simcoe; James F. Smyth, Windsor; R. Mackenzie, Winnipeg; L. E. Dubuc, Chicoutimi; H. Laporte, Albert Hebert, Armand Chaput, L. O. Demers, Z. Hebert, J. Stanley Cook, secretary of the association; Colonel J. B. MacLean, of the MacLean Publishing Co.; Wm. H. Seyler, representing the Canadian Grocer, and F. E. Fontaine, of "Prix Courant."

After justice had been done to the good things provided Mayor Laporte proposed the toast of "The King," and this was loyally honored. The president then called upon Albert Hebert to propose the toast of

THE VISITING DELEGATES.

Mr. Hebert said: "I may say, gentlemen, that I am only a substitute, as vice-chairman, and did not expect that this honor would fall upon me. However, I may say it is with great pleasure that I accept the position and the honor to propose this toast. I can say that the members of the Montreal section of the Dominion Guild are indeed very happy to have had this year such a numerous gathering of members from our sister provinces. We have met quite a number of gentlemen this year whom we knew only by name. We have made new acquaintances and pleasant ones. I need scarcely tell you what pleasure we have had and how pleased we are to see you at these guild meetings, particularly when they are held in Montreal. It is always a very agreeable time for us when we meet you, and there is only one thing that I regret, and that is that at our business meetings we cannot be as unanimous on all subjects that are brought up as we are over 'the wine and walnuts.' I shall not undertake to make a speech, as most of you must be tired of hearing my voice. I hope that none of you think that I am a graphaphone,—if any of you do I may tell you that I am not open to make 'an exclusive contract,' not even with a 10 per cent. rebate. In proposing the toast of 'The Visiting Delegates,' I couple the names of Mr. Blain, Mr. MacKenzie, Mr. Cross, Mr. Beckett, Col. Smith and half-a-dozen others."

Mr. Hugh Blain.

Hugh Blain, of the Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, said: "I thank you, gentlemen of the Montreal Association, for the hearty manner in which you have received this toast, and I feel certain that my colleagues and visiting confreres are as sensitive and appreciative of the honor you do us as I am myself. As there are half-a-dozen other speakers to follow me I will be brief. On an occasion of this kind I feel we ought all to do our duty and though at best only an inferior talker I hope you will bear with me in the few remarks I have to make. I am sure it affords the visiting members great pleasure to be here. The splendid manner in which you have now and are always entertaining us when we come to Montreal, convinces us that we have confreres here of whom we may be justly proud. It is a matter of great gratification to the member coming from a distance to know that in coming to the great commercial metropolis of Canada he feels sure of a right royal reception. I think it is good for us to be here; we are gaining knowledge and experience, and it is good for the trade generally. We should meet more frequently in order that we should know each other's minds. We always go away benefitted by our conferences. I think it is within the knowledge of a great many here to-night that we were not always quite so friendly as we are now, or understood each other so well. I recall coming here in the early days of our guild with Col. Davidson, to see if we couldn't arrange about the selling price of tobacco. We were all selling it at 37½c. when it was costing us 38c. I recall the difficulty we had in arranging this matter. This was about 1882-1884, and since that time we have had an arrangement adhered to faithfully and with a modicum of profit to us. I am glad to know that we are branching out i other directions. We are getting some of the wealthy aristocrats of money, i I may be allowed the expression, in the shape of the manufacturers to look our way, and in seeing with us to-night and at our meetings the two leading members of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated Company, it looks to me as if they feel they can trust themselves amongst the grocers. I am glad to see Mr. Innes and Mr. Marshall here, and think it marks an era in the history of the Grocers' Guild. We have had men come before to our meetings and go away again. The refiners occasionally look in on us, but they don't give us their views in such a generous way as these gentlemen. I hope we can arrange to have some understanding with one another. This is the day of co-operation and though we cannot despise the advantages of a great individuality, yet the day of individual effort is pretty well gone, and that of combinations and co-operation is at hand. We cannot hope to have any great results realized unless we join and work together, shoulder to shoulder. It is only by standing shoulder to shoulder, by being united, that we can hope to elevate the standard of business."

Mr. Kenneth MacKenzie.

Mr. Kenneth MacKenzie, of Kenneth MacKenzie & Co., Winnipeg, expressed great pleasure in replying to the toast just drunk. He took occasion to say that this was his second appearance at the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' annual meeting, and he was interested and pleased with what he had seen and heard. He took occasion to felicitate the chairman on his election to the high office of mayor of the City of Montreal. The feeling of the trade in the West was one of pleasure that Mr. Laporte had been elected to such high honor. "It is an object lesson to business men of other cities of Canada." Mr. MacKenzie reviewed in a few brief words the history of the progress of our country and drew particular attention to the development of his own province and city and the great Northwest—and the pride of his fellow citizens in the progress made, and bespoke a bright future. This development was due to the faith of the people in their own country. He referred to the work in the East of the great Joseph Howe, of Cartier and Laurier in Quebec, and the work of the late Principal Grant, whose distinguished career was a patriotic object lesson. He felt that in the not distant future some man would arise in the West to leave his impress on the history of that portion of our great country. Mr. Mackenzie's remarks breathed a spirit of faith in his country, a loyalty that could not be shaken, as he thought of the great works done by Canada to the astonishment of the people to the South of us and the world at large. The hope of this country is in the energy of its people, the fisherman, the miner, the lumberman, the rancher, the farmer and the artizan, all are bending their energies toward a greater development and a greater future, and we as business men are doing our share to advance the interests of our land and people.

Mr. A. C. Cross.

A. C. Cross, St. John, N. B., was the next speaker, and expressed the pleasure it gave him to be called upon to reply for his city and province. He congratulated the president on his election to the mayoralty of the City of Montreal; it was an honor to the grocery trade, not only of this city but of the Dominion. It augured well for the country when men like his worship the mayor sacrificed a portion of their valuable time for the interests of their fellow citizens, and it was to be hoped the day might soon come when business men should take their share of public responsibilities. "As regard the affairs of the section of Canada I come from," said Mr. Cross, "we are in pretty fair shape. St. John, my native city, is a city of wealth, the Winter port of Canada, with all due deference to Halifax, and we feel we are citizens of no mean city. We have some things of which we are proud, a river that plays antics and reverses the laws of nature, and twice a day turns around and runs up instead of down stream. Then, of course, our lumbering industries, our fisheries and our hardy men, these latter are second only to our women. There are others who think as I do about our good-looking girls,—there's Mr. Peters, he has one too.

"As regards the wholesale grocery trade, down our way we are striving to make it a successful and honored trade. We are pleased to attend these meetings, and hope that the business and plans decided upon will result in extending our respective businesses and be of benefit to the trade and welfare of the country generally. We can arrange our affairs so as to do business pleasantly, and I don't think that a 10 to 15 per cent. profit an exorbitant one. We are only going through the world once and might as well go through pleasantly with each other. Canada is my country, and we, I am sure, are all proud of its success and its bright future."

Mr. T. Kinnear.

T. Kinnear, of T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto, was pleased to see such a large attendance of the members of the guild, —it spoke of a growing interest in its affairs. These meetings were beneficial, and conducted, as they are now, on regular lines, were of value not only to the guild, but the retail trade and consumer as well. Mr. Kinnear enthusiastically referred to a trip he had made through the Northwest last season, and his observations led him to the conviction that we in the East did not realize to the fullest extent the immense possibilities of that part of our great country. He had also made several trips through New Ontario, and was equally impressed with its possibilities.

Mr. Kinnear congratulated President Laporte on his election to the mayor's chair of Montreal. "I like to come down here," said Mr. Kinnear, "among my French Canadian brethren, to see the push and energy on all sides." It reminded him, he said, of when he used to live in Ireland. "We are endeavoring to hold our own with you down here, but it is a hard proposition. I am glad to come down here and talk over things with you, we get to know each other better, and all the little petty jealousies are cast to the winds. There is business for all of us. If I don't sell a carload of sugar one time and you gentlemen get the order, why, I'll get it next time, that's all—I'm not jealous if one of you get the order. We as grocers are helping to build up this country. Our business is a good one, and though the margins of profit are small, there are very few failures. It is a long time since you have heard of a wholesale grocer failing. They generally manage to pay 100 cents on the dollar. I hope we will have the pleasure of seeing you all up in Ontario next year."

Mr. L. E. Dubuc.

L. E. Dubuc, Cote, Boivin & Cie, Chicoutimi, P. Q., replied on behalf of the Quebec association, though in doing so he regretted that the Hon. Richard Turner, who he said was better and more justly entitled to this honor, was unavoidably absent. He might express himself on points not endorsed by his Quebec confreres. However, it was a pleasure for him to be present and take part in the proceedings of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and he always enjoyed and benefitted from the association's gatherings. He stated that in the Lake St. John districts they were principally interested in pulp and blueberries, but in both these lines they considered themselves as in the van. Not being much of a speaker he begged to be permitted just to express his thanks for the honor done him in coupling his name with the Quebec association.

Mr. L. M. Smith.

The next speaker was L. M. Smith, Halifax, of A. & M. Smith & Co., of that city. On behalf of himself and his colleagues from the East he expressed gratification and pleasure at attending the guild meetings, and this splendid banquet. Mr. Smith's remarks regarding Uncle Jonathan's present attitude towards reciprocity with Canada and his dictum to the effect that "we are doing fairly well, thank you, Jonathan, just now," were received with applause and evidently spoke the sentiments of all present. "The time for that reciprocity movement had practically passed. Twenty or thirty years ago we might have considered the entering into a deal, but since then the natural energies of Canadian merchants and public had made us self-sustaining and independent."

Col. Smith.

Col. Smith, of A. M. Smith & Co., London, expressed his thanks for the cordial reception and honor done him in connecting his name with this toast, and on behalf of the London association begged to congratulate the president on his recent honors.

Major John Sloan.

The chairman then called on Major John Sloan, of John Sloan & Co., Toronto, to propose the toast of "The Manufacturing Interests." Mr. Sloan was competent from the point of experience to refer to this subject; he was pretty familiar with the early days of the canning industry, the early struggles from the days of roofless factories to the present time of complete and modern equipments. Mr. Sloan also, on behalf of the Toronto association, voiced the congratulations of that body to the chairman for the high civic honor conferred upon him recently. He then called on Messrs. Innes and Marshall for responses.

Mr. W. P. Innes.

W. P. Innes hoped they would not expect him to make a speech, he would leave that to Mr. Marshall, whose oratorical powers were well known. Mr. Innes was pleased at the patriotic sentiments expressed by every one, and it was this element of patriotism that was so much needed in our country. Mr. Innes gave a few facts in connection with the growth of the canning industry of Canada from the early days when all the work had been hand-work and crude to the present time when they are turning out 40,000 to 50,000 tins per hour. "We have here in Canada what is admitted the finest corn that can be grown —and in this connection I may say that we are educating our people in Great Britain to use this healthy food. It is slow work, as the Englishman has always been under the impression that corn was only fit for cattle food. The Canners' Association is one of the best advertising agencies in Canada, as our goods go broadcast not only to Great Britain but also to South Africa and other British possessions." Mr. Innes hoped that now that the canners and wholesaler grocers were getting to understand and appreciate each other better, they would be able to unite upon some workable plan for better facilitating both trades. He for his part, at least, hoped this effect would result from the present conferences.

Mr. D. Marshall.

D. Marshall, Hamilton, stated that he had never had the pleasure of attending such a gathering before. He was of the opinion that it would be a good thing if every wholesale grocer present had stock in the canning factories; it would be an advantage to every wholesale grocer to have such men as Mr. Hebert taking an interest in the canning industry. He felt that as probably the largest individual buyer of canned goods in Canada, the gentleman in the vice-chair would make his influence felt in the canning industry. Mr. Marshall claimed to be the best advertiser of Canadian canned goods, as his "Canada First" brand going abroad would look after itself all right. "We are getting a good share of the trade abroad as our fine peas are running the French peas a close race. I don't think there is a business that has shown such progress and advancement as the canned goods business. Twenty-two years ago you paid $1.60 for tomatoes, to-day you pay 85c. This is the result of improved machinery and modern methods. We used to get the corn off with a carving knife, to-day we pack from 2,000 to 3,000 cans an hour, or about 70 per minute on the average,—and all without touching by hand. I remember selling all my first year's pack of canned chicken soup, 10 cases, to Mr. Sloan. The following year I sold him also my entire pack, 35 cases. Gentlemen, last year we packed 25,000 cases, and would have packed more had we been able to get the chickens." (A voice—lots of veal around, Marshall).

Mr. St. Clair Balfour.

St. Clair Balfour, of Balfour & Co., Hamilton, spoke of the pleasure and benefit all members derived from attending these annual meetings. He was particularly pleased to see Mr. Innes and Mr. Marshall taking an interest in the internal affairs of the guild. He was sure if they attended regularly they would find the grocers good fellows all the way through. Mr. Balfour referred retrospectively to the early days of the Dominion Grocers' Guild, and paid a high compliment to its first president, Wm. Ince, Sr., who might be aptly called the George Washington of the guild. They all owed a good deal to Mr. Ince for his work in the early days of formation. Mr. Balfour also paid a compliment to Mr. Hebert, another ex-president of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, to whose faithful work they owed a good deal. These meetings were conducive to better fellowship and understanding among the members of the trade and he for one always found them interesting. "These gatherings loosen us up. Why, even my friend Mr. Kinnear feels twenty years younger since attending regularly." Mr. Balfour referred in glowing terms to the general prosperity existing in Canada. His reception in Montreal by the local association was always the best and he hoped they would make it an annual affair here, they were treated so well, so generously. In conclusion, he hoped that the president, Mayor Laporte, would be obliged to fill the chair for some years to come yet, as he had shown himself thoroughly interested in the guild's work, &c., &c.

President Laporte.

President Laporte, in responding to the very hearty applause accorded the mention of his name so frequently, stated that they were all a happy family. "We have never had such a banquet before, one so well attended and so enthusiastically enjoyed. I am sure we have always enjoyed ourselves when with our confreres in Toronto, Hamilton and London, and you have treated us well. We have heard a good many things about the grocers. The grocers of Canada are a good class of people. I never doubted that for a moment. There was a time, I remember reading in a book when a young man, when a grocer was not considered respectable enough for society, in France. Reading this when I first entered a retail grocery store, I felt discouraged and like going back to my old trade, but I knew that that time was past, the grocers were respected and honored the world over. When I read this some 30 years ago I had just entered a retail grocery store and left the nail factory where I was getting $12 a week to receive $3 per week in a Notre Dame street grocery. I worked nine hours a day in the factory and 18 hours a day in the grocery, opening at 5 o'clock in the morning and closing at 11 o'clock at night,—18 hours a day. I thought the poor grocer had a poor chance in the world, but feeling that it was an honest and a good business I stuck to it, and have never regretted the hard work. I have always taken interest in the proceedings of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and served under the guidance of our friend Mr. W. Ince, Sr., Toronto, also under Mr. Hebert, and our old friend the late Mr. W. H. Gillard. I have been accustomed to work with men of honor, men loyal to the interests of our trade. As regards my election to the mayoralty of Montreal, I am pleased and proud to say that my friends in the grocery trade all stood by me, as well as citizens of all classes without regard to business, politics, religion and nationality, and it was then I realized that the time I had given to public and municipal interests was not wasted. Grocers, wholesale and retail, were active in my interests, and no feeling of business entered into the calculation. They felt that the honor was for our trade. I feel, gentlemen, that though I sacrificed a good deal of time in serving the citizens in the capacity of alderman, I never lost a dollar through it. I think a fair portion of a business man's time may be profitably given to the interests of his fellow citizens. I also feel that grocers are the right kind of people to take an interest in public affairs. I thank you again, gentlemen, for the very kinds words you have uttered, and I assure you I appreciate them thoroughly."

Mr. H. C. Beckett.

H. C. Beckett, of W. H. Gillard & Co., Hamilton, on rising was received with applause. "If I had been able to make a speech your applause has certainly taken it all out of me. I thank you for honoring me in this way. I am sure we have all listened with profit to the president's remarks about our trade and it only shows that we can accomplish much if we work steadily and hard at the objects we have as a body set ourselves to do." Mr. Beckett regretted that owing to an accident to Mr. Bristol, the president of the Ontario Guild, he was unavoidably absent. Some malicious people up West have attributed Mr. Bristol's accident to getting his foot caught in a frog on the proposed Canada Grocers' Co.'s Hamilton switch, but he was in a position authoratively to deny this canard. Mr. T. B. Escott, of London, also was absent owing to sudden indisposition. This Mr. Beckett regretted, as he felt these gentlemen could reply better than he was able to do. Mr. Beckett referred to some subjects under discussion as being considered difficult and looking troublesome, but it was only an illusion. By working harmoniously together there was nothing that could not be accomplished.

Mr. J. F. Smythe.

J. F. Smythe, of J. F. Smythe & Co., Windsor, Ont., paid his compliments to the chairman in a few well chosen words, and incidentally referred to the presence at the banqueting board of Col. J. B. MacLean, publisher of The Canadian Grocer, whose paper was in a position to assist the trade in placing all matters of importance before the grocers of Canada. He felt sure that everything pertaining to the trade would be treated with fairness.

Col. J. B. MacLean.

Col. J. B. MacLean briefly responded, stating that he was practically an interloper at the banquet, coming in really to listen to his many friends in the trade gathered around the board. He thanked Mr. Smythe and the gathering for the kind words spoken of The Canadian Grocer, and assured them that all matters pertaining to the grocery and kindred trades would be dealt with in fairness to all concerned. The high standard obtained by The Grocer was a matter of pride with him, and he had pleasure in informing them that it was his aim to obtain the confidence of all the branches of the business. Col. MacLean recalled with pleasure the fact that two of his staunchest friends in the wholesale grocery trade when he established the paper were Mr. Wm. Ince, Sr., Toronto, and Mr. Hebert, Sr., of Hudon, Hebert & Cie, and their friendship, advice and assistance was valuable in the extreme.

The Press.

On behalf of the press, Mr. F. E. Fontaine, representing Le Prix Courant, and Mr. W. H. Seyler, representing The Canadian Grocer, briefly replied.

Mr. H. Stanley Cook.

H. Stanley Cook, secretary of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, briefly thanked the members for the kind words they had uttered on his behalf. He had tried to do his duty, which was an easy one, principally listening to their friendly discussions. He had always received the kindest consideration at the hands of the Grocers' Guild.

Mr. Wm. Logan and the Ladies.

Wm. Logan, of the Davidson & Hay Co., Toronto, responded to the toast of "The Ladies," and in very choice language did full justice to this valued toast. He regretted the absence of Col. Davidson, with whom he had been associated since 1872. This was his first visit to Montreal to attend the guild, though he had in years gone by often had arguments on the lacrosse field with the Montreal teams. Mr. Logan referred to the growth of business in all parts of the Dominion and instanced the development and opening of New Ontario as a field for the enterprising grocer.

Mr. William Turnbull.

Wm. Turnbull, London, also responded to the toast of "The Ladies," paying a high tribute to the women of the Province of Quebec. Mr. Turnbull wittily suggested a blending of the races. If the Scotchman, Englishman and Irishmen of Canada, blended with the handsome and vivacious French-Canadian ladies, could not produce a nation hard to beat there must surely be something wrong—with the men. He was optimistic, however, and of the opinion that in blending properties we can beat the world.

Montreal Wholesale Grocers.

Chas. H. Peters, of Baird & Peters, St. John, N. B., proposed the toast of "The Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Association," and after this had been most enthusiastically honored Albert Hebert replied as follows: "Well, gentlemen, after all the fine speeches that we have heard to-night I do not know what you can expect me to say except to thank you most heartily for all the kind expressions you have made to the Montreal Grocers' Association. You have rather exaggerated our hospitality, and I would rather leave you under the influence of the last speeches you have heard, as at this late hour you might otherwise be troubled with a nightmare. I thank you again for your very flattering remarks to our Montreal Association."

Major Hebert.

Major Zepherin Hebert, of Hudon, Hebert & Cie, in replying said: "You have heard one Hebert, and if I spoke at any length you might think there had been one too many. I am something like the morning star and rise pretty late, and might not be as brilliant. Like my brother, I think you have been most complimentary to our association, and as he has said you have exaggerated our reception. I have noticed that all through a goodfellowship has prevailed, and this means that we can agree on business matters as well. It has been our privilege for some years past to have you visit this city for your deliberations, and we have always considered it an honor and a privilege to have you here, and when it is Montreal's turn again we will be glad to have you."

Mr. Armand Chaput.

Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., was asked to propose the toast to "The Secretary of the Guild." He said that he was without doubt the youngest member of the association present and "I feel," he said, "that these meetings are most conducive to a better understanding of our interests. He also joined his confreres of the Montreal Association in thanking the visiting delegates for their complimentary remarks. He hoped to have the privilege of meeting them in Montreal again in the future. As regards Mr. Cook's services, all present fully appreciated the work of that gentleman."

INTERVIEWS.

Mr. J. F. Smythe of J. F. Smythe & Co., Windsor, Ont., who was a visitor to the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, in an interview with a Grocer representative, stated that the conditions of trade in Windsor and throughout the Counties of Essex and Kent, were favorable. The crops had been good, especially in tobacco, and this year the farmers were getting 100 per cent. more for tobacco than the cost of production. That is, they are getting 11c. per lb. for what practically only costs them 5½c. to produce. "We feel, he says, that they are improving in the manner of cultivating and curing tobacco, and are confident that it will not be long before we will be able to grow tobacco equally as good in quality as that in the South. There is a ready market for all the tobacco that is grown. Business is very prosperous in our neighboring town of Walkerville, with this growing industry, and there is no doubt in the growing trade throughout the country, that the future growth of both Windsor and Walkerville is assured. Collections are all right; we have had few failures and light losses, and as far as our end of the province is concerned I am very optimistic as to the future."

Col. Smith, of A. M. Smith & Co., London, stated that the conditions of trade, so far as his firm was concerned, were good, in fact they had increased their capacity for handling trade by building larger premises next door. Trade conditions were satisfactory and he expressed every confidence of a good future.

Mr. St. Clair Balfour, of Balfour & Co., Hamilton, spoke very encouragingly of the conditions prevailing in the districts in which his firm do business. Reports from all quarters, reaching as far as the Northwest Territories and British Columbia, are bright, and he looks forward to a good year's business.

REBATES.

There was no "rebate" evident at the banquet, full justice was done to the good things provided by Mr. Weldon of the Windsor.

Mr. T. Kinnear, of Toronto, is an impressive, concise and pleasant after dinner speaker, and his remarks were of a heart to heart character.

Mr. H. C. Beckett's trip to the Old Country last Summer seems to have put renewed energy into that strenuous young member of the guild.

As after dinner speakers the men from "down by the sea" are a success. However, as every one knows, everybody down that way is a born orator.

It is generally admitted that the entire affair was a grand success, and informal as were the proceedings they passed off in a very happy manner.

Thanks for the flattering remarks on The Canadian Grocer. Trust us, gentlemen, the interests of the entire grocery trade are our interests. The Grocer wants, gets and gives the news.

Our confrere of Le Prix Courant, Mr. L. E. Fontaine, need not have apologized for his inability to make a good speech in English. We wish we could do as well in "la belle langue francais."

Talk about an enthusiastic believer in the future of Canadian grown tobacco, Mr. James F. Smyth, of Windsor, is a regular Colonel Sellers. "There's millions in it," he says, "watch our end of Ontario!"

Mr. L. E. Dubuc, from Chicontimi, is very enthusiastic in all matters pertaining to the development of the Northern section of Quebec. The pulp industry is flourishing and he has lately booked the largest order for pulp in the world, some 150,000 tons.

It was a pleasant sight to see the chiefs of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated Co. within the fold. Like the hospitality of the Arabs, they had partaken of the salt of welcome and felt safe under the tent of the guild.

General regret was expressed at the absence of Col. John I. Davidson and Mr. Geo. E. Bristol, of Toronto, their personality having been conspicuous at previous meetings of the guild. It is to be hoped that Mr. Bristol's argument with that Hamilton switch will result favorably.

His Worship Mayor Laporte, president, and Mr. Albert Hebert, ex-president, of the Montreal Guild, made excellent presiding officers. Regret was expressed at the absence of Mr. L. E. Geoffrin, president of the Montreal Guild, a recent bereavement in his family preventing his attendance.

CEYLON TEA ESTIMATES, 1904.

THE secretary of the Planters' Association of Ceylon telegraphed to us yesterday evening as follows, says the Times of Ceylon in an editorial article of January 9th:

Kandy, January 8th, 5.34 p.m.

The General Committee estimates the tea crop for export in 1904 at 155,000,000 lbs.; and the acreage in tea 380,000 of which 10,000 acres are not yet in bearing.

On Monday it should transpire how many millions pounds of green tea are expected; but if we place the quantity tentatively at 12,000,000 pounds—which, not knowing the details sent in by the various districts, and considering the approaching termination of the bonus, is a sufficiently buoyant view—143,000,000 pounds remains as the black tea estimate. The P. A. aggregate estimate for last year was 154,000,000 pounds and Messrs. Forbes & Walker's was 150,000,000 pounds. The approximate quantity realised in 1903 was short of the lower calculation, but the General Committee in Kandy evidently does not expect a fourth year of short yields. Nor would it be reasonable to expect it, especially if part of the large area of young tea yet to come into bearing will contribute. Ten thousand acres of young tea indicates, surely that men, counting on another "good time" and the shortage established in past years, are taking time by the forelock. Some of the new acreage may be regarded as balanced by abandoned areas. London shareholders have been told frequently of late that extensions now will not affect the supply for five or six years; but our warning stands substantiated that the past adverse seasons must be remembered and that, given favorable weather, Ceylon can turn out an additional eight or ten million pounds without any new acreage. The following table shows the general position for the past six years:

	P.A. Estimate.	Customs Figures.
1899	125,000,000	129,661,907
1900	142,000,000	149,264,602
1901	146,000,000	144,275,608
1902	154,000,000	150,829,707
1903	154,000,000	*148,000,000
1904	155,000,000	.....

*Approximate.

In view of the present estimate we would remind planters of the advice not to pluck coarse, and the need of continuing to exploit other markets. If India next season repeats her present increase shipments to the United Kingdom, it will be better for Ceylon not to send to London so much as in 1902, i.e., over nine millions more than in 1903. The labor question, too, has to be considered; and, in view of a probable increased yield, there will be additional interest in learning how this knotty subject was handled in Kandy yesterday.

ENGLISH WALNUTS IN CALIFORNIA.

THE culture of the English walnut in Southern California is one of the new and growing industries in that part of the state. In 1858 the first orchard was planted in the Carpinteria Valley, near Santo Barbara. From the first the undertaking was a success, and the acreage of walnuts has steadily increased, slowly at first, but latterly with rapid strides. The early bearing qualities of the walnut tree, its long life, and the steady demand for its product tend to make the enterprise deservedly popular. Already it is superseding the orange in favor among a number of fruit growers. The chief demands of the tree are an equable climate, a deep, rich soil, good drainage, and a good supply of water, all of which conditions Southern California answers perfectly.

The walnut grower has three varieties, commercially speaking, to select from, named according to the thickness of the shell, hard, soft and paper shell. Each has its good points, although general sentiment favors the soft shells, which are the surest bearers, and bring the best prices. The paper shells are more erratic bearers and the nuts are so easily broken that it is difficult to ship them in large quantities.

The walnut tree begins to bear when six or seven years old, and nothing is known definitely of the age limit of its bearing, although it appears to be in its prime from its 25th to its 30th year. Seventy-five pounds of nuts is the average yield from one tree and 1,500 pounds to the acre an average yield for an orchard. The harvest time begins about the middle of September and last nearly six weeks. After the pickers complete their work the nuts are carried to the drying grounds where they remain spread out on slats for about a week. They are then sorted, the imperfect and dwarfed ones put aside as culls, and the marketable ones carried to a central walnut house usually built by the community exchange. Here they are graded by means of a wire sieve in constant motion through which small and large nuts pass to their appointed places. They are then dipped in a solution of sulphate of lime, sal soda, and sulphuric acid, which gives them the ecru color known to commerce. After the dipping process they receive a thorough rinsing and are distributed to large bins where they are allowed to stand 24 hours to dry. They are now ready for the final sorting; broken nuts are thrown into one receptacle, dark ones into another, and the perfect ones into sacks for marketing.

Through one walnut exchange 185 tons of walnuts were sent out last year, and the total output from Southern California was 825 car-loads.

MODEL METROPOLITAN STORE.

AMONG the many prominent retail grocery stores of Montreal, and there are a large number that may be classed as conspicuously prominent in Canada's premier commercial city, the store of John Robertson & Son, 2257 St. Catherine street, must be given a place of honorable notice. It is located in the centre of the English section of Montreal's retail district on the north side, between McGill College avenue and Victoria street, and is particularly noticeable owing to its being a somewhat lower building than the surrounding stores. It has one large show window, capable of making excellent displays, and before the fact is overlooked by the writer, it may be mentioned that for tasty, artisticallly arranged, and business-drawing windows, the store of John Robertson & Son has a reputation that few can excel. Robertson's windows always tell a story, a tale of up-to-date business ideas, and the writer has on more than one occasion when admiring the displays heard flattering compliments paid the store by onlookers. In fact it has become an understood thing that "Robertson" always has a good drawing window display, and as the arrangements are changed frequently the public is being constantly kept interested.

Among the latest displays was an object lesson in corn products, the entire window (about 18 feet by 6 deep) containing every conceivable form of the product of corn. It was the Edwardsburg Starch Co. I believe, that supplied the material, syrups, glucose, starches, etc., and to bring the lesson home to the consuming public, there were prepared dishes of puddings, jellies and almost every appetizing dish that can be made with corn starch. The whole arrangement was attractive and a lesson for the public and in all a most creditable display.

Another and a later display was the division of the window into two parts, the one devoted to teas, the other to coffees, and both of these arranged with skill and taste. An inclined plane, at an angle of about 15 degrees was covered with thick layer of black tea about 6 feet square and spelled out in letters of green tea were the words "Pure Ceylon Tea," the green tea on the black background caught the eye. Arranged on all sides of the display were chests, boxes, tins and packages of teas of every description. In the coffee part of the window, on an incline was a layer of dark ground coffee and spelled out with bright yellow whole Mocha coffee beans were the words "Pure Coffee," the whole being banked on all sides by small bales of Mocha and Java coffees, and different sizes and styles of coffee in tins and glass. It was impossible to pass the store without examining and admiring the display.

The writer only mentions a few of the attractive windows lately arranged by Robertson & Son, as space will not permit him to enlarge on what is to him an interesting feature of the grocery trade.

The interior of the store is arranged with every convenience looking to good display of the goods, and prompt and careful handling of same. All the delivering is done from the rear of the store. A Kimball cash carrier system is installed connected with the cashier and bookkeeper's department at the back end of the store. In the warehouse at the back of the store is a large refrigerator divided into compartments and the temperature graded to suit their large stock of butter, eggs, vegetables, etc., in fact it may more correctly be termed a cold storage system on a scale suited to the business.

John Robertson the founder of the business, entered the grocery trade in Montreal in 1857 and has ever since been directly in the trade. He was for 32 years in business on Phillips square, where Henry Birk & Co.'s jewelry store now stands, and only removed to his firm's present quarters two years ago. The move to St. Catherine street from an advertising point of view was a good one as the traffic is constant and good. Mr. Robertson has associated with him in business his two sons, C. J. and J. H. Robertson, both of whom are practical, experienced and up-to-date grocers, and the large family trade of the firm is thus carefully and promptly looked after.

CANNED GOODS FOR ENGLAND.

MR. R. L. INNES secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Canners' Consolidated Companies, left last week for Europe. He will visit all the important points in Great Britain and the Continent with the object of enquiring into the possibilities of further extending the export trade and also of meeting the various foreign representatives of the company. The Consolidated hope to give special attention to the export trade this season and one of the objects of Mr. Innes' visit is to organize thoroughly for the coming season's operations.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Developing Pork Industry.

MR. W. E. MATTHEWS, of the George Matthews Co., is quoted by the Ottawa Free Press as a strong supported of the fat stock and dairy show which is to be held at the capital from the 7th to 11th inst. Mr. Matthews states that when the packing house in Hull was established by his firm, only 600 hogs were purchased the first year in the district east of Kingston. This was less than one-tenth of the number handled that year, but it was all that could be secured. Last year the Hull factory paid out $725,000 for hogs to the farmers east of Kingston, and $800,000 to farmers farther west. It was found necessary to go to the extreme Western counties of Essex and Kent for a considerable number of hogs.

These figures show at once the great development both of the Matthews Co., which now have large factories at both Peteroboro and Brantford, and the hog raising industry in Eastern Ontario.

At the fat stock show large prizes are offered for live hogs suitable for making Wiltshire bacon, and also for dressed carcasses of the best quality. Practical lectures are given by breeders, butchers, and others with live animals as object lessons in the first part of the program and the carcasses at a later stage of the proceedings. In this way farmers are taught to produce the class of animals that the packers require to maintain and increase their export trade. It was by an educational campaign of this sort through the medium of farmers' institutes that Canadian farmers were first induced to take up the growing of pigs suited to the production of Wiltshire bacon, the result of which was seen in a twenty fold increase ($600,000 to $12,600,000 per annum) in the export bacon trade of the Dominion in a single decade.

Peterboro' Cheese Board.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro' Cheese Board was held in Peterboro' Saturday afternoon last, with a full representation of salesmen present. An address by Mr. N. G. Sommerville of Brockville on cold-curing formed a part of the afternoon's program. The only important matter legislated on was that designed to compel cheese buyers to take cheese purchased at the price at which it was bought. Considerable trouble has been experienced in the past by buyers refusing to pay the price contracted for in the event of the price dropping between the time the cheese was bought and the date of delivery. To obviate this a motion was carried to the effect that the president be instructed to accept no bid on the board unless the sum of $10 be deposited with the salesman of each factory as selected by the buyer at the time of the sale, and the said deposit be satisfactorily made. The following officers were re-elected :. President, J. M. Drummond; vice-president, E. M. Elliott; secretary, J. Riddell; treasurer, J. G. Galvin. The first meeting of the board will be held on May 18th.

To Improve Cheese.

Daniel Derbyshire, president of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, had an interview last week with Hon. John Dryden to ask for an increased grant for the payment of instructors of cheesemakers. Last year $4,000 was the amount of the Government's grant, and in the eastern district 22 instructors were employed. Mr. Derbyshire asked that the grant be raised to $8,000 and that the number of instructors be increased. The factories each contributed $15 to the fund, and it is proposed to increase this to $20.

Making Cheshire Cheese.

An innovation has been introduced this year at the Ontario Agricultural College, in the way of a lady instructor from England, who is teaching the making of Cheshire cheese. The method is very similar to that followed in Canada, except that less heat and acidity are used, and, consequently the cheese thus made are somewhat softer and to some extent more palatable than much of the Summer cheese made in Canada.

The William Davies Co. have opened a new branch store in Galt.

London Butter Trade.

THE butter trade during the past year has been a notoriously big one, says the London, England, Grocery, and still it seems to expand without stop. Our dependence on foreign countries for the productions of butter they can spare us is greater than ever, and it is no exaggeration to say that the total importations of the article into the United Kingdom are now in cash value at the rate of over £20,000,000 sterling per annum. So well and regularly has the London market been supplied from different quarters that seldom, and then only at short intervals, has anything like real scarcity been experienced, though finest sorts of butter have, of course, been less plentiful in proportion to other kinds, and periods of depression have rarely been prolonged. The system of cold storage has been less extensively resorted to for butter than in 1902, with some advantage to the parties chiefly concerned, and all serious risks have thereby been carefully avoided. Sudden and unwarrantable fluctuations in prices have thus been effectively checked by the movements of the market being more under control; nevertheless, as a result of the year's trading in butter the closing quotations in several instances differ widely from those in January last.

Areated Milk.

A new discovery is announced with regard to the treatment of milk, by which it may be kept without having recourse to preservatives in the shape of boric acid and the like. By means of suitable machinery the milk is impregnated with pure oxygen and carbon dioxide, much in the same manner as areated waters are treated with carbonic acid gas. This has the effect of keeping the milk for almost any length of time, provided the bottles remain unopened until required.

It is said that the discovery will enable Canadian farmers to place their cream on the British market at a price which will compare very favorably with the current price of milk to-day. A large plant has been erected in Battersea, and there is already a demand for areated milk.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—Packers have found it difficult to get supplies of hogs on account of the disruption of transportation and one large firm bought a lot of 70,000 pounds that have been held in cold storage for some time at strong figures. In cured business is chiefly with places which must get in supplies while the sleighing lasts, but provision men are already looking forward to the opening of navigation. Prices as quoted below are all firm and lard has been advanced another 1-4c. since last week. We quote:

Butter—Complaints are heard as to the quality of creamery, which owing, it is said to irregularity in gathering, is not so good as it should be. Dairy being received is on the whole fair. Considerable quantities of butter are thought to be in the country, but receipts are just about equal to demand. Prices are unchanged. We quote:

Provisions—Barrelled pork is again higher, though the advance perhaps not as marked as was expected. Beef has shown but little advance, but is very firm. Canadian shippers have made but little difference in price of pure lard but have in several cases withdrawn prices. Refined lard shows a small advance. Smoked meats are held firm, sales light. In fresh meat there is little change, beef is quite plentiful at even prices. Veal is now freely offered. In lamb the market is quite firm. Mutton is rather dull. Pork shows little change. Local packers are buying Ontario pigs. Poultry is very high.

THE SUCCESSFUL TRAVELLER.

By Herbert C. Ridout.

THE ideal traveller is not always the man who, the very first trip, brings back a bag full of orders. They may bear testimony to his good talking abilities, and in value represent his wages for the next two or three years, but they are not much good if in the course of a few months he cannot go back and ask for repeat orders. The firm may have given him that first order simply to get rid of him, because he had talked or persuaded them into it, or they may have been busy just at the moment that he called, and gave the order rather than be subjected to persistent interruptions. Or it is not improbable that the traveller has, in his zeal, "put up the back" of some minor member of the firm he is "nursing" and that this individual has put a word in against him.

It behoves a traveller to be as wary as a cat. A chance word here, or even a joke there, has lost many a repeat order.

The ideal traveller is the man who has a standing connection, with which houses he is as welcome as the day, and where he may invariably look for orders to come his way.

The traveller who knows his business does not always lift an order at the first visit. He wants to have a ground well cultivated and which will bear more than one crop of fruit. To take an order on the first visit savors to him too much of grabbing, and he cannot afford to leave such impressions behind him.

He strives to create a good impression that will serve as a standing introduction for him, that will not cause the customer to refuse to see him next time he comes in, but will rather make him inclined toward seeing him. Creating a good impression at the first time of calling is the most important point to the traveller who wants to make a good thing of it, and who is striving to live by it. He does not always talk "shop," indeed the probabilities are that he has a hobby in common with the man he is talking to. And if we could but follow him into one or two of the houses, we should most likely find that whilst in the first he is an ardent piscator, in the second he is devoted to golf, and in the third a philatelist gone mad.

Of course he has discovered that these are the weak points of his prospective customers, and he is playing upon them. But he plays upon them lovingly, as an organist handles the stops of an organ, and just as effectively too. He does not make the mistake of showing the customer how much he himself knows about the sport or game, or whatever it is. No, he makes a good listener, just dropping a word here and there to keep the subject alive. But if the other's interest flags the traveller who knows his business is on his feet in a moment, and ready to bid his customer good-day.

The ideal traveller can sum up the character of the man he is dealing with in a trice. He grasps by intuition whether the man is a possible customer or whether he is not. He is a man of many moods, and he can suit himself to the temperament of the man he is conversing with.

He is not ashamed of his business as so many travellers give one the impression of being. The consequence is that he goes about his work in an enthusiastic way which carries most things before it. His enthusiasm carries him through where less perceptive men would stick fast, and he usually imparts a little of his enthusiasm to all with whom he comes into contact. He looks for success, and it comes to meet him half-way.

The ideal traveller looks every word he speaks; his face as often as not carries the conviction of his word, and people like dealing with him because he looks honest.

He is familiar with his goods from first to last, and can explain away a seeming fault so that even a practised workman is obliged to admit its possibility. Usually he has graduated from the lower rungs of the business ladder, a fact which accounts for many of his characteristics as a traveller. The courtesy one meets with at his hands stamps him as one of nature's noblemen. The knowledge he radiates when talking of the goods he is handling, indicates in itself that he has had a practical inside experience of them.

He is in all things the bearing of a gentleman, and the enthusiasm he possesses and the knowledge he displays more than compensate for any deficiency in flow of rhetoric. As a matter of fact this lack is often a blessing in disguise, for it is sometimes the best speakers among the gentlemen on the road who prove such bores to those they call upon. This does not hold good in every case, however, it must be admitted.

His personality is magnetic, and he is attractive in his manner. He has learnt that there must be as much merit in the man himself as in the goods he stands for, if he is to keep a permanent following and his position. As a natural sequence, his coming is, if not actually eagerly anticipated always welcomed, and he is probably even shaken by the hand whilst other travellers are obliged to content themselves with a wave of the hand as the principal motions them to a seat, or even handed over to a subordinate.

The really successful traveller makes friends wherever he goes, and he is able to claim that measure of success which comes as a reward to keen insight, sagacity, applied wits, resolution, courtesy and unceasing rectitude of behaviour in business matters as well as outwardly. Such men make heads of firms.—Grocery.

THE GROCER OF THE FUTURE.

IS he to be a man or a machine? An organizer or a button in the organization, to be pressed at will? Is his pathway to success through independent policy and action, or through organized effort? Is he to be a mere distributor, or part of a buying organization and manufacturing scheme? These are a few of the questions American grocers are asking, and it is evident that the grocers of the United Kingdom are asking similar questions, and are, like those on this side, going through a process of evolution.

"It is certain," says our esteemed contemporary, the London Grocer, "that the grocer of the future will have to make himself more familiar with the legal points of the trade, and there are three factors that occur to us as important in this connection. In the first place, it has become doubly important that every grocer should regularly and intelligently read his trade paper; secondly, every grocer should belong to a trade association; and thirdly, the coming generation of grocers must be better trained either by a return to the apprenticeship system or some other method. There may not be so much hard manual labor attached to the trade as in bygone days, but it demands a close and intelligent study of a thousand and one details that our fathers knew nothing of, and grocers are entitled to be paid for head work as much as for handiwork. Therefore, while they fight against every form of dishonesty, and endeavor to obey the law in every detail, let traders also see that their legitimate profits are maintained at a level that will remunerate them adequately and raise the whole status of the trade from the foolish cut-throat competition that has too long thrown a shadow over it."—American Grocer.

PACIFIC CAVIARE.

FOR many years, says The Pacific Fisherman, sturgeon was looked upon as a "by-product" of the Columbia River, yet thousands of them were caught and the eggs of the female, pickled and called caviare, netted much profit to a few. Joint legislation of the States of Washington and Oregon recognized the value of this fish and enacted laws that prescribed seasons for the catching of it and the size that could be caught. This law must have answered a long-felt want, or at least attracted attention to the industry, as for several years afterwards no large sturgeon could be caught, it being remembered that the fish laws on the Columbia are very laxly enforced. During the present Winter the catch of sturgeon has shown an increase, and the fish are equally in flavor to any species for the table, but their appearance creates a prejudice against them, and they are generally served at restaurants and hotels as "sea bass," and considered an edible luxury from the ocean. As a matter of fact, if the dealers in the roe of the female was not present, few "sea bass" would ever reach the table.

Practically no supplies of genuine caviare are coming forward at date, and the stricture is intensified by the Arctic weather unprecedented in the district around the Great Lakes. There is a good deal of talk about "spoonbill" caviare of late. The trade is not handling same to any large extent, as the product is susceptible to any change in the temperature and deteriorates greatly if preserved for any length of time. It is, however, in request by delicatessen and saloon counter trade.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Edited by John C. Kirkwood, TORONTO.

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

An Improved Grocery Advertisement.

IT may recall itself to the readers of this department that I somewhat severely criticized an advertisement of Messrs. Rupple & Co., Elmira, Ont. The advertisement in question was as follows :

The White Grocery

Ruppel & Co.,
Elmira.

I am in receipt of a letter from Messrs. Rupple & Co., in which they say: "We wish to thank you for the criticism of our advertisement. Same has awakened us in the advertising line, but wish to say that we are not in the habit of advertising in that way. We are mailing you this week's advertisement and would be pleased and grateful for any pointers you can give us in improving it."

The chief criticism I have to offer with reference to the accompanying advertisement relates to the display rather than to the matter. The matter is good, so far as it goes. The enumeration of "Stock Taking Bargains" makes a most readable list, and one that cannot help but interest the thrifty housewife. It will be perceived that these are unusual values. The goods offered are seasonable and are good buying at the prices quoted. Then, too, there is no waste matter. It is a "strictly business" advertisement, and the buying public cannot but approve of it. It is in marked contrast in all these respects to such common announcements as Fresh groceries and provisions of all kinds.

Everything fresh and clean.

Jas. McMurray.

General statements concerning one's business are all right sometimes, but when it comes to selling goods specific announcements are desirable, indeed, necessary.

This advertisement of Ruppel & Co.'s would have looked better and would have been more easily read had the special prices been brought out in a black face type, and extended to the end of the line in each case, so :

ECLIPSE SOAP, reg. 5c. each, now.....7 for 25c.
OLD BROWN WINDSOR SOAP, each..... .01
TEA Dust, reg. 15c., now, per pkge ..... .10

It is very desirable when making out price lists to keep the eye as much as possible, to enable it to skim over the list rapidly, and to grasp in a flash the significance of the prices quoted. This is true even when the prices given are not less than regular. It must never be forgotten when preparing advertisements to make the matter read easily and swiftly. An advertisement that taxes the attention of the reader over much will in a majority of cases be passed over unread. Some advertisers go on the assumption that the public read their announcements faithfully, no matter how uninteresting they may be. It is much safer to think that the public is not at all interested, and that its attention and interest must be compelled. Better advertising will result if one holds to an idea of this sort. The man who talks to the public of his own accord, and who desires its closest attention, should seek in all ways to please it, to fulfil its severest exactions.

The careless advertiser soon loses his audience.

One more criticism of the advertisement under review : It is top heavy. "Stock Taking Bargains" is in a type the size and face of which are too large for what follows. This is a minor fault and must be attributed to the compositor.

I am recasting the advertisement in accordance with my own conclusions and submit same to my correspondents and readers generally for their judgment.

The dissolution of partnership of Newitt & Co., dry goods and general merchants, Ymir, has been registered.

Fresh and Cured Fish

To Close Canneries.

THE British Columbia Packers' Association will not operate all its canneries during the coming season. G. I. Wilson, president of the British Columbia Packers' Association, says that as but a small run of fish is expected this year, it had been decided to cut a number of the packing plants out of operation on the score of expediency, and next year is expected to furnish the largest run of fish of the past four years. Last year the Fraser pack was but 204,000 cases, and that of the North but 160,000 cases—practically a failure.

The English salmon market is firm just now, according to latest advices of the British Columbia Packers' Association, and while the demand is not very marked at this season of the year, stocks are not so large that prices can be hammered down.

Reports received from Seattle and San Francisco state that many of the canneries of the Alaska Packers' Association will be shut down this year, especially those on the Southeastern Alaskan coast, where the pack is principally pinks. The more northerly of the canneries, which secure reds, will be operated to full capacity if the fish can be secured. Last season's pack of Alaska pinks did not sell very well, on account of there being no demand for that low quality of fish, and packers lost heavily.

B. C. Herring Fisheries.

A Seattle syndicate is thinking of engaging in the herring fishing industry on the east coast of Vancouver Island, says the Victoria Colonist. At the last meeting of the Nanaimo Board of Trade a letter was read in which Mr. Max Johnson, of Seattle, stated that he was considering the advisability of going to Nanaimo to go into the fishing industry. He suggested that permanent traps, fishwheels and seines should be prohibited, and also the deposition of refuse in the harbor, as this practice had driven away the great shoals of herring which formerly visited Port Townsend and Bellingham Bay. He pointed out that the fish which abounded in Nanaimo harbor formed a great source of wealth only requiring a little care to be retained. A committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Ralph Smith, M.P., with a view of pressing upon that gentleman the necessity of securing regulations along the lines suggested.

Temiskaming Fish.

It is rumored that all commercial fishing in Lake Temiskaming is to be prohibited and that the existing supply will be preserved for the settlers.

Lake Champlain Fisheries.

In 1901 representations were made by fishery officials of the States of Vermont and New York in favor of abolishing seining in Lake Champlain. The fishing on the Canadian side of the lake was mostly in Mississquoi Bay, but only at certain periods of the year. The Canadian Government adopted a regulation prohibiting seining in Mississquoi Bay, but were surprised to find that the seine continued to be used on the United States side of the lake. In answer to a remonstrance, it is said the reply was made that the action of the Americans could not be controlled. In view of these circumstances the embargo against the use of the seine by Canadians in the waters of Lake Champlain will be removed.

APPOINTED SELLING AGENTS.

The International Brokerage Co., of Toronto, have secured the agency for Mrs. Dooley's Laundry Soap from the makers, the Metropolitan Soap Co., and with their staff of salesmen throughout the Dominion will engage in a vigorous campaign to introduce this new soap.

The name "Mrs. Dooley" naturally has caused a flow of wit and humor among the trade, but the makers recognize in the name an advertising asset of no mean proportions. "The Dooley Booklet" has had a wide distribution and contains a very interesting statement. It is worth writing for.

J. L. Roberge & Co., general merchants, Thedford Mines, have assigned. V. E. Paradis has been appointed prosisional guardian.

EXPORT TRADE IN CANNED GOODS

MR. MARSHALL announced at the Dominion Grocers' Guild dinner the other night, that the Canners' Company were making plans to systematically develop the export trade in Canadian tinned products, and that Mr. Innes, the son of the president, was now on his way to establish a permanent agency in England. He also stated that their ambition was to secure the British market for these Canadian products, as that market had already been captured by our cheese.

This is a very important announcement. It is a policy The Grocer has advocated for years. It was strongly advocated by the editor of The Grocer when he was secretary of the Canners' Association 17 or 18 years ago.

Some of the canners have, individually, worked up a nice little business, but it was done spasmodically, and Canadian canned products are not generally known in Europe. In some cases, unfortunately they are known unfavorably, because of the inferior quality of the goods placed on the market by some packers who should have known better; packers, who, if they had no respect for their own reputation, should have had some for their country.

Some years ago, for instance, one well-known Canadian packer made large sales of Canadian canned peas and corn which turned out badly. The fraud was exposed by The Grocer at the time. They were "soaked" goods, simply a green variety of the peas and corn usually sold by the bushel, put into tins and covered with water.

While we may differ strongly on the business policy of the Canners' Company in some respects, we are very confident the success of their export plans, if they continue to be controlled by such men as Mr. Innes, Mr. Marshall and Mr. Ferguson, and others who are at present directing the policy of the combination. It is to be hoped that the ambition which gave the president and some of the other packers now in the company their reputations, will be strongly encouraged.

If this idea can be impressed on the minds of the stockholders generally in the Canners' Company, and if they have patience, we will have an enormous and profitable export trade for our canned products.

We have advantages in quality. The slower ripening of Canadian fruits and vegetables give them a flavor much more delicate and vastly superior to Californian or any other packs with which we will compete in Europe. This is easily proved by testing the good Canadian brands alongside any others.

TO REGULATE LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANIES.

THE discussion on Mr. Hoyle's bill to amend the Ontario Companies Act in the Ontario Legislature last week suggests food for thought. There is no doubt but that the limited liability principle is an invaluable expedient in the modern business world, but it is equally evident that it is and has been used for fraudulent purposes.

The prospectus of many of these companies are fearfully and wonderfully made, framed to catch the unwary investor who is but too often an easy victim to the smooth-tongued solicitor.

It may be urged that selling of stock in a company is no different from the selling of any other article of merchandise, but this can not be successfully maintained. The company is working under a charter from the Government, a fact which gives it a certain prestige, and the Government has a right to see that the charter is not used for fraudulent purposes.

Mr. Hoyle's bill, although lost for the session was a step in the right direction, as is any movement likely to confine the prospectus within the limits of the truth.

The suggestion of a board of expert financiers to whom all charters should be referred, if it could be worked out practically would be an excellent thing. Such a board, possessing the confidence of the investing public would be at once a protection against fraudulent concerns and an encouragement to the investing but uninformed public to put their money in legitimate industrial concerns so much needed to develop the resources of this country.

It is to be hoped that a satisfactory and workable scheme may yet be devised.

A CONSOLATION.

A PHILOSOPHER on the street has discovered a silver lining to the storm cloud that has hung over the trade since the first of the Winter. It has given a capital opportunity he suggests, to merchants in the snow bound towns to get rid of shopworn and unsaleable goods. Goods which in his pride the haughty customer rejects, are taken with gratitude when nothing else may be had. It is to be hoped that the philosopher is right and that in compensation for lessened business the merchant has been able to clean out undesirable lines and is ready to stock up afresh so soon as it pleases the weather clerk and the railroads.

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO'S NEEDS.

A SHORT time ago there appeared in these columns the summary of an admirable address on the field and needs of Ontario's Provincial University delivered by Mr. W. T. White, B.A., manager of the National Trust Co., before the Canadian Club of Toronto.

Among the needs Mr. White mentioned as retarding the advancement and crippling the usefulness of the university was that of a physical laboratory, an indispensible part of the equipment of an up-to-date university in these days of scientific discovery and progress.

It is understood that the Alumni Association of the University of Toronto are arranging for a delegation of graduates, undergraduates and friends of the university, to wait upon the Premier and the Minister of Education at an early date to represent to them the importance of taking immediate steps to provide adequate laboratories for the physical department of the Provincial University.

Another object of the Alumni Association is to secure from the Government a definite pronouncement of its policy as to the university. A commission to investigate the whole university question and the adoption of a forward policy that will allow the institution to expand naturally would also be welcomed.

It is to be hoped that the Government will meet the university people in no picayune spirit. The university represents a very large capital expenditure and its full usefulness should not be suffered to be impared for the lack of adequate equipment through any petty parish view of economy.

Criticisms have been made at various times of some features of the university, some with good reason. The suggestion of a commission should be seized upon by the Government, the whole university question thoroughly examined, the Provincial University raised to the highest degree of excellence in all her departments.

A curious feature, considering the disultoriness of the Government, is that scarcely a member of the Legislature can be found who does not approve of a vigorous university policy.

WHY IS A COMMERCIAL AGENT NOT APPOINTED?

IT is to be regretted that the Dominion Government has not yet appointed a commercial agent in London. Lord Strathcona has undoubtedly done a great deal for the welfare of Canada since his appointment as High Commissioner, but his duties are such that he cannot possibly give proper attention to the commercial interests of the Dominion. He has too much to do in a general way to look after that which demands special attention. Information therefore that would be of value to business men in Canada or Great Britain the High Commissioner's office in London has seldom been able to give.

A couple of years ago the Dominion Government placed $25,000 in the estimates for the support of a commercial agency in London and the Ontario Government allotted $5,000 as a contribution for the same purpose, but in spite of this no appointment has as yet been made.

The Canadian Grocer has been informed on what it believes to be good authority, that Lord Strathcona is in favor of the appointment of a commercial agent in London. In Government official quarters it has been intimated, on the other hand, that the appointment has not been made because of the opposition of Lord Strathcona.

There must be a nigger in the fence somewhere and it is the duty of the Government to state publicly why the appointment has not been made.

Up to within a year or two ago the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and some of the Boards of Trade were active in their advocacy of the appointment of a commercial agent in London, but nothing has been heard from them lately. They appear either to have fallen asleep or to have become discouraged. They cannot expect the Government to be active if they are passive. Governments as a rule do not lead. In most instances they only move as they are pushed. If the business men of Canada want a commercial agent appointed to look after their interests in London, they must push for it, and keep pushing.

OATMEAL PRICES.

THE recent advances in oatmeal have aroused rumors of a trust which have found currency in the daily papers. In conversation with a representative of The Grocer a large oatmeal manufacturer ridiculed the idea of a trust. The oatmeal business, it is claimed, has been on a loosing basis for some time and the advances in the price are said to be amply warranted by the increase in the price of cooperage and of oats. The prices now quoted are moreover for delivery instead of f.o.b., an important item, and afford but a moderate profit. The only arrangement among the manufacturers, it is said, is a gentlemen's agreement not to sell below the price agreed upon, designed to put the industry on a reasonable basis and prevent cutting.

THE FREIGHT BLOCKADE.

SOME idea of the general demoralization of all transportation facilities and complete break down of the railroads in Ontario may be gathered from the fact that a thriving northern town is completely out of sugar and had to have supplies sent in by express at an expense of about a cent a pound. Another town in the Waterloo district, where coffee is consumed largely, ran completely out of this staple article and had also to call in the aid of the express companies. Consignments that were shipped a month or three weeks ago to outlying towns have been completely lost and no one knows where they are. A Western merchant who consigned a lot of butter to a Toronto house a month ago was in that city this week trying to locate his consignment. It has not yet arrived. Brokers are also hard hit. Cars of sugar are three weeks late and as they arrive their contents are distributed thinly among the jobbers. Some lines of tea are short owing to consignments being delayed on the way from the seaboard. Travellers are calling on retailers whose last orders have not yet been delivered.

Things were bad enough until Monday when the blizzard capped the climax. The irritation would be unbearable were we not all comparatively used to the conditions by this time.

THE TARIFF ON MOLASSES.

THE recent desision of the Customs Department that in future the rate of duty on molasses imported into Canada will be determined by subjecting the article to the indirect instead of the direct polarization test, has caused a good deal of comment and no little difference of opinion among the trade.

The duty on molasses testing 40 degrees or over cane sugar or sucrose is 1 3-4c. per gallon. Molasses under 40 and not less than 35 is charged 1 3-4c. per gallon and in addition one cent for every degree or part of a degree under 40. All under 35 degrees must pay a duty of 3-4c. per pound.

The effect of the new ruling is that the low grade molasses which has been an important feature in the molasses trade, especially in Ontario, will not test up to 35 by the new test thus being brought under the 3-4c. per pound schedule. The effect is practically to prohibit the importation of this grade of molasses.

Although the desirability of the low grade New Orleans molasses is a more or less disputed point, the trade regard with concern the disorganization of trade by the new regulation and it is understood that a petition, signed by practically all the trade of Hamilton and Toronto and by a large number in Montreal, has been forwarded to the Minister asking a return to the old test.

The Grocer interviewed a number of the trade in regard to their views:

Sam J. Mathewson, of J. A. Mathewson & Co., Montreal, said: "In my opinion this is a cheap article used largely in Ontario and parts of Quebec for cooking or baking purposes only, and for this it has given perfect satisfaction. With all due deference to the Government it seems to me that this molasses cannot be easily replaced, as it comes in packages that are much easier to handle than the huge casks which have heretofore been shipped from the West Indies. It seems to me to be a useless and unwarranted piece of legislation. I do not know of any molasses coming into this country adulterated with foreign substances. You could not impose such goods on any merchant who knew anything at all about molasses. This cheap molasses is sold for what it is, and for baking purposes is a more satisfactory article to those who use it than West Indian molasses."

Mr. W. G. A. Lambe, Toronto, said: "It will insure a better grade of molasses being imported and will entirely shut out the lower grades. It will be in the interests of the consumer."

Mr. R. S. McIndoe, Toronto, said he was not concerned by the ruling as he did not handle the grades of molasses affected. He thought the regulation would improve the quality of the molasses used in Canada.

Mr. George Stanway, Toronto, said the effect would be to raise the price of cheap molasses about 10 cents a gallon. It would be practically prohibitive, and would shut out a cheap and useful molasses that was in general demand.

Mr. Marshall, of Warren Bros., Toronto, said the ruling would be a blow at low grade molasses and would upset trade.

Mr. J. F. Eby, of Eby, Blain & Co., Toronto, said the department was not well informed on the subject of molasses and that the new test was unreliable.

Mr. Musson, Toronto, said that the molasses shut out though of low grade was in demand in Ontario for cooking and served a purpose.

Other gentlemen on the street interviewed were of conflicting opinions. Some contended that the molasses shut out by the new ruling was unfit for food. Others were of the opinion that though poor stuff it satisfied a demand and should not be excluded from our market. While there were again some who claimed that the molasses was quite suitable for the use to which it was put.

BOVRIL WINDOWS.

Some very attractive window displays have been made by Bovril Co. in Montreal lately. Two of the most conspicuous and attractive were those of Fraser, Viger & Co., St. James street, and J. B. Berthiaume, corner St. Lawrence and Prince Arthur avenue. Both these windows were very much commented upon by passers-by and as an advertisement must certainly have been a success. Mr. Mitchell, of the Bovril Co., is to be congratulated on the very effective window artist on his staff.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. D. G. Bell, of Bell & McEachern, general merchants, Stayner, Ont., was a caller at the Toronto office of The Grocer this week.

In the personal column of last week's Grocer the name of Mr. W. Ince was inadvertently substituted for that of Mr. W. Innes, president of the Canadian Consolidated Canners' Co.

Mr. Frank Sloan has returned to Toronto and is again busy in the wholesale house of John Sloan & Co., after a six months' trip to the Western States. His trip appears to have done him good.

Mr. Frank Menzie, who has been travelling for the F. F. Dally Co., of Hamilton, in the Northern part of Ontario for the past number of years, has engaged with H. P. Eckardt & Co., and will look after the trade in the Northwest and British Columbia for this firm.

Mr. A. W. Arnott, of Geo. Ridout & Co., Toronto, was a recent caller at our London offices. Mr. Arnott is in the Old Country getting in close personal touch with the houses his firm represents, and is visiting the trade centres of Great Britain and the continent. News of new agencies of interest to the trade will be announced on his return.

Mr. J. B. Hughes, representing the Ozo Co., Montreal, leaves for Eastern Quebec and the Maritime Provinces this week. Mr. Hughes, who is well acquainted with the trade down by the sea, will have besides his company's well-known brands of vinegar, pickles, tea., &c., an extra line or two of jams and jellies to offer the trade.

EXPORT APPLE TRADE.

The following estimate of the apples exported from Atlantic ports for the week and season ending February 27th was prepared for THE GROCER by Mr. Fred Barker, apple exporter, Church street, Toronto :

	Liverpool.	London.	Glasgow.	Various.	Total.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, March 3, 1904.

Groceries.

IN response to the usual question the trade generally report business good when the weather conditions are considered. But travellers are now on road taking orders where their last orders have not yet been delivered. The railroads were refusing freight more or less right along but Monday's storm simply paralized them. Some outside places are without sugar or coffee and have had to have supplies sent in by express at a cost of a cent a pound in some cases. Some fears of further trouble from floods when the snow melts are also heard, but on the whole the trade is optimistic. Collections have been hurt to some extent but there is no great complaint. Good business is anticipated as soon as it can be got at. Canned goods are firm at the recent advance. Coffee is still unsettled. Spices are unchanged at last quotations. Syrups are unchanged. American molasses is firmer in price, while Barbadoes is lower. Rice is unchanged with Japan hard to get. A good active demand at firm prices is met for most lines of tea and retailers are coming into the market better than of late. Shelled walnuts are a little easier in France as are also currants in Patras. California peaches are a little higher. Cured fish are without feature. There has been a rise of 5c. per 100 pounds on sugar in barrels and 2 1-2c. in bags since last writing and the market is strong with prices firm as we go to press.

CANNED GOODS.

The situation in canned goods continues strong and purchases have been made freely at the advance while a good steady regular trade is being met. Jobbers are still predicting higher prices for corn and peas before the Summer opens. Salmon are firm and demand for fruits quite fair. We quote:

SUGAR

The encouraging features of our last report have been amply sustained during the week under review and there have been large sales to American refiners of Cuba centrifugals on basis of 2 1-16c. c. and f. New York. Purchases have been principally for March shipment and total over 160,000 bags. Tone of tendency favors sellers with the demand apparently in excess of offerings which are light at the moment. Following the improvement in raws all New York refined advanced Friday, 26th ult., 5 cents per cwt. and this was quickly followed by a similar advance in our local market, the full advance applying to barrels, bags being advanced only 2 1-2c. per cwt. Since then there has been a further advance of 5c. per cwt. in the New York market without, however, affecting local quotations which remain unchanged on basis of 4.13 for Montreal granulated and 4.03 for Acadia XXX granulated Toronto delivery. There has been a good business doing in American refined, and we think the same could be said of Canada were it not for the terrible demoralization on the railroads.

With the break up of the roads it is reasonable to expect that a very heavy consumptive demand will ensue and the tone of the market as we go to press is strong with refiners holding for full prices.

There have been some fluctuations in European beet during the week, prices reacting to 8s. basis f.o.b. Hamburg and are nominal at 8s. 3d. as we go to press, which is equivalent to parity of 3.70 for 96 test centrifugals or 30 cents per hundred pounds above to-day's quotation, latter grade. The recent upward movement in beets was entirely unexpected and was caused by rumors of a slight decrease in sowings of Germany and Austria, with considerable decrease in France and Belgium. In Europe the value of beet roots has been declining, while the market for grains has been advancing thus giving the farmers the inducement to reduce their sowings of the former while going more extensively into the latter.

Looking at the sugar situation as a whole it is worthy of note that speculators are being interested by the improved sentiment and are buying Cuban sugars with the intention of holding them for a further advance which of course necessitates paying storage charges. This action of speculators may have a very appreciable effect on the future of prices. United States refiners' meltings for week ending February 24 were same as previous week, namely 35,000 tons, and since January 1 these show an increase of 40,000 tons when compared with first two months of 1903. Receipts for week ending February 24th were 30,401 tons, leaving stocks of 105,703 tons, a reduction of 4,600 tons for the week. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba are 263,703 tons, or 91,926 tons less than last year. At latest advices there were 167 central factories grinding, an increase of 3 for the week and 12 over the corresponding period last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,609,703 tons, against 3,516,377 tons last year, the increase being 93,326 tons. We quote as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for these lines is very fair at present. Syrup is quite active; Barbadoes is lower. For United States prices are firmer. In low grade molasses the trade is quite perturbed in consequence of the department's ruling as to the proper test. Opinion is divided as to the wisdom of the course pursued by the department. "We shall therefore treat "SALADA'S" challenge as withdrawn and have nothing further to do with it," are the concluding words of Messrs. Galt's advertisement of last week.

WILL THEY ? NOT IF WE CAN HELP IT.

They have deposited their money and they will not withdraw it if there is any law in Canada to compel them to go on with their acceptance of our challenge printed in this paper. They will not back out if we can help it. We will not allow them to pose as accepting our challenge and then "have nothing further to do with it."

In the meantime we are satisfied to go on with our acceptance of their challenge and our money is in the hands of Messrs. Clarkson & Cross, as is also our money with "The Canadian Grocer" covering their cheque which they deposited when accepting our challenge, and we have warned "The Grocer" to hold on to both cheques.

Gentlemen:

Many among you sell Tobacco Pipes, and many do not. From you both we beg attention.

First and foremost there is money in selling Pipes. You sell Tobaccos, why not Pipes? No one has a better chance.

With reference to the outlay, it is less than that required for Tobaccos. And the profits—is 100% enough? Frequently it is more.

We sell Pipes—read the page opposite. And we want your business.

Yours very cordially,

For twenty years the National Cash Register Company has made the announcement that it could sell a better cash register for less money than any other concern in the world. We have never failed to do this in a single case.

We are the originators of cash registers and have naturally been the target of all other cash register companies. In the face of this competition we did a larger business last year than ever before. This was because our 365,000 users were well satisfied with their "Nationals."

Over two hundred concerns have failed in the cash register business because they could not furnish a cash register without infringing some of our 895 patents.

Some merchants are led to purchase low-grade cash registers by misrepresentation. Later they find they will not give satisfaction. If you are interested in a low-priced machine, don't buy till you see our agent. We guarantee to sell cheaper than anybody else.

FIVE THINGS TO REMEMBER. A "National" takes care of

1. Cash Sales. 2. Credit Sales. 3. Money Received on Account. 4. Money Paid Out. 5. Changing Money.

We employ 1,400 salesmen. If you would like further information, send in attached coupon. Our agent will then call. This puts you under no obligation whatever to buy.

TEAS

There has been generally a good demand for all grades of tea, but strictly fine flavory teas are difficult to obtain, the bulk offering being of the good, ordinary class. There is a distinct shortage of several grades of tea on the spot owing to delays in transit from the seaboard. The demand in New York for Young Hyson has been active and shipments have been made from here to that market, which showed a good profit. One jobber reports that this last week has developed a specially good demand for teas, lines being sold where before packages were the limit. London advices show a hardening market in both Ceylons and Indians, owing to reduced offerings. We quote.

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Locally the dried fruit trade can not be said to be exceptionally brisk. Currants have been bought more freely for import of late probably in consequence of a favorable offer cabled this week from Patras. There is more of a disposition on the part of French houses to sell shelled walnuts and offers below last week's figures have been accepted. A cable from Syrmna advises considerable activity in sultanas with large orders in the market particularly for lower grades. The indications for next season are that after the very heavy production of last year the crop will in no event exceed an average, and may be less. There is no new feature to California fruits except a slight advance in peaches following large sales in the States. The recent reduction in seeded muscatels has stimulated buying in Canada.

Fish.

The fish market continues brisk, and stocks are becoming more scarce. Owing to the cold Winter stocks have kept well. It will be a fortnight before dealers can tell whether supplies will be equal to the demand, which has been phenomenally large this week. It is likely that Georgian Bay and the upper lakes will be open for navigation before May 1, which may help to precipitate a fish famine. Last week's prices continue unchanged. Green Fruits.

Trade in green fruits cannot be said to have improved materially since last week. The temporary brightening of the market has been overshadowed by another record storm which is going to hinder outside distribution for some time, shipments by freight being out of the question. The local demand continues good. The demand for oranges is improving and prices are a little firmer if anything. One reason for this is that higher prices are being asked at seaboard. Floridas are scarce, and Mexicans nearly out of the market. The range of prices in California navels is 25c. greater than it was last week. The demand for bitters is excellent. Jamacias are practically out of the market. Valencias find a ready sale and stocks are the best quality they have been in years. Large Valencias are 50c. easier in price. Grape fruit is scarce, but demand is good. One dealer remarks that the day is coming when everyone will use it. Pineapples are coming more freely. Bananas are scarce. Florida tomatoes are becoming more plentiful; stocks are better quality; they show a wider range of prices than last week. The range in prices for apples is wider, poor stock selling as low as $1 per barrel. Almeria grapes are scarce and firm-

Vegetables.

The demand for vegetables of all kinds continues brisk and stocks are somewhat easier to obtain, although the big storm this week has occasioned temporary difficulty in this respect. Onions are more plentiful with the demand for Valencias good. The range of prices for Valencias is 25c. lower. The first shipment of onions from Bordeaux, France, known in the history of the vegetable trade is noticed on the local market this week. Sweet potatoes are beginning to come in small lots. Celery is still scarce. Greenhouse rhubarb is not so plentiful as it was; the first growth has already been marketed and the second stock is not yet ready for use. Our quotations are :

Seeds.

The seed market has been dull for the last day or two as a result of the storm. Trade conditions promise to brighten, however, from now on. The only change from last week is an advance of 25c. in red clover. We quote as follows :

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market is dull this week. One buyer stated as his opinion of prevailing conditions that the wheat market "had gone to pot." The future of grain is hard to predict owing to its uncertain sale at the present time. Early in the week of March 1-6 wheat sold on the street in Toronto as high as $1.07, but on March 3 it was down to $1. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, is 1c. easier; Northern, No. 1, is 2c., and Northern No. 2, 3c. easier, respectively. Red and white wheat are each ½c. easier. Barley continues unchanged. Oats are 1½c. firmer and peas 2c. firmer, respectively. Buckwheat has advgnced 2c. and rye is 4c. firmer. Our quotations are as follows :

Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, per bush, Toronto.	1 09	1 10

FLOUR.

The demand for flour is brisk. Last week's prices continue unchanged, although in the interval since last week's qpotations prices have risen and dropped 10c. Wheat has broken, but until the extent is fully known it is impossible to determine whether flour prices will become permanently easier or not. Our quotations are :

Manitoba wheat patents, per bbl	5 10	5 25
Strong bakers "	4 85	5 00
Ontario wheat patents "	4 90	5 15
Straight roller "	4 60	4 70

BREAKFAST FOODS.

The market in breakfast foods is lively with considerable advance in prices on last week's quotations. Manufacturers say the rise in the prices of the manufactured product has not been commensurate with the rise in price of wheat and oats, and that they have purposely kept their prices steady, waiting to see wheat, etc., adjust themselves. Oatmeal is 35c. firmer. Rolled oats, in bags and broken lots, respectively, have advanced 40c. Rolled wheat is 25c. firmer. Split peas have advanced 25c. We quote the following prices :

Oatmeal, standard and granulated, carlots, on track, per bbl	5 05

Country Produce.

EGGS.

Receipts of newly laid eggs are improving and the opinion is that there are some in the country which may shortly be expected in. Eggs have slumped 10 cents or more in Chicago and it is reported that some have been brought into the local market. We quote only:

Hides, Skins and Wool.

A weaker tone in the local market for hides is noted. A decline of 1-2c. is reported in all grades except cured, which remain unchanged. As usual, the influence of the outside markets is largely responsible for the weaker tendency. We quote the following prices:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, March 3.

Groceries.

FOR a week or so trade showed considerable improvement, owing to improved weather conditions and shipments went forward briskly; but again came snow blockades, and this week the movement of goods has been by no means active. Wholesalers and retailers alike may well be excused a good deal of impatience at the delay in deliveries of goods. Remittances have shown some improvement, but they still are much behind. Sugar, on the 23rd went up 5c. in yellows, and on the 26th another advance followed in all sugars of 5c. in barrels and 2 1-2c. in bags. In the Maritime Provinces, Manitoba and the Northwest Territories advances have also been made. Syrups and molasses have remained unchanged on the local market, and teas have also been fairly stationary. In other staples, canned goods, spices and coffee, rice and dried fruits there has been little change in the condition of the market. Fish continue to be a very active item, and green fruits also are going a little better. Pure lard and American pork are higher, jobbing houses now quoting $1.77 1-2 for the former in pails, and $20.50 to $23 per barrel for American pork. Canadian macaroni and vermicilli has advanced 1-2c. per lb. In boxes the price is now 5c. and in barrels 4 1-2c. Oatmeal is quoted 40c. higher in barrels and 20c. in bags. Some manufacturers of biscuits have advanced the price of their makes 1-2c. per lb., in sympathy with the rising flour market. Coal oil is 1c. lower. Silver Star is now worth 21 1-2c., Acme Prime White, 22c., Imperial Acme, 22 1-2c., Standard Acme, 23 1-2c. and Astral, 25c.

SUGAR.

The price of yellow sugars went up on the 23rd 5c. On the 26th another 5c. was added to all sugars in barrels, and 2 -12c, on sugar in bags. Cream

HONEY.

There has been an easing off in prices this week though trade is still very quiet. We quote:

Comb honey	0 13	0 13½
Buckwheat	0 06	0 07
Strained, white clover	0 08½	0 09

POTATOES.

Potatoes are about 2c. per bag higher, on account of a temporary scracity locally. Carlots have sold at 71 to 72c. per bag, ex-track, and smaller lots at 82 to 85c. per bag.

EVAPORATED APPLES.

The price of evaporated apples is firm, though no quotable change has been made, and wholesalers prices are 6 1-2 to 8 1-2c. for small lots.

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

Prices are again higher than at our last quotations, following the advance in wheat. But at present, owing to a quiet trade, and an easier tone to the wheat market, there is not the same strength shown. We quote:

Manitoba spring wheat patents		5 40

OATMEAL.

There has again been an advance in rolled oats, and prices are very firm. Carload lots are quoted at $4.55 to $4.60 per barrel, and $2.24 per bag. Oatmeals are quoted by jobbers as follows:

Provisions—A fair trade in provisions and hog products has been done this week, though the present demand runs mostly on small lots for immediate requirements. The tone of the market is steady. Smoked meats are quiet, as is usual during the Lenten season. Pure lard has again advanced since last report, and the price in pails is now 5c. higher, $1.77 1-2 for small lots. Grocery jobbers are finding an improved local demand for American pork, and prices are stiffening. They are now quoting $20.50 to $23 per barrel in single barrel lots. Canadian short cut mess is also higher, though trade is quiet.

The market for dressed hogs is not active. Prices, however, since last week have risen considerably owing to light receipts. Sales of fresh killed abattoir dressed stock were made at $7.25 to $7.50. Light country dressed are quoted at $6.75 to $7.25.. We quote:

Butter—The butter market shows a fair local trade, and a better export demand than last week, though, naturally, there is but little butter sold for foreign account at present. Dairy tubs are quoted a shade higher this week, prices being 15 to 16c., though we hear that some butter has been sold by carload at 14 3-4c. Dealers report that of late there has been quite a good demand for undergrades. Butter exporters are expecting to see a big increase in Canadian exports, should the Russian-Japanese war continue through the Spring. We quote.

Cheese—September and October cheese are both quoted now at 10 1-2c., there being practically no difference between them now. There is a good deal more enquiry from the other side, but as buyer and seller still cannot come to terms, the enquiry has led to very little business. Buyers in England are doubtless holding off just now to learn the condition of the stocks at the first of the month. The probability is that there will be less than 100,000, which is not at present a very large amount. According to mail advices, however, Old Country dealers are expecting a goodish amount of cheese to go forward later on, and they think the Canadian sellers' outlook is not very rosy. Holders, however, in this market seem confident that their goods will shortly be needed, and have not shown any inclination to shade prices as yet. Local trade is quiet, which is the usual thing at this time of year. Grocery prices (in small lots) are 11 1-2c. for large cheese, and 11c. for small, mild cheese (20 lbs.).

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Feb. 29th, 1904.

WHILE wholesale houses are making no complaints, business has undoubtedly been very quiet throughout the entire month of February in the Maritime Provinces. The year opened with a heavy failure list and since then weather and other conditions have not been favorable to a revival of trade. For the last ten days vast quantities of drift ice have been in evidence in all the bays and harbors of the Atlantic Coast, and have interfered with fishing operations. The lobster fishermen have suspended work and it is safe to say that the Nova Scotia Winter fisheries this season have been the smallest on record. The price of lobsters until lately have been low and our people have realized less money than usual from this industry. This, following an unprecedentedly short Spring and Summer fishery, naturally has had a detrimental effect in all the shore counties. On the other hand, the districts in which orcharding is the mainstay, have been unusually prosperous owing to the large crop of apples and big prices realized on the other side. The mining and manufacturing centres are also prosperous and the increased demand for goods from these districts will probably offset any falling off in other quarters.

There is still much interest in the flour market and prices have further advanced. Stocks in this province are low, there being less than 4,000 barrels held in this city. Owing to the freight blockade it will be some weeks yet before further supplies can be obtained from the mills in Ontario and the West. Several large handlers of flour at provincial points have been buying here of late as their stocks are exhausted and cannot be replenished from the mills as usual. Manitoba hard wheat patents are quoted here now at $5.80, and one dealer says he is considering the holding of what he has on the spot for six dollars per barrel. The Halifax bakers have announced that the price of bread will be advanced to-morrow. Hitherto the price for a number of years has been five cents for the one and a-half pound loaf, but after to-day it will be six cents. The Sydney and St. John bakers have also advanced their prices. Cornmeal is higher and bran and middlings were marked up 50 cents per ton this week. There is not much middlings on the spot and these are chiefly in the hands of one firm.

West India merchants here are pleased with the new ruling regarding the importation of mixed molasses, as it is considered that it will lead to a larger demand for the genuine West India article. The principle on which the department seems to be acting is that the lower the percentage of cane sugar in molasses the higher the duty shall be Merchants here hold that the effect will be to shut out mixtures from the United States now greatly used in the upper provinces, and encourage the use of West Indian molasses. Merchants here also hail with satisfaction the announcement that British Guiana has decided to extend a preference of ten per cent. on Canadian imports. It is expected that West India Islands will follow suit and in a few years the business which now goes to the United States will come to Canada, in which event Halifax, from its situation, is bound to derive an advantage. In the last year there has been a large increase in Canadian trade with British Guiana, and conditions seem to be shaping for a revival of the West India trade in which a half century ago Halifax merchants amassed considerable wealth.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N. B., March, 1904

THIS has been, what all are terming, an old-fashioned Winter. Steady cold weather with thermometer often below zero, steady sleighing for now over two months, and piles of snow. In two months but two days of thaw, when we had heavy rain. This is also unusual. It has affected business, though the quantity of snow has not been so great in the other parts of the province. The snow blockade on the railways, as well as the rush of Winter port business, makes it almost impossible to get cars of goods for local consumption through from the West. In flour, meal, etc., our dealers have cars which have been out for weeks. In fact stocks in the city are running quite low. There is much dissatisfaction on the part of importers in reference to the service of the Furness Line steamers from London. Not only do the boats run irregularly, paying no attention to sailing dates, and making long trips, but they nearly every trip land their cargo in more or less bad condition. Of course the season has been very stormy, but the boats are too small and cargo is stored very badly on the other side. Where a subsidy is granted, the government should see that a proper service is given. As it is our merchants make heavy losses. Paper is reported very scarce. A large number of mills are shut down, the exceptional season in one way or another being the cause. Our merchants are put to great disadvantage by the service as performed by the New Brunswick Southern. The new railway commissioner should at once take into consideration these branch lines. They should be made to give the public something in return for the privileges they enjoy.

Oil—In burning oil the only change is in the retail price. Our grocers have always sold this line very close, but are trying to get a better profit. In linseeds the price continues low. Turpentine is still high. Dealers in lubricatings are pushing sales. Fish oil continues scarce.

Salt—The steamers are bringing out small lots, quite regularly, of Liverpool coarse salt, for local consumption, as well as larger quantities for shipment West, some going as far as Chicago. In fine salt, there is light sale.

Canned Goods—Holders of stock feel quite happy as nearly every line shows increased value, particularly vegetables. There is quite a fair stock of tomatoes held, but corn is in light supply. The dull line would seem to be gallon apples. Beef tends higher. In domestic fish stocks are light. Haddies are about out of the market.

Sugar—This is one line which keeps very low. Dealers while they carry quite full stocks do not seem to expect much change. Stocks of foreign sugar held are not large.

Molasses—This is a quiet line. Prices are rather lower with still lower prices quoted for the latter part of the month. The trade buy in very small lots. On account of local competition this is likely to be a line of interest during the season.

Fish—This is a season when there is a good, steady sale. The demand is chiefly for fresh fish. There has been a fair supply. Prices rule quite firm. Herring have been in better supply than for years. In dry fish stocks are light with prices very firm and tending higher. Smoked herring are very scarce. Pickled are a fair supply only. Finnan haddies tend higher.

Flour, Feed and Meal—These have been the lines of chief interest. Flour holds the quite full advance of the last few weeks and millers do not push sales. Feed is higher. Oats show quite an advance with oatmeal again higher. Cornmeal also hold the advance. Beans are following in line, though more slowly. In barley stocks are light and prices firmer. Split peas are scarce and high. Seeds sell quite freely, prices being quite low. Alsike is offered well below red clover, which seems the firm line, prices tending higher.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

THROUGHOUT the week the market for groceries here participated fully in the interest which has characterized it in Eastern cities. The war in the Orient, the changed conditions in the sugar market and the advances in canned goods have all had their due effect here, and in the process the market has been stimulated as has seldom been the case in the Winter season. The first change to take effect was that in canned goods and the lines included were corn, peas and tomatoes. The advance is proportionate with that given in Eastern advices of last week. On Friday all refined sugars were advanced in sympathy with new quotations established at refineries that day. Sugars in wood are now 10c. higher and in bags 5c. higher. The reason assigned by brokers here for the discrepancy between the two is that wood is costing the refiners so much more money now that they are obliged to ask this difference for barreled goods.

Flour has continued its upward tendency and another 15c. has been added to the price, making the jobbing quotation now $2.75 per sack of 98-lbs. for best Hungarian patents; second patents are worth $2.60 and strong bakers $2.20.

The strength in Japan goods continues although there have been no further advances in prices.

The various lines of farm produce are scarce in the Winnipeg market at present, due largely to the cold weather which has been so prominent a feature for several weeks past. Choice dairy butter is scarcely to be had and dealers are offering 21c. for this grade in bricks. Eggs are hardly to be had at all in quantity and the commission house price for case lots of fresh, delivered here, is 30c. per dozen. New laid eggs are quoted at 65c. per dozen, the highest price since 1882.

Trade is good for the season in all departments and expectations for Spring are high.

The large attendance of farmers and breeders in Winnipeg during the past week has given an excellent opportunity of finding out conditions in country districts at first hand, and it would seem that there is a much larger proportion of wheat in farmers' hands than was supposed, the amount is now variously estimated at 6,000,000 to 7,000,000. This is actually in farmers' hands, and does not include what is in store in country elevators. It is likely that there is at least 5,500,000 in farmers' hands and at present there is practically none moving, the railway companies not being in a position to handle it, even if the farmers were willing to sell, while they certainly are not.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 26.

UNDOUBTEDLY the most interesting feature of the markets this week is to be found in the flour situation. The prices, as announced in the East and in Manitoba, have continued to increase, several advances having been advised within the past few weeks. The first 15c. advance was not followed sharply by the market here, because dealers were stocked. The second raise of 15c. found dealers here still jobbing at $5.60 per barrel. They promptly raised to meet it, and last week a further advance of 10c. put the mill price up to $6. This week the jobbers are quoting flour at the mill price, $6, and strange to say the retailers are still selling the consumers at the same figure.

Of course many retailers bought at the lower prices and stocked up all they could stand. The jobbers, facing that position, and having also stocked up are selling at $6, though that is the firm quotation on this market by Ogilvie's, Lake of the Woods, and other big concerns. In fact one big Winnipeg mill has at present withdrawn its quotations, and orders are being accepted subject to approval. None of them have been turned down yet, but as the market is on mill price basis yet, it may not be long till orders are refused.

It is the small miller's opportunity at the present time. In the nature of things many of the smaller and less known mills of the Northwest and Manitoba do not find so ready a market for their make as the better known brands. As a consequence prices are always quoted a little lower per barrel for these mills, not that the flour is of poorer quality necessarily. Now that the price of flour has gone up so very high, the small mills can sell at lower rates and with some attraction to consumers.

The local trade to the north has begun to assume the activity of the Spring season. On the last two steamers sailing from this port there were fully two hundred passengers, most of whom were for Dawson or White Horse. Many of those going to the latter place were preparing to go in to the new fields of the Alsek district. The shipments of provisions and supplies were pretty liberal. A feature was the shipment of a large quantity of goods which will go in over the ice to Dawson.

It is interesting to learn details of how the shippers, or freighters on the trail manage to carry perishable goods in without freezing. Formerly it was done by having closed in sleighs with heaters in them, but this was discarded as it proved too expensive altogether. Now it is handled about this way. Take eggs for instance. Each egg is wrapped in paper and the crates are also lined and covered outside with several thicknesses of paper. Then as the freight is not all made up of perishables, several teams going together will divide up the perishables placing them in the middle of the loads. Not a very long day is made with the freighting, as men and teams cannot stand it too long with slow travel in the open air.

When a stopping place is reached where it is intended to put up for the night, a tent is pitched. In this a stove is placed and fire is kept up all night so that the precious goods are kept from freezing and are warmed up as well, so that the packages contain sufficient latent heat to keep from freezing during the few hours of the day's travel. Other goods which have to be protected are wrapped in similar manner. With several teamsters travelling together one extra man is carried to keep the fires on at night and heat the perishable goods. But they are expensive at best when landed in Dawson. Some of the shipments going in on last boat were butter and eggs, indicating that these articles were becoming scarce.

Local market conditions are fairly active this week. Aside from flour, butter and eggs are perhaps the most interesting articles on the market. The egg supply is still short though the return of milder weather has induced a more liberal supply of fresh laid local eggs. Prices from California have dropped also. Quotations will bring them now down to 28c. jobbing, which will allow a corresponding reduction in the retail price which has been 35c. for the past two weeks. Local fresh sell for 40c. now.

A car of Ontario butter is due to arrive for local jobbers, to be distributed. It is not yet announced what the wholesale quotation will be. The Australian steamer arriving this week had a consignment of butter for a local firm. The expected arrival of a car from Ontario has caused a slight reduction in the price quoted for Manitoba and N. W. T. Government creamery. It is now at 24c. Local fresh creamery is still quoted at 30c. at which price it is likely to remain.

Lard is quoted ½c. higher in sympathy with Eastern advances. It costs now 7½c. in tierces, Eastern base, which makes the jobbing figure about 9½c. tierces, with smaller sizes ¼c. higher for each size.

In groceries arrivals of rice by the steamer Athenian have not affected quotations. The steamer brought 125 tons Japan rice, and the local jobbing price is still firm as quoted at $90 per ton. So long as the Japanese control the sea, as they do now, the shipments of rice may not be interferred with, unless the Japanese Government should prohibit export of Japan rice. China rice is not in favor in the general demand on this market.

Very active feeling marks the movement of California dried fruits. The prices will all have to be moved up ½c. on peaches, apricots and other lines. The movement of staples from the East in anticipation of very active demand for Northern shipments has begun. The consignments of condensed milk, for instance on the way for wholesalers here, are very heavy. Last year the trade did not get what they ordered, and in renewing contracts they took the precaution to insert a penalty clause, so that they are more likely to get the goods this season. Canned vegetables are held firm, in anticipation of active movement, as soon as Spring trade North opens.

Local salmon canners are much exercised over the reported granting of permission to set down fish traps. They have protested against the allowing of traps any where near the Fraser river or its mouth. It is likely the salmon canning industry will be very conservatively administered this season, few canneries being operated on account of anticipated small pack. Prices of salmon in the Old Country market are reported firm.

In vegetables, the California shipments make practically a full line of green vegetables now. There are radishes, green peas, string beans, new cabbage, sprouts, tomatoes, etc., and local forced lettuce and rhubarb is on the market. The rhubarb, which is new on the market this week, is 1 c. per lb. Tomatoes from California are $2.50 per case. Celery, California grown, is 75c. per dozen.

The potato market is in a rather peculiar situation. There is a very firm belief in some quarters that the ranchers of the Fraser valley are holding up large supplies. Others say that there is not the big stock on hand which has been the experience of recent years. The fact remains that potatoes are held firm and that dealers are looking afield for supplies. One firm this week bought over 300 tons in the Okanagan country, which has not as a rule shipped many potatoes to Vancouver.

Fruit shows little new. Oranges are, if anything, lower in price. Navels are as low as $2.50 per box, with the few seedlings on the market quoted at 50c. less. Demand is fairly good. There are a few boxes of Jap oranges which have been in cold storage now being sold at 90c. per box. Apples are beginning to become scarce. The stock of Coldstream apples will be replenished as soon as weather permits of them being shipped down from Vernon.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Special values are offered this week by James Rutherford & Co., Montreal, in Japan teas to retail at 25c., 30c., and 35c. lb. See their ad. in another part of this issue.

The attention of the trade is called to ad. of G. F. Sutton, Sons & Co., London, Eng., in this week's issue. Special lines of essences, sauces, herbs, &c., are noted.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, are offering an attractive line for temperance people in Dubonnet Tonic Wine, a very fine appetizer.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, report a good demand for canned salmon. They have a large and well assorted stock, talls, flats, at some very attractive prices.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, are offering a very fine range of dried fruits, raisins, valencias, table, sultana, currants, figs, dates, etc.

A shipment of Magee's canned smelts arrived this week for H. P. Eckardt & Co.

John P. Gallagher, Notre Dame street, Montreal, reports that sales for Small's maple cream and other maple syrup specialties are increasing rapidly. Mr. Gallagher's sales of MacGregor butter scotch in the city are also most satisfactory. Eastern trade requirements in these lines are carefully looked after by Mr. Gallagher.

The R. & J. H. Simpson Company report having exceptional value in canned salmon. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The T. Upton Co. wish to remind the trade that they are now shipping this season's orange marmalade. Put up in 12 oz. and 16 oz. glass jars, 2 and 5 lb. tins, and 7 lb. wood pails.

The firm of John Hopkins, St. John, N. B., are in receipt of a car of eggs which will repay attention of interested parties.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, have received another car of Redland Beauty California navel oranges, and report a car of lemons on the way from shipboard at New York. They have received a car of Valencia onions, and expect two additional car shipments within a day or two.

White & Co., Toronto, report the arrival of a shipment of French onions from Bordeaux, the first ever received in Toronto. The shipment consists of 300 cases, each case weighing 115 pounds net, and is going nicely at $3 per case. This firm have also received a car of bananas. No. 1 Jamaica fruit.

Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal, are offering a splendid map of the seat of war between Russia and Japan. See their ad. in another part of the paper.

FINANCE AND INSURANCE

AS a means of forcing American currency out of circulation, the banks of Edmonton, Alta., have decided to charge a substantial discount on all United States currency passing through their hands, says a western exchange. There is no question that the profit on the coinage in circulation in Western Canada should be made by the Canadian Government, and moreover that the coinage in circulation in Canada should be Canadian coinage. On the other hand it must be remembered that the prevalence of considerable quantities of United States currency in Western Canada at the present time is due to a particular cause, namely, the remarkable influx of settlers from the United States. The whole West has apparently every reason to extend the most cordial welcome to such desirable immigrants; the desire of the business community as a whole seems to be to give the newcomers the full value of their money. It is doubtful in view of the special circumstances whether a wiser course on the part of the Edmunton banks would not have been to invite the local merchants to turn in to them all United States currency coming into their hands. The banks could express it to the United States, and the total expense involved which the banks could charge against the merchants or bear themselves as they saw fit, would be inconsiderable.

THE annual statement of the Merchants' Bank of Prince Edward Island issued December 31, 1903, reveals the following satisfactory condition of affairs: Net profits for the year were $55,595.57, to which is added the amount brought forward from 1902, $1,187.59, making a total of $56,783.16. From this sum after the payment of two dividends and sundry appropriations the sum of $30,363.18 was transferred to rest account, together with the premium on new stock issued, $30,636.82, making that account now $266,000.00, or $77,781.51 in excess of paid-up capital.

IT is reported that the name of the company which will take over the assets and property of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company is the Canadian Improvement Company. It will be capitalized at about $40,000,000, which with bond issues of $13,000,000 will bring the total amount of securities of the new company up to $53,000,000. W. L. Bull and J. T. Terry, of New York, and R. Pitcairn, of Pittsburg, are among the leading interests which propose to rehabilitate the old company.

INSURING BANKS AGAINST LOSS.

THE majority of civilized people are already reasonably well posted on insurance, and if the number of insurance agents continues to increase in the same proportion as it has during the last ten years there is reason to believe every mother's son of us will have at least an opportunity of becoming a wiser and better man in this generation.

The latest insurance novelty reported is an association to insure United States national banks against loss; what is more, expert financiers have declared the application of principles of insurance to banking to be entirely practicable. The scheme is to levy an annual tax on the capital or deposits of every bank in the country, the amount of tax to be calculated according to the mortality among banks, and the percentage of probable loss. In this way, a reserve will soon be built up which will be sufficient to meet every loss incurred, pay in full the liabilities of every failing bank, and make good every impairment of capital. Statistics show that if a tax of 3-8 of one per cent. had been levied annually upon the outstanding circulation for the last 39 years it would have been sufficient to redeem the outstanding notes of every national bank that has failed during the same period wtihout having to fall back upon bonds held as security or other funds.

WALL STREET AND THE COUNTRY.

Atlantic Monthly

OF the many lessons to be learned from recent experience, one of the most obvious is that the outsider should not enter the stock market in the gambling spirit, but only for investment, and then only when he has made a careful study of values of properties and their earning power, and of the conditions which affect the market ..... Other things being equal, two important elements operate upon the price paid for an investment—its safety and the net return paid in interest or dividends. A high degree of safety will contribute towards raising the price of an investment, but the rise in price will render it less attractive upon the other side by reducing the return upon it. For the owner of an investment security and especially for him who has it to sell, a scarcity of safe securities and a rise in their price are acceptable and desirable. For the owner of capital seeking investment, however, an excess of such capital in the market and a high price for securities are an injury, because they reduce the earning power of his capital in whatever securities he may invest it. To meet his needs new demands for capital must be found from time to time, equal to the amount of capital created.....The path followed during the past few years has been the conversion into large corporations of industrial enterprises aggregating about nine billions of dollars. When the earning power of a number of mills or factories could be capitalized into bonds and preferred stocks, a supply of securities could be created which would meet the demand for new forms of investment arising from among those who were rapidly making money under favorable commercial conditions..... This tendency to create securities has undoubtedly been overdone within the last few years. There followed the phenomenon of a mass of undigested securities which could no longer find the market of a few years before. The public victimized by such were themselves to blame quite as much as misguided or dishonest promoters. If they passed by conservative companies and safe investments to seize upon glittering offers of speculative stocks by mushroom companies who was to stay them or retrieve their errors, so long as those who deluded them kept barely within the line of indictable fraud.....Every new form of financial organization has to pass the test of fire. The ultimate capacity of the joint stock system of organization is still untested. During the past century it has been extended to nearly every form of manufacture and to the complicated problems of transportation by land and sea. It contains, however, other possibilities which have not yet been developed. Among those recently put into practice have been the consolidation of great industries, the leasing of one corporation's property to another, and the control of operating companies by companies holding their securities. Whether these new forms of joint stock enterprise will be successful must be determined by experience. The secret of success here as in the whole of finance, industry and competition in foreign markets is to obtain a given result by the greatest possible economy of capital and of effort.

BANKING AND INSURANCE NOTES.

G. M. Patterson, Stratford, has been promoted to the management of a branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Winnipeg.

The Metropolitan Bank are erecting a building at the corner of Dundas and Arthur streets, Toronto to be occupied by the bank as soon as it is completed.

P. A. Curry, manager of the Union Bank, Middleton, N.S., has been promoted to a similar position at New Glasgow. He will be succeeded at Middleton by C. E. Jubien, formerly of Sherbrook, Que.

Clay, Sharp & Co., bankers, Burk's Falls, have been succeeded by the Sovereign Bank of Canada. The Sovereign Bank has also opened a branch at Stanbridge East, Quebec., having purchased the private banking business of Colonel Gilmour.

R. H. Fulton, inspector of the Sovereign Bank, has been promoted to the position of superintendent of agencies. He will be succeeded as inspector by L. P. Snyder of the St. Catharines branch. The bank purposes to erect handsome new offices on St. James street, Montreal.

The Crown Bank has secured premises at 34 King street west, Toronto, which will be entirely remodelled and used both as the head office and office of the Toronto branch. The bank has also secured permanent offices in Ottawa, in the G.N.W. building at the corner of Sparks and Metcalfe streets.

On January 7, 1904, A. E. Ames & Co., Toronto, issued a circular letter to their unsecured creditors proposing the formation of a corporation to be known as the Securities Holding Company, Limited, which should take over the firm's assets and assume all its liabilities. Unsecured creditors were asked to consent to accept stock in the proposed Securities' Company to the full amount of their claims against the firm. Since then a great majority of the unsecured creditors have consented to the proposal and Ames & Co. have formed the Securities Holding Company and transferred thereto all their assets, each unsecured creditor having been mailed a certificate of stock in the Securities Holding Company, representing the full amount of his claim against Ames & Co.

REPRESENTATIVE OF ENGLISH FIRM.

MARTIN NIERMEYER, export manager for G. F. Sutton, Sons & Co., London, England, manufacturers of condiments, is at present making a trip through Canada, calling upon the grocery trade. Mr. Niermeyer arrived in Halifax the 14th of February and reports having had very satisfactory business in both Halifax and St. John, N.B.

Mr. Niermeyer is at present calling on the trade in Montreal and Quebec, and is making his commercial headquarters at the Queen's Hotel, Montreal, where he carries a full line of his company's samples.

As Sutton's goods are practically a household article in Great Britain he expects that the trade in Canada will, as it has in every British colony, appreciate and take hold of his goods. "Our principal of business," said Mr. Niermeyer, "for the last 40 years, has been to make pure goods, and supply them to the trade at the most reasonable prices so that we are in a position to compete against any English firm of reputation. The British Lancet in a criticism of Sutton's goods, speaks of them as being prepared with special care, and free from ingredients of an obnoxious kind, their flavoring essences being free from prussic acid."

It is Mr. Niermeyer's intention to visit all the principal commercial centres of Canada. He expects to be in Toronto during the coming week, and will make his quarters at the Queen's Hotel, where he will be pleased to receive calls from the trade. He will also visit the jobbing and retail merchants in each city.

Communications addressed to Mr. Niermeyer at Queen's Hotel, Montreal, will receive prompt attention.

A THREE-IN-ONE LUBRICANT.

This utilitarian age will undoubtedly welcome the suggestion of a universal panacea for the ills of the housekeeper, sportsman, mechanic or artisan. Woodwork becomes marred, tools rust and get dull, and sewing-machines need occasional lubricating if they are not to clog up. Men needs must tinker up the old until it simulates the new, what better means is conceivable of refurbishing, or renewing the lost virtue of a thousand and one accessories than "Three-in-one" lubricating, cleaning and polishing oil, manufactured by G. W. Cole & Company, New York. Its uses are legion, and its excellent features mentioned elsewhere in this issue of The CANADIAN GROCER, are sufficient to recommend "Three-in-one" successfully to every man and woman in Canada who have come to the years of discretion, provided only they have 10 or 25c. at their disposal.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions

An Attractive Display.

THE window that sells goods, the window that every merchant wants and that every window dresser strives after is the one that calls attention to a particular line. It is not the window that contains a sample of every line carried, that is going to pay for the trouble and time expended upon it. A display must be for the purpose of advertising a particular line, and every other line must be excluded from the window save when it is connected with the main feature, or as it is deemed necessary to be inserted to take off some of the stiffness and monotony of a solid arrangement of one class of goods.

In this window, shown by Michie & Co., Toronto, this idea has been quite well carried out, the main part of the display being bottled goods, catsups, jellies, olives, pickles, marmalades, etc. A background is made up of boxed goods, but this does not in any way distract the attention from the principal line, but rather brings out more distinctly the bottles shown. There is nothing intricate in the arrangement, but sufficient design and symmetry is observed to make it effective. The large display bottles contained olives and other fruits with the branches on which they grew. A somewhat better effect might have been obtained by an arrangement that would have had a more prominent central figure of the bottles and by a design that would have more prominent figures or points.

The floor is covered with crepe paper, one of the prettiest and cleanest appearing foundations that a grocer can use. Some such trimming is necessary at almost all times unless the floor is built of hard wood. The paper is drawn quite tight and fastened in small pleats. Any color can be used to match any color in the goods, and the cost is not more than ten cents for an average-sized window. Clean white or yellow paper is sometimes made use of, but it is cheaper looking and not so tasty as the crepe paper or plain colored tissue paper.

NICHOLSON & BROCK, TORONTO

CLERKS WHO ATTEND TO BUSINESS.

NO clerk who expects to be a success will be lacking in self-respect, says a writer in the Commercial Bulletin. He is lacking in self-respect if he is one of those who are continually trying to work the travelling salesman for extra favors. While the travelling salesman may grant such concessions as a matter of business policy, the opinion of that clerk which he carries away with him is not likely to be favorable.

In the many stores I visit I run across all types of clerks. I can count on my fingers the clerks who have the stamp of real business men and are developing fast. There are many indifferent clerks in those stores who seem to care little about the future. Then there is the big group which is always looking for the treat and seems to attend to business when it has nothing else to do.

It is always easy to pick the clerk who has the right idea. He is there to make money for the store and he shows it in his actions. He is the kind of a clerk the traveling salesman likes to treat, but he is not one of the kind who do business on treats. He wants to know about your goods, why they are better values than others, what their strong selling points are, and the profit they pay.

I have universally found that the clerk who is constantly suggesting free cigars is the poorest kind of a clerk. Instead of attending to business he is hanging around the visitors and "joshing" after his style. He completely loses sight of the fact that by showing a little more self-respect and dignity he could lift himself several notches above his present condition.

By endeavoring to make himself more of a business man and a little less of a grafter he would make friends that might be of use to him, where on his cheap grafting basis he actually damages his prospects.

Among the salesmen with whom I have a close acquaintance is one man who has considerable trouble with these grafting clerks. In a certain store which he visits regularly he was told not long ago that unless he "set up" the cigars his goods would be boycotted. In another store he was asked to contribute a certain amount of money for some "blow-out" the clerks were giving and the gentle hint thrown out that failure to do so would put the clerks at work on another brand of goods.

Now, that is a fine thing, isn't it? Here are clerks paid to sell goods purchased by the proprietor. The proprietor buys them because he considers the quality is what he wants and the price right. But here is an outfit of clerks who propose to "knock" certain goods regardless of the interest of the proprietor, if their demands are not granted by the salesman.

In some cases the proprietors themselves are to blame. I have seen enough of the bad results from this grafting to convince me that I would allow none of it in a store of mine. The clerk who keeps away from it wins in the estimation of people who are in a position to do him good.

Biscuits And Confectionery

Biscuits in Grocery.

THE wonderful development in the confectioner's and biscuit maker's art in recent years has made a great change in this department in the progressive grocery. With the advent of the individual package and the use of tin as its material of construction the biscuit and cake maker has been able to give his genius full scope. The toothsome confection that comes from his oven, can now be kept for any reasonable period as fresh and tasty as on the day it was baked.

The effect of this on the average housewife has been what one might have imagined. She is no longer under compulsion to experiment with home made dainties when in a hurry, when overcrowded with work or with the thermometer up around the nineties. The corner grocery can supply, if the proprietor is up-to-date, a most enticing variety of fancy biscuits, which in appearance daintiness and healthfulness are in nine cases out of ten away ahead of the domestic product.

Many housewives are acquainted with these facts and are accordingly generous buyers of fancy confections from the grocer, but the trade could be much extended by a little effort on the part of the grocer. The thing itself is its own best advertisement. If the grocer takes the trouble to locate his fancy biscuit department where it will be seen by every person who enters the store he will find a large increase in his sales.

With their glass fronts these handsome tin boxes show forth their sweet contents to very great advantage, and there are few women who looking around for "something nice for tea" are able to see such a display as this without placing an order.

It is not enough, however, in order to get the best results merely to have these biscuits on exhibition, a hint, a suggestion from the salesman will often add the last straw to the customer's determination to invest.

This is a department that will repay attention.

Cakes Gone Up.

An advance of from 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. has been made in the price of cakes by the Toronto master bakers this week. One of the master bakers states that they were forced to make this increase because of the unprecedented prices they had to pay for materials, and especially eggs. Eggs a year ago were available at 15 to 25 cents a dozen, but to-day 40 cents a dozen is the price, or at the rate of $12 a case for limed eggs. Flour has also gone up considerably.

The increase went into effect on Monday, and will hold until April 1st in any event. The fear is entertained that the bread bakers will be compelled to follow the example of the cake bakers and raise the price of bread.

Modifying the Sweetness.

Mr. Blower had had a difference with the local grocer, and he had openly vowed never to patronize the emporium again. Therefore, the merchant in question was agreeably surprised when one afternoon his late customer entered and ordered half a stone of sugar, with complete nonchalance.

Prudence would have dictated silence; but human nature is weak, and as he tied the string the grocer could not resist saying:

"I though you declared you would never darken my door again, Mr. Blower."

"That is true, and I should not have done so," was the retort, "but I've just received a fine lot of carnation cuttings, and I had no sand for potting them."
—Stray Stories.

Demise of Biscuit Manufacturer.

The Scottish Trader reports the recent death of Mr. Henry Carr, head of the well-known firm of biscuit manufacturers, Carlisle, from heart disease while walking along Scotch street, Carlisle, to his offices. He was the last surviving son of the late Mr. Dodgson Carr, the founder of the firm, and was about 70 years of age. He took a deep interest in various religious movements, and was

PURE GOLD TALK.

No. 7.

Some years ago we put on the market a Jelly Powder. It was a new thing, and its acceptance by the trade was immediate.

Since that time there have been twenty-four—we think this figure is right—other jelly powders put on the market. We can't object to this. A good idea is perhaps too good to be long the possession of any one man or firm. But we do think that those appropriating our idea should not have imitated our package, directions, recipes, etc. All we can do now is to insist upon the fact of the unquestionable excellence of Pure Gold products. When the Pure Gold Company undertakes to make anything, the grocery trade may rest assured that what they make is the superlative quality. We experiment a long time before ever the public hears of a new thing bearing our name.

In JELLY POWDERS we say without hesitation that ours is still the best made, the standard, and certainly the best for the discriminating grocer to stock and push.

We sustain the grocer's reputation in sustaining our own.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LOCAL FREIGHT CHARGES.

Editor The Canadian Grocer: You frequently deal in your editorials and through your columns on subjects of interest to the merchants of Canada, and grocers in particular, but there is one grievance which I have not noticed mentioned in your valuable paper, namely, the excessive local freight charges.

Not so very long ago we had a minimum freight rate of 35c. To this rate a minimum charge of 10c. cartage was added, and lately another 5c., making the minimum 50c. to points where there is cartage at one end, and 65c. where there is cartage at both ends.

Would not the manufacturers, jobbers and wholesalers of Toronto, and other cartage points, deliver their goods F. O. B. as at places where there are no cartage agencies. This may seem a trivial grievance, but it means considerable to a grocer who is constantly receiving shipments—some large and others small.

Could not the boards of trade and similar organizations, and all interested, make an appeal to the railroads and make an effort to get this adjusted properly?

I hope I have made myself understood. I am not used to writing up matters of this kind, but I trust you will give it the attention which I think it deserves.

THE TEA QUESTION.

Editor Canadian Grocer: Messrs. Galt in their last week's advertisement in your paper endeavored to cover up with a mass of verbiage, the fact that they are trying to escape from the acceptance by the Blue Ribbon Tea Co. of our challenge issued some time back. We want to make it plain to your readers and yourself, that we issued a challenge; this was plainly accepted in a three-quarter page advertisement by the Blue Ribbon Tea Co. Messrs. Galt then issued another challenge; we accepted it, and placed two $500 cheques to cover both our challenge accepted by Messrs. Galt, and their challenge accepted by us. Messrs. Galt are willing to go on with the latter, and that is proceeding, but if they imagine that they are going to escape liability from the former, they are very much mistaken, as we will invoke the aid of the law to compel them, if necessary, to proceed with both, and, in the meantime, we again take the opportunity of warning you to hold on to Messrs. Galts' cheque now in your hands, as well as ours covering it. Every word in our challenge, and acceptance of Messrs. Galts' challenge, appeared in the clearest and best faith, and there was no "bluff," there was a pure statement of facts which we are willing to go on with, and Messrs. Galt cannot expect that they can come out before the grocers of Canada, accept our challenge, then escape from all liability. There are two challenges before the public, one issued by Messrs. Galt and accepted by us; one issued by us and accepted by the "Blue Ribbon Tea Co." These shall be gone on with, if we can compel them to go on with them. So far, as we said, one is being proceeded with and both cheques covering it are in Messrs. Clarkson & Cross' hands; the other must also be gone on with, as we will not allow our competitors to pose before the grocers in Canada as bravely accepting our challenge and then getting out of the acceptance.

With kind regards, we are,
Yours truly,

PROFITABLE LINE FOR GROCERS.

THE activity of makers of stock foods in soliciting the grocery trade to act as selling agents for their wares clearly indicates the increased consumption of cattle, horse and poultry foods throughout Canada. These foods besides being of approved value to stock and poultry raisers are very profitable for the dealer and hence constitute an excellent line for the grocery trade to handle.

A firm that has lately begun operations in Canada is the Myers Royal Spice Co., of Niagara Falls. This concern is by no means a new one; indeed it is among the oldest, having for over half a century been making a spice food, the sale of which has until recently been confined to the old world, particularly England, the centre of its manufacture. Wherever sold Myers' spice has established an enviable record, and medals and diplomas have testified to its good qualities for many years.

A branch has been opened in the United States, and recently in Canada. American stock men have given hearty endorsement to Myers' "Spice of Life," and in Canada there doubtless awaits this food additional triumphs. Interesting and instructive literature will be mailed to grocers on application to the company at Niagara Falls.

HAMILTON GROCEHS' AT-HOME.

THE Hamilton Retail Grocers held their annual "At-Home" in the Board of Trade rooms on Tuesday of last week and as usual the affair turned out to be a big success. Nearly every grocer in the city was present as were also the travelling fraternity and a number of outsiders.

The invitations sent out were such as not to be overlooked and the programmes which were of a striking character caused much amusement. The "At-Home" took the form of a smoker, and cigars and little clay pipes loaded to the brim were everywhere in evidence, inviting the devotee of the weed to indulge in the entrancing occupation of blowing rings.

Refreshments were served in abundance and of a quality which encouraged the appetite to do wonders. An excellent musical and literary programme was presented and the performers were rewarded with heary and vigorous applause.

James Main presided and was asssited by Adam Ballentine.

The programme was as follows:

GREEN FRUITS

Apple Exporting.

A WINTER such as has been experienced this year presents many difficulties to apple exporters, who must ship long distances by rail. Fresh fruit requires protection from frost and as the extreme cold weather has been continuous since the latter part of December the problem of safe shipping has been hard to solve. In conversation with a representative of The Grocer, McWilliam & Everist, apple exporters, Toronto, explained their method of getting apples to the seaboard in good condition during the Winter. The shipping season of Winter apples extends over a period of about 6 months, October to March inclusive, and 50,000 bbls. will represent the exports of this firm during the present season. In order to forward this quantity weekly shipments of about 2,000 bbls. average must be made, and the shipper must quickly adapt himself to weather conditions. Years ago, before suitable cars were provided for fruit, apples were loaded in box cars (about 150 bbls. each) with wood stoves in centre of car. These cars had not the proper facilities for circulation of heat and the result was that those near the stove were too hot while those at either end of the car were too cold.

This to a large extent has been overcome in the best equipped cars of today. Inside the car is a compartment holding an oil heater, which is easily reached through a special small door at the side of the car, when filling or refilling with oil and turning the heat off or on, as the temperature of the apples require it. Thermometers are placed in each car.

Special trains of from 7 to 15 cars each convey the apples to the Atlantic seaboard, and each and every train is accompanied by a representative of the firm whose duty it is to look carefully after the condition of the cars in transit. The railroad companies furnish the heater, supply the oil at divisional points and assist their employe in every way possible.

The apples are in these cars from 5 to 8 days. The last shipment though delayed very much by snow and storms has arrived o. k. This week's lot of 11 cars is now on the way and the exporters are in receipt of a wire from their man, who posts them daily, that shipment is carrying well.

The importance of delivering our Canadian apples in Europe in first-class condition is two-fold. First, it insures the highest market price; second, increased trade will follow.

Those who have seen apples packed in Canada and the same sold in Liverpool, say, "If we could only land them in the condition we ship them they would sell better."

The shipping facilities are steadily improving both on land and sea, and for our Canadian apple exporters we bespeak a profitable return and a gradually increasing business.

Growth of the Banana.

THERE is a vast amount of ignorance among intelligent people of the north concerning the growth, production and marketing of bananas. Many people imagine that the natives in tropical climes step out of their huts in the early morning and pluck and eat bananas fresh from the plant the same as they would oranges and other fruits.

Bananas ripened on the plant are not suitable for food, and would be much the same as the pith which is found in the northern cornstalk or elder. Bananas, sold in Canada, even after travelling 3,000 miles in a green state, are every bit as good as bananas ripened under a tropical sun. This is probably true of no other fruit. The plant of which the bananas are the fruit is not a tree, nor is it a bush or vine. It is simply a gigantic plant, growing to a height of from 15 to 20 feet. About 18 feet from the ground the leaves, oftimes 8 feet long, come out in a sort of cluster, from the centre of which springs a bunch of bananas. These do not grow with the bananas pointing upward, naturally, and if the stem grew straight they would hang exactly as seen in the fruit stores and grocers' windows. This, however, is not the case; the stem bends under the weight of the fruit, and this brings it into directly the opposite position, with the large end of the stalk up and the fringes pointing toward the sun.

A word of explanation concerning some banana terms. Each banana is called a "finger," and each of these little clusters of fingers surrounding a stalk called a "hand;" the quality and value of each bunch depend on the number of hands it has. Some may wonder how the fruit is cut from the top of a plant 15 feet from the ground. The native laborers cut the stalk part way up its height, the weight of the fruit causes the stalk to slowly bend over until the bunch of bananas first nicely reached the ground, then the bunch is cut off with the ever-ready machete and carried to the river or railroad for shipment. The plant at the same time is cut close to the ground. The banana is a very prolific reproducer of itself, and at every cleaning of the land it is necessary to cut down many of the young plants, or "suckers," as they are termed, in order that they may not become overcrowded up to a certain limit; the less suckers on a given area the larger the fruit they will produce.—Roxbury Times.

Nova Scotia Apples.

The Crystal Palace authorities have presented a special commemoration medal to the Nova Scotia Government for the splendid exhibition of apples displayed by the Fruit Growers' Association. The exhibition received the personal attention of the agent general.

Advice to Apple Shippers.

Mr. Peter Ball, Canadian Commercial Agent at Birmingham, advises Canadian apple shippers not to pour the whole of their fruit crop into London, Liverpool, Manchester and Glasgow, within a few weeks, for sale in auction rooms, but to spread them over the different towns, placing them in the hands of firms who could take regular supplies. The latter course would pay better.

"I could place," he states, "among different towns in this district up to 10,000 barrels a week, divided among respectable men, if any of our apple shippers would care to get into communication for regular supplies."

Mediterranean Fruit Ships.

Montreal, will the coming Spring, receive the usual number of fruit cargoes from the Mediterranean. The three steamships already arranged for are the Thomson Liners Fremona, Jacona and Escalona or Bellona. Their probable ports of call will be Messina, Catania, Marsala, Palermo, Sorrento and Leghorn, Italy; Tarragona, Valencia, Cadiz, Spain; and at other ports where sufficient cargo is offered. The loadings have been arranged as follows: Steamer Fremona, begins to load at Messina about March 18, completing at Sorrento, and is expected to arrive at Montreal as soon as the opening of navigation will permit.

The Jacona will start loading at Messina about a week later, also finishing at Sorrento. These steamers will be followed either by the Bellona or the Escalona, commencing at Leghorn and proceeding to Sicilian and Spanish ports.

Complaints of Frozen Fruit.

G. W. Hunt, fruit dealer, of Ottawa, has written the Railway Commission, complaining as to the large amount of fruit which was frozen this year, while in transit on railways. He asks if anything can be done by the commission in a matter of this kind. If so, he would like to lay the matter before that body.

B. C. Apples at St. Louis.

British Columbia apples will be exhibited at the St. Louis World's Fair, says the Vancouver World. The Government wrote to Mr. Henry, the Vancouver nurseryman, asking him to take in hand the fruit exhibit for St. Louis. Mr. Henry replied that the Lower Mainland of the province could not produce hardy fruit suitable for exhibition purposes, and he referred the Government to W. L. Fortune, of Kamloops; T. Earle, of Lytton, and Charles Ambrose, of Enderby, as fruit growers who could produce apples fit to compete with any in the world. As a result, arrangements with these gentlemen have been made and there will be an exhibit at the St. Louis Fair of a fine collection of the large, rosy-cheeked, fine-flavored specimens for which the Upper Country is so justly famous.

Green Apples Scarce.

According to the circular issued for the exclusive use of the International Apple Shippers' Association the storage stocks of apples in the United State, Canada and Nova Scotia on February 1 were 2,450,458 barrels, compared with 3,124,689 on February 1, 1903, a decrease of 674,231 barrels. And this proportion of decrease promises to be maintained as long as there are any apples in the refrigerators.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

The Great Bull Movement.

THE Armour bull operations in wheat, which for months were carried on with the world in opposition, are now moving along with all the world in accord.

Prices are up 23 to 29¾ cents from the low price last November, when the bull undertaking was begun, and when speculators here and abroad were all believers in wheat in the sixties. May wheat last week sold at $1.08¾. The movement for higher prices began at around 76 cents in the middle of last November.

The war situation and the possibility that powers other than Russia will become involved are now the motives which are making wheat speculators buyers the world over. But when the leader in the great movement began his operation in the late Fall there were no signs of war. The Armour buying of wheat was on the theory that good grain was scarce and that the necessities of the millers would compel higher prices before the season was out. The millers themselves were believers in this theory.

About the only company the Chicago man had in his position for higher priced wheat was the group of big flour men in the Northwest.

The Armour effort for high wheat was continued through the Fall and into the Winter without any very exciting episodes. By December the price had been advanced to over 80 cents. The sentiment generally was intensely bearish. The foreigners seemed able to get along without much American wheat, and it was the popular view that, with prices abroad relatively lower than the American, there could be no higher market on this side. Through December and January it was a campaign of defence, with all efforts necessary to support prices against the selling inclination of the world. Toward the close of January the situation seemed to develop in a way that supported the Armour position of scarcity. May wheat price moved from the 80's up to 90.

By this time the speculation in May wheat had become large enough to attract attention everywhere. Europe talked about it. It was everywhere, however, referred to as a manipulation, and speculators as a body were hostile to it. The Armour holding was probably around 20,000,000 bushels. It was bought for May, with some hedging done for July. In January painstaking efforts were made by this interest to learn the true wheat situation. Men were sent to the Northwest to decide as to the Spring wheat supplies, and to the Southwest to decide as to the reserves of Winter wheat. The cables were used unsparingly and the European sources of information were exhausted to disclose the true wheat position abroad.

The situation had become a bullish one before the war between Russia and Japan began. On its declaration the wheat sentiment the world over seemed suddenly to change. Since then there has been no need of support for prices, but there has been advance upon advance, and the speculation has grown from moderate to vast proportions. The Armour interests has still remained the great one, and the Armour profit is the biggest one. But the market is no longer a one man affair. There have been the two incentives for higher prices. The theory of cash wheat scarcity, the motive for the Armour undertaking, has been demonstrated. With an extraordinary advance in prices, there has been dwindling rather than increasing wheat movement. The millers have been more anxious for the cash wheat at high prices than they were at low.

But this price help has been overshadowed by the more speculative one, the war. It stirred the whole world, and foreign markets have been advancing rapidly on it. The speculative market has been turned from a humdrum contest over prices into a tremendous competition among the grain interests of the world.

The Armour theory has been demonstrated, and there is probably a profit on the Armour operations of $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. The great May line held by this interest, probably 20,000,000 bushels, and which cost in the seventies, can now be sold out over $1. The profits have been secured by enormous sales of July against the May holding, sales at high prices of wheat bought 10 or 15 cents lower. It has been a most remarkable speculative effort, notable because on such a scale and because begun with the rest of the world in opposition, and finishing with the whole grain world in accord.

It now seems as if everybody was taking a hand in wheat at Chicago.

New Elevator at Fort William.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company have signed a contract with the McDonald Engineering Company, of Chicago, for the erection of an elevator at Fort William. The elevator will be constructed of steel, and will have a storage capacity of half a million. The contract calls for the completion of the work by September 1 next.

Mills for Minnedosa.

Minnedosa, Manitoba, is in hopes of securing a flour mill. A recent despatch says: W. H. Harvey, of Brandon, was here this week, looking over the ground with a view to building a flour and grist mill. He has made a proposition to the town council which will be considered at the next meeting of that body. It is also understood that an offer has been made by responsible parties to establish an oatmeal mill here, this point offering splendid facilities for a mill of that character, there being an abundance of wood for fuel, plenty of building stone, easily secured, and an abundance of sand and gravel, while the district round about produces oats of the very highest quality.

Wheat Fields Under the Flag.

Sir Gilbert Parker, M. P., speaking upon tariff reform in Brixton, London, urged that the wheat productions of the United States were decreasing and population increasing so fast that Britain imported American flour as well as wheat. He warned his hearers that in seven years' time, as the United States used up wheat stocks further and further, we should be paying more and more for our bread. We must redress the adverse balance of agriculture by increasing the wheat fields over which our flag was flying. He pleaded for a great colonial alliance, which should ensure our prosperity in the future.

The public are studying food values more than ever before. That is why they are asking for Tillson's pan-dried Oats, a food, not a fad. They know its nourishing qualities and its appetizing flavor. You should always be ready to supply it.

Pure Wheat for Seed.

MR. CLARKE, chief of the seed grain division of the department of Agriculture at Ottawa, in a recent interview with the representative of a Western paper, described the work his department was doing to keep up the standard of Western grown wheat. Mr. Clarke said: My division at present is taking an interest in the best methods of keeping up the standard of Western grown wheat. At the present time we find that there is very little pure red fyfe wheat in the West and the favorite milling wheat of the West is becoming mixed with a variety of wheat that are of poorer milling qualities. These varieties drop earlier than red fyfe and a larger amount of them is dropped on the ground and come up the next year as a volunteer crop and thus increase the impurity of the original seed. It is the intention of the division to form an association to be known as the Western Canadian Seed Growers' Association or something similar to encourage the raising of pure seed, to appoint a man who will give all his time to looking after this matter and to secure several men in each district where wheat is grown to devote their entire time to the raising of pure red fyfe wheat. The association will print and circulate catalogues telling just where this pure seed can be obtained, and in this and other ways do all possible to make the seed wheat of the West pure and keep it so.

Another matter to which my division is giving much attention is that of the prevention of weeds, and the eradication of those that have got in. A bill was introduced into the Dominion House last year and passed its second reading providing for the inspection of all commercial seeds. It was thought best not to pass the bill finally until the farmers had pronounced upon it as to whether they approved of the measure.

His Fourteenth Birthday.

J. C. McKeggie, for eight years chairman of the grain section of the Toronto Board of Trade, celebrated his fourteenth birthday on Monday. Members of the section who esteem Mr. McKeggie very highly gathered in the rotunda at noon and presented him with a handsome loving cup, bearing a few words of congratulations and appreciation of the long services of the chairman. Mr. McKeggie is over 50 years of age, but as he was a 29th of February baby his birthdays are four years apart. On Monday he received many expressions of good-will from members of the board outside the section over which he presides.

Wheat Stores in the West.

G. V. HASTINGS, manager of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., interrogated as to the real ground for the re-shipment last week of 50,000 to 75,000 bushels of wheat to the Keewatin mills from Fort William, said: The Lake of the Woods Milling Co. has plenty of good milling wheat at Keewatin. It has abundance of such wheat in store to the West. The re-shipping of wheat from Fort William to Keewatin is a temporary expedient to guard against stocks becoming too low from the closure of traffic to the West.

The mills are not out of wheat or near it, continued Mr. Hastings, but it is our custom to carry always large stocks, and the blockading of the railways has prevented proper replenishment. During February and part of January our average receipts daily from our stocks in store to the West have been two cars, a small fraction of our usual run, and with still plenty on hand at the mills we though it as well to replenish over the one line that was open. Our Western stocks are large, even the cellars being filled in some cases, and so it will eb seen that there is no hint of a shortage. We apprehend not the slightest trouble and the moment the Western lines are opened up, we will resume our movement over these lines, discontinuing that from Fort William.

Nottawa Mill Burned.

A despatch from Collingwood reports that the Nottawa flour and grist mill was burned to the ground Saturday night at 12 o'clock. It was owned by John Breckenridge and contained 5,000 bushels of wheat and was valued at $10,000.

Got Coal at Last.

The Ogilvie mills at Winnipeg, which, as announced in last week's Grocer, had to close down owing to lack of fuel, have again received a consignment of five cars of coal from the Roche Persee Mines via Brandon.

W. A. Black, the manager, states that the railway officials had done all in their power to help the company and the shortage of coal which closed down the mills for the past week was due to circumstances for which no one could be blamed.

Oatmeal Mill Purchased.

Orr Bros'. oatmeal mill at Windsor has been absorbed by the Canadian Oatmeal Manufacturing Co., completing, it is said, a list of 25 mills in Ontario alone. The Canadian Oatmeal Manufacturing Co. is said to control 90 per cent. of the output of oatmeal manufactured in the Dominion.

Purchased Wellesley Mill.

Messrs. McEachern & Debus of Tavistock, have purchased the Wellesley flour mill and took possession on March 1st, under the name of the Wellesley Milling Co., Limited. The mill was purchased from the Tavistock Milling Co. which company bought it some two years ago, installing new machinery and putting it in first-class condition. Mr. Debus was appointed manager of the new mill. Mr. McEachern has been head bookkeeper at the Tavistock mill for the last three years and has enjoyed the respect and friendship of all.

Ontario Barley Upheld.

Christopher Gaton, brewer, of Owne Sound, Ont., has circulated among the members of the London Corn Exchange a statement dealing with the remark attributed to Mr. Chaplin, M. P., to the effect that the soil of the colonies was unfitted for the growth of barley, and likely to remain so for years to come. Mr. Eaton claims that Ontario raises the finest barley in the world, and Ontario alone could supply Britain with sufficient requirements.

Cereal Notes.

The Co-operative Bakery, Winnipeg, had a rather serious fire last week. Lhe flames were extinguished, however, before great damage was done.

ENQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade received recently at the Canadian Government office in London, Eng.:

1. A colonial produce merchant in London, with good connections, is desirous of opening up business relations with some Canadian exporters of eggs, butter, cheese, bacon, etc., who are not already represented in England.

2. A provision merchant covering a fairly large district in the North of England, is open to take up agencies for canned fruits, etc., from Canada.

3. A gentleman with experience of the poultry trade is anxious to connect himself with one or more large Canadian exporters of fowls, and offers good references.

4. A French firm desires to get into touch with Canadian houses engaged in the sale of hosiery.

GOOD cigar travellers seem somewhat difficult to obtain, says the London Cigar and Tobacco World. There are, of course, heaps of good ones on the road. The real, right sort, most of them. But there are some wasters off it as any cigar manufacturer who has been in want of a creditable representative well knows. Really, any fool thinks he can sell cigars. Nice, easy kind of occupation. Plenty of smokes, and so forth.

It was some such innocent as this who applied to an importer of our acquaintance in response to an advertisement. He was so firmly convinced, to all appearance, that what he didn't know about selling cigars was not worth knowing, that the importer determined to give him a showing up.

"What does that mean?" said he, pointing to the word "Claro" on a cigar box. "Oh, er, that alludes to the quality, y'know." "And 'Madura?'" indicating another box. "Er—that refers to the quality, too, y'know." "How many cigars are there in that box?" the importer next ventured, handing the applicant a fifty. And the budding genius commenced to count the contents. "That'll do," sobbed the importer, "you're too good for the cigar trade. Your talents would be wasted on it. Please go away."

Cigarette Smoking in Japan.

THE increase in the consumption of tobacco in Japan is stated to have been very marked in the last ten years. Cigarettes are being smoked more from year to year, supplanting the old Japanese pipe, which formerly was practically the only way tobacco was consumed. The tobacco industry became a monopoly of the Japanese Government on August 15, 1899, since which time the cigarette exports have increased very noticeably. In 1898, 78,000,000 cigarettes were exported, mostly to Asiatic countries; in 1902 the number rose to 717,000,000. On November 1, 1901, the tobacco monopoly law was so modified as to permit cigarettes and cut tobacco being imported by private parties upon the payment of a 150 per cent. advalorem duty. Japan first came to be regarded as an important market for American tobacco in the year 1896, and since then the exports thereto have been increasing yearly. Cigarette machinery has not been introduced into Japan to the same extent as into other countries, but German manufacturers are now making successful efforts to introduce their machines.

To Keep Boys From Smoking.

An enterprising Nottingham tobacconist has opened a special competition for boys under the age of sixteen. He offers as a prize a phonograph and records to the lad who gives the most interesting answer to the question, "Why should boys not smoke?" The promoter of the competition states as his candid opinion that, "whilst tobacco is both harmless and beneficial to grown up people, it is positively injurious to growing boys;" and he adds: "I hope every manly lad who goes in for this competition will abstain from smoking until such time as it will not have a harmful effect on him."

Free Pipes.

The Quaker Oats people are becoming a thorn in the side of the English cigar dealer. They are giving pipes for box fronts of their goods. The bowls are selected French briar and each pipe is mounted with hall marked silver band and packed in rich leather buckskin lined case. Mouth-pieces are of best amber. Silverwear. Irish linen handkerchiefs, pure woollen hosiery, etc., are also given in the same manner.

London's Raw Leaf Trade.

THE English raw leaf tobacco trade are giving evidence of a determination to make a strong bid for at least a share of the trade in this city, says the London Free Press. Apparently they have just awakened to the fact that the Canadian trade in this line is something worth catering to. Within the past few days Mr. L. P. Leverson, representing a large English house, has been in the city, and expressed surprise at the extent of the trade here.

Some idea of the importance of the raw leaf trade with the cigar manufacturers of London may be gained from the fact that last year the quantity of raw leaf consumed was 592,791 pounds. The value of this ranged all the way from 16 cents to $1.50 per pound, and it is estimated that the sum paid out for leaf within the year was at least $200,000.

This trade has thus far been monopolized by the Americans. They have not been interferred with in any degree by the British houses, and have come to regard the business as strictly their own. In the event of the British houses making a bid for a share of the trade there is little doubt that the Americans would put up a stiff fight.

The men engaged in the raw leaf tobacco jobbing houses in the United States are very largely Jews. Among the travellers who regularly visit this city representing these houses are very few other than Jews. They form a jolly group of commercial men, and are always well received here. Whether the presence in the field of Englishmen will have a tendency in their favor it is hard to say. In all probability the question of which channel the trade shall flow in will be determined on the cold basis of dollars and cents.

The English dealers, however, are at a disadvantage with their American cousins in one important particular. The Americans are directly upon the ground. The great New York jobbing houses have ready access to the Canadian markets, and also to the growers' market. They understand the needs of the local manufacturer better than do the English. Mr. Leverson, in conversation with local manufacturers, found that what is demanded of his house in England is very different from what would be demanded here. The grades and treatment of tobacco differ very largely. And until the English learn these needs they cannot hope to compete. However, they do not propose to be baffled by any such difficulty, and it is likely that an agent will be appointed for Canada by one of the English houses as an experiment, who will deal exclusively with the London, Toronto and Montreal cigar manufacturers.

The position of the trade in London is very satisfactory so far as the securing of their supplies is concerned. They have but to sit in their office chairs and buy or leave alone as they choose. There is never the necessity of going to New York or elsewhere to look over possible purchases. It is estimated that upon an average a half-score of raw leaf travellers visit this city every month, and they invariably remain for several days.

Essex Tobacco Crop.

The year's crop of tobacco grown in Essex County has now all been delivered. It is estimated that fully 3,000,000 lbs. were grown in this section. The McAlpin Consumers Tobacco Co. will erect a warehouse at Harrow.

Fraud Charged.

IN the Toronto police court on Friday last, the Blumensteil Tobacco Co., of New York, through its representative, Mr. W. R. P. Parker, brough a charge of fraud against F. Edwards, cigar manufacturer of this city.

Lewis Jacobs, a traveller for the New York firm, said that his firm had sold quantities of tobacco to Mr. Edwards on the strength of his representations that he was solvent.

Mr. Parker contended that Mr. Edwards was insolvent at that time and the goods were bought only that he might borrow money on them. The goods had been ordered in January, and after that had been held in Dixon's storage warehouse until March, when they were pledged with Mr. Robert Carrie, warehouseman, Front street. The amount due by Mr. Edwards is $1,432.

The contention that Edwards represented his business as flourishing was met by letters written to the New York firm by Edwards, asking for renewals of his paper on account of slack business.

The case was adjourned a week, to allow Mr. Parker to secure further evidence as to the representations made by Mr. Edwards and the actual conditions of his business at the time.

Patent Process.

The Consumers' Tobacco Co., Leamington, have been engaged for the past two weeks installing a new patent process machine for curing tobacco, says the Post. It promises to do very much for the tobacco industry in that vicinity. It will have a capacity of ten thousand pounds of tobacco per day. The process for curing is said to only forty minutes.

Tobacco Notes.

A tobacco factory is to be started at North Sydney, N. S.

T. J. Horrocks is just putting on the market a new 10c. brand of cigars known as "Symbol." A particularly good line of tobacco is used and the package is unique.

WALL PAPER

PREPARATIONS FOR SPRING.

DURING the month of March the Spring housefurnishing usually commences. An early Spring sees March a busy month with the merchant, while a late Spring may delay the buying until April and May. At any rate all preparations must be made during this month, so that whenever the season opens there will be no delay in catching the first sales.

The stock room must be carefully and intelligently arranged so that the salesman can find in a moment just what he desires, any price and any pattern. The display fixtures must be attended to, to see that no mending or alterations are required. It is a good plan, too, to prepare the advertisements beforehand, as all will be a rush during the season and little time allowed for good ideas in the advertising. As soon as the stock or samples arrive, the clerks should carefully examine every pattern so that they can turn up any required shade or style of pattern without loss of time, and can show to the customer that the stock is thoroughly known.

In examining his display fixtures, attention should be directed to the very best methods obtainable. The window is the best advertisement and certain fixtures will be required. Very many use the simple stands, from which the unrolled portion of the roll depends, the roll itself being concealed behind. This is simplicity itself, and it may be said that the best methods of displaying wall paper are those which are simple. Wall paper must hang straight, just as it is seen on the walls; fancy displays are useless and inartistic.

If enough business is done to warrant a small expense, there is a structure that can be built for window display purposes, that can be excelled by nothing. It is in reality a section of a room showing the walls with its paper and freize in position, and above it the ceiling with the suitable paper.

Figure one shows a side view of the structure which is made of a framework covered tightly with cotton. On this is pasted a lining paper, and over it the papers to be shown. The ceiling slants off at an angle that gives the proper effect, and can be distinctly seen from the front. Figure two is a front view of the same fixture. If the window is large a couple of these might be built in. Of course they should be constructed so that they will do year after year. On the same plan foundations can be built for a display of panel work. This style of wall decorations is too little brought before the public, and such a scheme is almost necessary and will be sure to sell where a description would be inadequate.

A cheap fixture for demonstrating the use of two papers on a wall, one above and the other below a heavy moulding placed about five feet from the floor is to build two troughs in relatively the same positions as the ceiling moulding would be in the room. In the under trough are placed two or three rolls of the quieter patterns of the lower half of such a room, with the end hanging to the floor. In the upper trough there are the rolls of larger-patterned, brighter-colored paper of the upper half of the room, with the ends hanging down to the lower trough. These ends are all fixed tightly so that the combination is seen just as it would appear in the room.

These fixtures with the addition of others which the merchant may think of should be prepared in plenty of time for the housefurnishing season. After that he can consider the designs he will follow in his arrangements of the goods in the window. A simple change of paper without any alteration in design is sufficient to retain the attention of the public on the window, for some time.

THE COFFEE SITUATION.

IN their last weekly statistical report Willett & Gray say: The coffee market remains much unsettled owing to the continued heavy liquidations and the fact that the American visible supply of Brazilians and milds together is the largest on record, say 3,750,000 bags. The arrivals at consuming markets of coffees outside of Rio and Santos have been extremely large. The principal increase in these arrivales was in December and January and the total up to February 1st is 2,856,000 bags, compared with 1,782,000 bags the same period last year, and it must be noted that for the first three months of the season, July-August-September, the quantities were about the same as last year, the great increase having taken place since the market advanced. This probably means that coffees which were held back owing to low prices during the past two years in what are known as mild coffee countries have come forward, a fact not to be ignored.

It very much depends upon whether, during the balance of this crop the arrivals of mild coffees continue on such a large scale and whether the present large excess over last season will be kept up. It is possible of course, that some of these countries have shipped out their coffees in larger quantities than they can do later, but for the time being they weigh very heavily, and may to a large extent make up for the deficiency in the current Brazil crop.

SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating.

If you would catch fish, you must cast your line.

—and cast it where there are fish.

Good fishermen go where fish are plentiful—use the right kind of bait—and make many a good haul.

Shrewd advertisers use THE CANADIAN GROCER because plenty grocers of read it—they use the right kind of bait and make many a good haul of new customers.

Suppose the fish don't bite at fust,
What be yew goin' tur dew?
Chuck down yewr pole, throw out yewr bait,
An' say yewr fishin's threw?
Uv course yew haint; yew're goin' tur fish,
An' fish an' fish an' wait
Until yew've ketched yewr basket full,
An' used up all yewr bait.

Our Department of Advertising Service provides good bait—for those who desire it—without any extra charge.

If you would have more business cast your line to grocers in THE CANADIAN GROCER.

Dollar fish are biting.

Capital and Surplus, $1,500,000 Offices Throughout the Civilized World.

Executive Offices: Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway, New York City, U.S.A.

THE BRADSTREET COMPANY gathers information that reflects the financial condition and the controlling circumstances of every seeker of mercantile credit. Its business may be defined as of the merchants, by the merchants, for the merchants. In procuring, verifying and promulgating information no effort is spared, and no reasonable expense considered too great, that the results may justify its claim as an authority on all matters affecting commercial affairs and mercantile credit. Its offices and connections have been steadily extended, and it furnishes information concerning mercantile persons throughout the civilized world.

Subscriptions are based on the service furnished, and are available only by reputable wholesale, jobbing and manufacturing concerns; and by responsible and worthy financial, fiduciary and business corporations. Specific terms may be obtained by addressing the Company at any of its offices. Correspondence Invited.

Sterling Brand Pickles are just right

In price and quality and in flavor the Sterling Brand Pickles are very satisfactory. It is very handy to have some article in your store that you can always depend on. You can then recommend it to your most particular customers. These pickles are of a dependable quality. Put up in an attractive form they sell well.

Stretton's Table Relishes

To the Retail Grocery Trade—

Do you require a line of shelf goods that will give you a liberal profit to make up for low profits on other lines and losses in perishable goods. Then get a case of Stretton's Prize Medal Sauce in pints or half-pints.

It is used as a flavor for soups and steaks and to bring your customer again.

One enterprising grocer at least uses such an article to pay running expenses. The order clerks make a special push to get an order from each customer visited.

TO HELP THE SALE of the BEST FISH EVER SOLD

WE believe we are now supplying to the trade of this country the most toothsome fish products that consumers have ever tasted. We believe that, in every particular, they are calculated to attract and interest the people instantly and permanently. From the time the fish leaves the water until ready to be sold by the dealer, we leave nothing undone that would tend to obtain the very highest standard of quality. Cleanliness, carefulness, and thoroughness in every branch of the work at the factory is the standing order to employees in each department, and by this method we should secure a fish product fit for the Royal Table. Such, we believe, can truthfully be claimed for the fish product we are selling to-day.

So much for quality.

Now for our packages. What can we say about them?

You know what ought to be said if you have seen them. Never saw anything nicer in packages, have you? This is the opinion we hear from Halifax to Winnipeg, and farther west.

What else are we doing? We are advertising in the leading dailies and in other ways. Did you see what the Canadian Grocer said recently about our window cards? It was a graceful compliment to down east enterprise, and we liked it. Have you seen our "Daily Hints during Lent," in the "Montreal Daily Star?" These and other things we are doing to help the demand for "Halifax," "Acadia" and "Bluenose" Fish, and having done so much, may we ask you to do your share. Say a good word to consumers when you can. You will not regret it and we know they will not.

The fish habit is a good one for them, you and us.

MANUFACTURING GROCERS' SECTION ANNUAL MEETING

THE annual meeting of the Manufacturing Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association was held on Friday last, March 4th, in the rooms of the association, Board of Trade Building, Montreal.

The meeting opened at 10 o'clock a. m., with R. A. Donald, chairman, presiding. In the absence of W. A. Mitchell, Toronto, vice-chairman, S. W. Ewing officiated in that capacity. R. J. Young, secretary of the Manufacturers' Association, performed the duties of secretary owing to the absence of J. F. M. Stewart, regular scribe of the section. Among the members present were noted :

W. L. Hamm, of the Maritime Coffee & Spice Co., St. John, N. B.

Wm. H. Johnston, of R. Herron & Co., Montreal.

J. C. Rose, of Rose & Laflamme, Montreal.

W. P. Downey, Montreal.

Royal A. Ewing, of S. H. & A. S. Ewing, Montreal.

John Harper, of Kerry, Watson & Co., Montreal.

I. S. Wotherspoon, Montreal.

Andrew H. Ewing, of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal.

W. H. Halford, of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal.

A. Wills, Montreal.

J. Russell Murray, commissioner, West Indies, Montreal.

John Carsley, president Ozo Co., Montreal.

E. D. Marceau, Montreal.

W. H. D. Miller, representing transportation department of the Manufacturers' Association.

E. T. Cooper, secretary Montreal branch of the Manufacturing Grocers' Section, Montreal.

S. W. Ewing, of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal.

R. A. Donald, of the Pure Gold Mfg. Co., Limited, Toronto.

Letters of regret were received from W. A. Mitchell, of Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., Toronto; F. F. Dalley, of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton; T. J. Ward, of John P. Mott & Co., Halifax, N. S.; T. A. Lytle, of the T. A. Lytle Co., Toronto; R. Greig, of the Robert Greig Co., Toronto; J. J. MacLaren, of the Hamilton Coffee & Spice Co., Hamilton; A. Huckels, Ottawa; W. Gorman, of Gorman, Eckert & Co., London.

Mr. Donald, the chairman, expressed his pleasure in being again in the old city of Montreal. He always was delighted to come here, but particularly when he came to discuss with his business associates matters tending to improve the conditions of trade.

"We have had," he said, "considerable satisfaction with this section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association; we have had several meetings since its organization, and at every one of them there has been information of undoubted value imparted to those who thought enough of the meetings to sacrifice a little time to attend the same."

Mr. Donald then referred to the matters to be brought before the members, such as reports of committees concerning adulteration, application of "Foods Act" to imported goods, freights, discounts and tariff grievances.

The discussion of the reports of committees re adulteration, and the application of the "Foods Act" to imported goods, was an interesting one and the concensus of opinion was that stringent measures with adequate penalties be enacted to put a stop to the importation and selling of adulterated goods. A committee was subsequently appointed to lay the matter before the government. One feature which developed during the discussion was the fact that the act as it is constituted at present makes itself felt in the wrong direction; the exceedingly heavy penalty of $500 for selling adulterated goods falling upon the retailer instead of upon the manufacturer. The retailer is often the innocent victim in the sale, and the imposition of such a heavy penalty means his ruin. A reduction of this fine was desirable. In case of action by the government against a vendor of adulterated goods, the retailer would move heaven and earth to work the member of his constituency and other powerful political friends to save himself; but if the fine were made one which he could pay without crippling himself, the chances are he would pay it. He would, however, be on his guard in future, and insist upon getting pure goods.

W. H. D. Miller addressed the meeting on the "Responsibilities of the Carrying Companies and the Remedy for the Apparent Indifference on part of the Railways to the Shipper and Consignees." He also went into the matter of claims and payments of freights, and his remarks which were concisely and clearly expressed, were listened to with evident interest and satisfaction. Mr. Miller has a good grasp of transportation matters and expressed himself as ready at all times to lend his assistance to the Manufacturing Grocers' Section in straightening out any tangles or difficulties with the freight carriers.

Professor J. Wallace Walker, F. R. S. C., of McGill University, read an interesting paper on "The Scientific Preservation and Adulteration of Food," certain points of which struck the members as being extremely valuable. Professor Walker on concluding his address answered a number of questions asked by the members, such as : What is the action of certain preservatives on fruits and vegetables ? A cordial vote of thanks was extended to Prof. Walker, to which that gentleman replied, regretting that a pressure of academic duties, the shortness of time allowed him for preparing the paper, and the condition of his health, had prevented him from preparing a more interesting paper. (A report of the paper will be found subjoined).

An adjournment was made until 2.15 p. m., when the meeting was promptly opened. E. L. Prior, of New York, who had prepared an address on the subject of "Peppers," was unable to be present, and sent his article to A. Wills, who read it at the request of the chairman. Mr. Prior's views are worthy of the greatest attention and weight, as his extensive travels in tropical climes, and his thorough knowledge of spices, make him an authority on the subject, and his genial personality was very much missed. (A report of the address is unavoidably crowded out of this week's issue of Grocer, but will be published in full next week, verbatim.)

The election of officers was then gone on with, resulting as follows :

Chairman—S. W. Ewing, Montreal.
Vice-Chairman—Wm. Gorman, London.
Secretary—E. H. Cooper, Montreal.
Executive Committee :
R. A. Donald, Toronto.
W. A. Mitchell, Toronto.
J. J. MacLaren, Hamilton.
T. J. Ward, Halifax.
R. Ewing, Montreal.
W. H. Johnston, Montreal.
W. L. Hamm, St. John, N. B.

S. W. Ewing on taking the chair expressed his thanks for the honor of his appointment to the chairmanship of the section, and assured the members that his best efforts would be put forth in the interests of all. He had a hard man to follow in Mr. Donald, and trusted that whatever his executive and himself might accomplish would be considered by the members as having been done willingly and with best intent. Mr. Ewing then extended an invitation for a drive to the Park Slide on the mountain, and a number availed themselves of the opportunity to make the great chute. After the tobogganing, came a walk to the club house of the St. George's Snow Shoe Club, Westmount.

The Dinner.

The dinner tendered to the visiting and other members at the St. George's Club House, by S. W. Ewing, was a great success from every point of view, and it is safe to say that every participant enjoyed himself thoroughly. The members who sat down to the banquet were S. W. Ewing, chairman; R. A. Donald, W. H. D. Miller, R. J. Young, J. Carsley, Col. J. B. MacLean, J. C. Rose, W. H. Halford, A. H. Ewing, E. T. Cooper, Mr. Crean, A. W. Grant, Mr. Dougall, J. R. Murray, A. Wills, Mr. Slater, T. Davidson, A. Carmichael, and W. H. Seyler of The Canadian Grocer.

After full justice had been done to the good things provided, the health of the King was drunk and the chairman called for short speeches. These were of a high and suitable order, and as the evening progressed it became evident that as far as post-prandial speakers were concerned, the Manufacturing Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association could fairly well hold its own. As a chairman Mr. Ewing is a model, and he certainly deserved all the flattering remarks that were passed across the board.

At the conclusion of the banquet an adjournment was made to the cosy and commodious concert hall of the club, where cigars, tobacco and liquid refreshments were passed around. The concert arranged was most enjoyable; the cello solos of A. Wills, and rousing songs by W. H. Halford, R. A. Donald, R. Dionne and J. E. Monday, two local singers of high rank, being highly appreciated. Shortly after 12 o'clock the meeting broke up with three rousing cheers for the King and the genial chairman.

An excursion was planned to Quebec, where a banquet was tendered the visitors by the Quebec section, at the Chateau Frontenac.

Interviews.

Mr. W. L. Hamm, of the Maritime Coffee & Spice Co., St. John, N. B., was a visitor to Montreal last week attending the meeting of the Manufacturing Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Hamm stated in an interview with The Grocer that business down East has been quiet lately, the weather conditions being detrimental to activity in trade. Roads are very bad, railways blockaded and the wonder is that trade is not duller. Mr. Hamm has one complaint against Western manufacturers, which has, said he, been aired before in the columns of The Grocer, namely, "That some of the Western manufacturers have been prone to make the Maritime Provinces a sort of dumping ground for inferior goods. We try to put up pure goods, and I will not say that there are no manufacturers in our line down our way, but local complaints are few." Mr. Hamm intimated that the enforcing of the law as regards adulteration would have a beneficial effect in reducing the number of complaints. A good business year is anticipated in St. John and the provinces.

Interviewed by The Grocer as to business in the West, R. T. Donald, of Pure Gold Mfg. Co., Toronto, stated that the Toronto merchants were bothered considerably by the inclement weather, and that the wholesale trade as well as the manufacturer was bound to lose a good many dollars on account of inability of the transportation companies to move freight out or to bring any into the city. Most of the shipments that have been made are stalled at various points in the country. The volume of business must naturally be far below that of previous years. "It is a question in my mind whether any of the lost trade can ever be made up," said Mr. Donald. "On occasions of this kind it seems the people decide to do without what they might have bought and used."

Asked as to the development of trade in the Northwest, Mr. Donald unequivocally stated that Toronto has benefitted very much from it, and that shipments to that section have more than doubled in volume. "One good feature in connection with this Northwest trade, said Mr. Donald, "Is that as freights are practically as high on cheap quality goods as on high-grade, merchants are generally buying the best goods.

"As regards our company's goods, it is known to the trade that we have been striving for years to raise the standard of quality so that Canadian goods would be a credit to the industry. It is still a wonder to us that so much money goes out of the country for goods not a whit better than the home-made article. Of course, there are exceptions, but it is to the credit of the manufacturers as a whole that they are bringing up their products in this respect so as to leave nothing to be desired. It is a matter of extreme regret to those who desire to put up superior goods to find that it is almost impossible to get the profit that is made on inferior goods. One of the objects in coming down here was to get together and try to devise means looking toward the elimination of all undesirable make-shifts, particularly with spice substitutes, many of which are worthless, but owing to the lax administration of 'Adulteration of Food Products Act' have assumed too great volume. The great pity is that the purchasing public is absolutely fooled in the matter since the retail price is generally at the top notch, although it does not necessarily follow that the public get the goods cheaper."

Monthly Banquet of Canadian Manufacturers' Association.

THERE was a swing and an enthusiasm about the banquet of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, held at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, last Saturday night, which rendered the occasion a memorable one to all who had the pleasure of being present. The "Ancient Capital" has always been noted for the hospitality of her citizens and to say that the banquet was held in Quebec implies at once that the visitors from the West were accorded a royal reception. The speaking was of a high order of merit, and the assurances given the association by Honorables Fitzpatrick and Prefontaine of the sympathy of the Government with their aims were greeted with loud applause. F. D. Monk who delivered a most eloquent and effective speech, worthily represented the attitude of the Opposition towards the association and its fiscal aims.

A jolly party of manufacturers left the Place Viger station, Montreal, at 2 p. m., Saturday. They were the last arrivals, as many others from the West were found at the Chateau on their arrival.

The banquet was held in one of the spacious banqueting halls of the famous Chateau. It was gaily decorated with Union Jacks, but perhaps the feature of the decorations which caught the eyes of most was a picture of two hands clasped with the inscription, "The grip and pass-word of a true Canadian—'Made in Canada.'" "Made in Canada" was in truth the key note of the speeches of the evening.

The Menu.

The menu cards were handsomely designed, the cover being ornamented with a maple leaf and below it once again the words "Made in Canada." The menu was a sumptuous one as may be judged from what follows :

Russian Caviare on Toast

Oloroso

Consomme a la Doria

Fillet of Sole a la Marguery

Sauterne — Pommes Noisettes

Graves — Vol-an-Vent a la Monglas

Club Claret — Boiled Turkey, Cranberry Sauce

Oyster Plant Fritters

Brussel Sprout

Mashed Potatoes

Punch au Rum

Moet and Chandon

Haunch of Moose Venison

Sauce Grand Veneur

Fruit Jelly

Bombe Glacee au Chocolat

Petits Fours

Liqueurs — Dessert — Cafe Noir

When ample justice had been done to the array of good things just mentioned, Geo. E. Amyot, chairman of the Quebec branch, who presided, rose to make some announcements. He was greeted with a storm of applause which left no doubt of his popularity with his fellow manufacturers. He called on Secretary R. J. Younge to read some letters and telegrams. Mr. Younge announced the receipt of letters and telegrams of regret from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, R. L. Borden, Sir Charles Ross, Hon. J. C. McCorkill, Geo. E. Drummond, and W. K. George.

The King.

Mr. Amyot then rose to propose the toast of the King, and in doing so took occasion to address a few words of welcome to the visitors to Quebec. He was a man of few words (cries of hear! hear! and oh! oh!), but the inspiration of such a large gathering might move any man to eloquence. The government and parliament of the country, the civic authorities and the great industrial interests of the country were here represented. The visitors had come at a time of frigidity in which Quebec excelled as in all things else.

When the toast of the King had been duly honored, Mr. Amyot called on Secretary R. J. Younge, of Toronto, in the unavoidable absence of President Geo. E. Drummond owing to illness which was much regretted, to propose the toast of Canada and The Empire.

Mr. Younge on rising was greeted by the inspiring strains of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and for some minutes owing to the applause with which he was received could not proceed. He said he regretted very much the absence of Mr. Drummond, and it was with fear and trembling that at his urgent request he had taken up the duty of proposing this important toast. He wished in the first place to congratulate the Quebec members on the success of the banquet. In the whole history of the association no more successful banquet had ever been held. Special thanks were due to Mr. Amyot, who was recognized as a tower of strength in the association.

Canada and the Empire ! This was the greatest toast which could be given to any young Canadian. Where is the Canadian whose heart does not thrill with pride as he thinks of the boundless possibilities of Canada, of her mountains stored with mineral wealth, of her pariries capable of producing wheat for the Empire, of her cities and towns with their rapidly growing industries ? Surely no young Canadian can fail to feel what a glorious heritage is ours. But of what value are our resources unless we appreciate them ? We should not glory in jingoism, but we should have a consciousness of our greatness and our destiny. For every one of us, there is a duty to perform. We should know our country and confidently rely on our own brain and muscle which have no superior in the world. (Cheers). "A few years ago one manufacturer showing another through his works would have gloried in the fact that his materials were imported. To-day he points with pride to the fact that every ounce of his manufactured product was 'Made in Canada.'"

The name of Canada was found linked on the toast list with that of the Empire. How fitting that Canada and Great Britain should stand together. Hand in hand are linked young Canada with her infinite possibilities and wonderful future, and Great Britain with her historic associations and reputation for light and justice which have made her loved and respected. (Loud cheers).

It is our duty to contribute to the support of that Empire our just proportion. Let us hope for a greater unity as a result of the great fiscal fight now in progress.

He might be pardoned for speaking of the association which is such a great factor in the building up of Canada and the Empire. It is the largest organization of its kind in the world, and its influence is felt in every part of the world. It was once thought that it existed for the intimidation of the Minister of Finance, but its aims are now better understood. The association had justified its own existence. Its railroad and transportation committees, its department of commercial intelligence, its exhibition committee encouraging the display of Canadian goods in foreign fields, were all important. It furnishes, moreover, a uniting link which binds province to province, and fosters a national pride in all to which we can give the name Canadian.

The tariff is a side issue but it receives attention. The position of the Manufacturers' Association is well known. It is the national business standpoint. It is the policy which will keep our country for Canadians. (Cheers). The most regretful circumstance in all our past history is not the loss of our sons on the field of battle or the loss of territory in boundary awards —it is that a million and a half of Can-

St. John Takes First Place in Direct Importation of Tea From Ceylon and India.

CUSTOMS FIGURES YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1903:

Direct Imports of Black and Green Tea from Ceylon and India through the three chief ports:

ST. JOHN	-	3,377,165 lbs.
Toronto	-	2,762,850
Montreal	-	1,724,596

St. John is third and presses Toronto very close for second place in total imports.

Total imports of Tea into chief ports of Canada for same period:

Montreal	-	5 832,125 lbs.
Toronto	-	4,975,278
ST. JOHN	-	4,448,942
Hamilton	-	1,686,004

The toast was honored with "Rule Britannia."

Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick.

Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick, on rising to respond, was accorded a flattering reception. Few subjects, he said, had been more universally treated than "Canada and the Empire." He wished to echo what the chairman had said in praise of old Quebec. He had been born in this historic city inseparably connected with the romance and history of Canada. For many years the possession of Quebec City had carried with it the lordship of the North American Continent. "Within a stone's throw of the Chateau Frontenac lie the bones of the French and English soldiers who met on the Plains of Abraham, and in their graves lie buried forever all the old dissensions which separated the two peoples."

"But this is a gathering of business men," said Mr. Fitzpatrick. "What has sentiment to do with business?" The speaker ventured the assertion that after all the buzz of the machinery is not the sweetest music to the manufacturers' ear.

What should he say of the resources of the country. In the East, iron ore and coal lie side by side; in the West and Northwest, riches beyond the dreams of avarice requiring only the hand of labor to gather them. And in spite of the chairman's reference to a time of frigidity, we have the most favored climate in the world.

It is a commonplace in economics that commercial supremacy depends on the amount of mechanical force which a country possesses. England's coal and iron had been the basis of her supremacy won in earlier years. To-day coal is giving place to a greater power than even the writer of the Arabian Nights ever dreamt of. We in Canada can command boundless electrical power which is now becoming the controlling factor. Hundreds of rivers are now running idle to the sea and when once she has harnessed them Canada will enter the struggle for manufacturing supremacy backed by a power which will give her an immense advantage over the whole world.

The speaker quoted figures to show the growth of Canada's foreign trade. The showing was satisfactory. We have come to the front and we mean to stay there.

There are United States politicians who hope to keep us tied to their country commercially. But Quebec, Montreal and Toronto must not be allowed to become the distributing points for United States products; nor must Canada be allowed to become the dumping ground of American goods. (Loud cheers). The speaker disclaimed the ability to speak eloquently of free trade or protection. But his eyes are open to changing conditions and it is not right to say that the thing which has been must be. We must always adapt our policy to changing circumstances.

We must remember how much the manufacturers have invested in their industries. Canada is intended for the Canadians. He had no desire to raise a Chinese wall around Canada, but if a coping stone is needed to prevent dumping he, for his part, was in favor of adding it.

Reverting to the toast of Canada and the Empire, Mr. Fitzpatrick said it would be a crime to desire any change in the political relations in the Empire. "No change can take place by which we would benefit; no change can take place by which we would not lose."

He was glad of an opportunity of meeting so many Canadian manufacturers. The manufacturers are doing a public service of importance in giving the government advice. The government must learn from business men.

F. D. Monk.

Mr. Monk was accorded a reception which left no doubt of his popularity and which must have been very gratifying to him. He said it was always a pleasure to him to come to Quebec. He felt he would have failed in his duty if he had not come to this demonstration in honor of the most important business organization in Canada. It might seem strange that a gathering of practical business men should meet in this city of historic associations, but after all it was a fitting tribute to the importance of the industries of the "Ancient Capital." The toast was an important and patriotic one. The man who has not seen Canada can not properly appreciate the mission of the Manufacturers' Associations. We learn far too little of our own country from our early education. He had seen enough of the natural resources of the older provinces to know that we have a magnificent inheritance. We must keep that untold treasure for Canadians. And then when we see the great West beyond, acquired by men who saw farther into the future than their fellows, we can understand the patriotic duty of the manufacturer. He himself had seen the great West with the amazement of the child who first stands before the ocean. In area the West is an Empire in itself—the manufacturer and business man must play an important part in developing that Empire. Statesmen must recognize the justice of the manufacturers' claims.

"There is an impression abroad in some quarters that you are looking only for your own interests. But that must be corrected. Your aim is not a narrow one. You are intent on building up the country and you are entitled to the greatest consideration."

He knew that the country had prospered during the past few years, but when England is reconsidering her position does it not behoove us in the face of the hostility of other nations to look to ourselves? On the principle of "Canada for the Canadians" is it not our duty to shape our conduct and arrange our tariffs so that we shall not suffer from the rivalry of other nations intent on protecting themselves?

None of us want a Chinese wall, as the Minister of Justice has said. But if we are agreed on the principle at stake is it not the case that the best men to give the government information are the manufacturers? "Admitting the necessity of tariffs in the face of foreign hostility, I for one would be ready to support the creation of a commission which would communicate with your association and give effect to principles on which we are agreed giving our industries the protection which those of the United States receive."

In all our banquets now a place is found for the toast to Canada. With the name of Canada is coupled that of the Empire. There was no man born under the British flag who would not cordially drink the toast of the Empire. We talk of the vast extent of the Empire upon which the sun never sets, but whatever may be the fate of England it will be said of her that she has given birth to such dependencies as Canada and Australia, and has endowed them with that glorious freedom which is the birthright of every citizen of the Empire. No other nation could make such a boast.

There was no more interesting spectacle than the great discussion in England of the fiscal question and the relations of the different parts of the Empire. The speaker's mind and heart was an open one with respect to any new relations which might be the outcome of the present discussion. We are happy now and, thanks to the liberty which England has given us, we must be left free to examine those proposals whatever they may be. He entertained no doubt but that with the spirit of liberty which animates the Empire the examination of those proposals would result in the good of all concerned. (Long continued applause).

The City of Quebec.

Mr. Amyot then called upon C. C. Ballantyne, chairman of the Montreal branch, to propose the toast of the City of Quebec, coupling with it the names of Mayor Parent and W. A. Marsh.

C. C. Ballantyne.

Mr. Ballantyne said it was always a pleasure for him and other members of Montreal branch to visit Quebec. The city was quite familiar to him. He first visited it 12 years ago and he knew no city which had made the same progress. At that time there were no electric cars, there was no Chateau Frontenac, the streets were not paved. It is largely owing to the efforts of Mayor Parent that this city has made greater progress than any other in Canada. Mr. Parent was the best mayor in Canada. Also premier of the province, he has taken a wide interest in public affairs. His example was an inspiration to all business men for the speaker understood that he invariably starts work at 8 o'clock in the morning.

He would not refer to the past history of Quebec. That aspect had been dealt with by previous speakers. The city should be proud of her sons Fitzpatrick and Parent.

The Minister of Justice had said that Quebec was noted for her vegetables, but the speaker wanted to add that it is noted for the most charming ladies of Canada. ("Hear and Hear," and cries of dissent. "What about Toronto?" "What about Montreal?")

Mayor Parent.

When the toast had been duly honored Mayor Parent on rising received the ovation of the evening. "Napoleon," as his admirers fondly call him, is a favorite in Quebec.

He said that he appreciated very much the honor of responding to this toast. Mr. Ballantyne's remarks were especially gratifying because he came from Montreal. But he could not claim so large a personal share of the credit for the progress of the city; much was due to the loyal support of his colleagues in the council.

The interchange of ideas at such gatherings must facilitate business intercourse. In the Province of Quebec business men are willing and ready to profit from suggestions.

After welcoming the visitors to Quebec Mr. Parent told some interesting stories of business in Quebec in the 17th and 18th centuries, when the manufacturers were accorded a protection that was absolute prohibition of imports. Person found with an article of foreign manufacture was fined. Vessels carrying foreign goods to Quebec were confiscated. The merchants of Montreal were allowed to buy only from those of Quebec. He took it that the manufacturers of to-day were asking nothing unreasonable.

Mayor Parent was given another ovation at the conclusion of his speech.

W. A. Marsh.

Mr. Marsh said there were three reasons why he had little to say. The first was his innate modesty, the second was the fact that he is a manufacturer and not an orator, the third was that "there were others." "If you have enjoyed your visit to Quebec as I have enjoyed your company, that banquet has been a success. If the assurances of the politicians mean anything, we manufacturers can stop talking and go to work."

Canadian Industries and Commerce.

Mr. Amyot then called upon Hon. J. D. Rolland to propose the toast of "Canadian Industries and Commerce," coupling with it the names of Alderman Sadler, Montreal, and Hon. Raymond Prefontaine.

H. J. D. Rolland.

Hon. Mr. Rolland spoke briefly in French, the keynote of his address being "Canada for the Canadians." He referred to the motto on the wall—"The grip and password of a true Canadian, 'Made in Canada.'"

Alderman Sadler.

Alderman Sadler said he had enjoyed the banquet but would have enjoyed it more if he had not been requested to take the place of Col. Burnham. He would not go back 200 years, as Mayor Parent had done, but he would compare 1891 with 1904. In 1891 the manufacturers of Canada had invested between four and five hundred millions in the industries of this country, whereas now their investments are between eight and nine hundred millions. When such large amounts are at stake, the interests of the manufacturers demand careful attention. He agreed with Mr. Monk that a commission was desirable to arrange the tariff. Half of our imports are manufactured products and three-quarters of these goods come from the United States. A commission might find how much of those goods we can manufacture in Canada.

Hon. Raymond Prefontaine.

Mr. Prefontaine spoke briefly in French. He dwelt upon the necessity of building up and fostering Canadian industries and declared amid applause that the manufacturers are undertaking a patriotic duty. He spoke of the possibilities of the St. Lawrenre route and of the growing trade of Canadian ports. The exodus of young Canadians to the United States was being stopped. He declared himself unreservedly in favor of protection to Canadain industries.

The Chairman.

This was the last toast on the program, but before the applause had died away Robert Crean was on his feet to propose the health of Chairman Amyot. The growing membership in Quebec City was largely due to the efforts of Mr. Amyot.

He wished to impress upon the members of the Government that the Manufacturers' Association commenced a few years ago with a membership of 130, which has since grown to 1,500. During the last year, new members have been added at the rate of 25 to 50 per month. It was the aim of the association to make its membership so influential that it could approach the Government with confidence. "When you eat sausages, gentlemen, all that you want is confidence."

Louis Breithaupt.

Mr. Breithaupt said he had come 600 miles from Berlin to attend this banquet. It was always a pleasure to him to come to Quebec, a city noted for its hospitality. He had been interested in the speeches of the politicians who, as usual, "talked around the stump."

He spoke of the industries of Berlin, which sends out 100 travellers. From Limburger cheese to lager beer, everything was manufactured in Berlin.

"We are here representing both sides of politics. but we are agreed on a policy although we are not sure what to call it. I am not sure whether it is "adequate protection," or some other kind, but we want enough of it to keep Canada for the Canadians."

The speaker closed with a word for the ladies of the West, next to whom the ladies of Quebec are undoubtedly the best.

Mr. Amovt briefly thanked the manufacturers for coming to Quebec. He hoped that the annual meeting might soon be held in Quebec.

The gathering then dispersed to the tune of "God Save the King."

Notes.

"Napoleon" Parent was a favorite.

The "Leather Section" contributed much to the hilarity of the evening.

The absence through illness of President Geo. E. Drummond was much regretted.

"Pure Gold" stories, serious and humorous, kept the Montreal party entertained during the trip to Quebec on Saturday afternoon.

Secretary R. J. Younge, who was called upon at the last minute to propose the toast of "Canada and the Empire," in place of President Geo. E. Drummond, delivered a very eloquent address.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Provisions Imported by Britain January, 1904.

THE British Board of Trade returns for January just available afford some interesting information for the provision trade. It seems that the only articles of provisions in which the imports for January, 1904, exceeded those for the corresponding month in 1903 were fresh beef, (preserved meat), cured or salted fish and butter.

Fresh Beef—The value of importations of fresh beef to the United Kingdom for the month of January, 1904, total £651,091, an increase of £16,609 over those for the corresponding month in 1903. Of this total £488,069 represents the value of the fresh beef imported from the United States, and £134,501 that of the same commodity from Argentina, the latter being slightly less than last year's importation. The total importations of preserved meat during January, 1904, are valued at £241,579, as against £194,088 for the same month last year, the increase in beef alone being £64,984.

Fish—There is also a large increase in the value of cured or salted fish importations; £227,081 represents the total importations for January, 1904 an increase of £106,651 over those for January, 1903.

Butter—Is noticeably on the up grade. The United Kingdom imported during January, 1904, butter to the value of £1,939,168, as against £1,850,313 worth in January, 1903. Denmark easily heads the list with £758,347; although the imports from the premier butter-producing country in the world are away behind those of last year. The value of Canada's contribution for January, 1904, is modest, being only £13,767, yet it shows an increase of £1,441 over her butter exports to the United Kingdom for January, 1903. It is also significant that importations from foreign countries have generally declined, including those from the United States, while the quantity of butter imported from the colonies and dependencies of the British Empire has increased prodigiously. For instance; importations from Victoria this January are valued at £266,509 as against £8,313 for the same month last year. In 1903 New South Wales did not send any butter to the Moutherland; this January she sends to the value of £130,-407. There is likewise an increase in importations from New Zealand.

There are several interesting features where imports for January, 1904 are behind those of 1903. In cheese there has been a falling off representing £81,-623, principally noticeable in importations from the United States, although there have been marked increases in the value of cheese imports from the colonies of Great Britain. In eggs there has been a slight decrease. Importations for January, 1904 are valued at £441,846 as against £446,623 for January, 1903.

Visible Stocks of Lard.

THE N. K. Fairbank Co., Chicago Ill., under date of March 1st, wrote The Canadian Grocer as follows: Our cable advices give the following estimates of the stocks of lard held in Europe and afloat, on the 1st inst., to which we add estimates of former years, and stocks in cities named:

Victuallers Complain Against Grocers.

AT the monthly meeting of the Montreal Licensed Victuallers' Association, in Monument Nationale, Montreal, on March 2, the secretary, Alderman L. A. Lapointe, reported that under the instructions of the Federation of Wine and Spirit Merchants of the Province of Quebec, and the Licensed Victuallers' Association of Montreal, he had written to the provincial treasurer asking whether the Government intended to amend the license act during the coming session, and if so to allow the Federation the privilege of submitting certain recommendations.

Complaints have been made that grocers having liquor licenses have been violating the law by selling drinks over the counter after the style of restaurants. Mr. Lapointe suggested as a remedial measure that grocers' licenses be limited to 400, cutting out some thirty offenders known to the association. He also hoped the Association of Grocers would take the matter in hand as it was manifestly unfair that hotel and restaurant keepers were obliged to promise not to transgress the license laws, while certain grocers openly defied the laws with impunity.

The potato crop of Russia for 1903 is estimated at 931,009,626 bushels, against 1,041,098,242 bushels in 1902.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The provision trade is beginning to improve as a result of the milder weather. Supplies of hogs are coming more freely than last week because of the improvement in transportation facilities. There is a fair demand for cured meats, in which trade at this season of the year is never more than average. Lard holds firm at recent advanced prices. Dressed hogs have advanced 25c. per hundredweight and plate beef is 50c. firmer. Long clear bacon has advanced 1-4c. Short cut pork is 50c. firmer. Heavy mess pork and shoulder mess pork show a wider range of prices than last week although provision dealers are not unanimous on this point, the general tendency is for pork to become firmer. Beef, mutton, lamb and veal are quiet, with last week's prices unchanged. Our quotations are as follows:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13

Butter—The quantity of butter coming forward this week has decreased considerably. The quality of creamery received recently has not been up to the mark; much coming to hand has a "turnipy" flavor. Receipts of dairy butter are also light. Creamery butter is 1c. firmer in price all around. Diversity of opinion prevails regarding the price of dairy prints one firm says there has been an advance, another, that the price quoted below rules, and that there is a plentiful supply on the market with prospects of further receipts shortly. We quote as follows:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22

Cheese—The cheese market continues featureless. There is no particular local demand and the English market seems to be at a standstill. Our quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 10¼	0 10½
" twins	0 11	0 11½

MONTREAL.

Provisions—The market has ruled steady during the week, and no quotable changes are reported. The demand for smoked meats has been fair, considering the season. Lard is quiet and unchanged. Some reduced prices are said to have been quoted on round lots of Canada short cut pork. The market for dressed hogs has not been active. Prices remained at $7.25 to $7.50 for fresh killed abattoir stock, and $6.75 to $7.25 for light country killed. We quote:

Butter—The change in the weather did not affect the local butter trade to any appreciable extent. There has been a fair demand locally since the beginning of Lent, and a better feeling is reported in England. Not much, however, is expected from that at this late date. Summer goods are quoted lower this week, and it is not thought that more than 19c. could be obtained. There is, however, not a great deal on the market now. Dairy rolls are this week quoted at the same price as dairy tubs. We quote:

Fancy Winter creamery	0 20	0 21
Summer goods	0 18	0 19
Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16
Finest Fall made	....	0 21
" fresh prints	0 21	0 22

Cheese—A slightly lower quotation is given this week, though dealers strongly deny that this is any indication of weakness in the market. There is nothing of any consequence doing, at the new price, which is 10 to 10 1-4 for September or October make. Some dealers, however, are apparently a little easier in their views. But as far as the statistical condition of stock here and in the Old Country is concerned, the position of Canadian holders of cheese is a good one, and there seems to be no reason why they should not stick to their prices. In view of the usual consumption of cheese in the Old Country, and the Board of Trade reports as to the amount of goods held there, it seems almost a certainty that they will be forced to buy before the new goods can be marketed. A good many cables are passing between the two countries, but it results in very little business. Some cheese is going forward, but it is likely stock that was held here for English account. Our estimates last week of the stock held here, proved to be about right, there being slightly over 100,000.

St. John.

Provisions—In barrelled pork and beef the market is firm though prices show but slight advance. Considerable quantities of domestic packed pork is offered. In pure lard a large stock is held. While prices seem higher Chi-

Provision Notes.

The regular show of the Eastern Ontario Live Stock and Poultry Associations announced for March 7-11 at Ottawa is in progress as The Grocer goes to press.

The annual meeting of the Kemptville Cheese Board was held March 2, when the secretary reported 33,958 boxes of cheese boarded 7,000 of which were white and that operations for the last season had been satisfactory to buyers and all parties concerned. The old officers were all re-elected.

The annual exhibition of the Quebec Poultry Association at the Drill Hall, Grande Allee, Quebec, was formally opened on March 1 by Hon. A. Turgeon, Provincial Minister of Agriculture. The consensus of opinion is that this year's exhibition is the most successful ever seen in Quebec.

ELECTRIC VEST POCKET LIGHT.

THE American Electrical Novelty & Mfg. Co., 232 McGill street, Montreal, are offering the Ever Ready vest pocket light here illustrated. It is especially serviceable for merchants, clerks in entering warehouses, cellars, as well as for tourists or travellers, as it can be placed under the pillow for instant use. It is very compact, weighing but 7 ounces and measuring, over all, 3 3-8x2 5-8x15-16 inches. The body is black with ends of nickel plated brass. In one end is an electric light bulb with reflector and bull's eye lens the light being supplied by two cylindrical dry batteries, the necessary circuit being closed by pressing the push button as shown. This device gives a generous light, the batteries being renewable at nominal cost, and easily obtained from any of a large number of depots handling their goods, of which there is a large line of the same general character.

Mrs. Dooley's Laundry Soap

—the soap that contains borax, is being sold now from ocean to ocean, a remarkable achievment for a soap that has not been offered to the trade until only about six weeks ago. And the secret of its expanding trade lies in the merit of the soap itself.

Fresh and Cured Fish

Herring-Curing in Canada.

THE following extract from the Fish Trades Gazette, on "Herring-curing in Canada," cannot fail to interest all concerned in the fisheries of the Dominion:

"Our Canadian friends in the herring trade are getting stirred up a bit, in order that they may attend better to their own interests. The Dominion Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Mr. Prefontaine, has the opinion that Canadian herring do not command the price and favor they would, were more attention paid to the curing and packing by those interested in this important part of the business. He proposes to bring over to Canada Scotch fishermen and others practical in the catching and curing of herring to instruct the local fisherfolks in the best way of preparing the fish for market.

"The initial operations to be commenced within two or three months at Canso, and possibly other points on the Atlantic Coast, will be watched with anxious interest, and as the practical part of the work is to be in the hands of a most competent and energetic herring curer from Scotland, the object lessons which these first experiments will provide must have a widespread effect.

"There is abundant evidence that the fishing population has awakened to the importance of this scheme. They realize that the herring fisheries of the Dominion have yielded them not more than a fraction of the wealth that will come into their hands by the adoption of improved methods of handling and curing their catch."

Fishing on the Decline in Nova Scotia.

"Last season marks the beginning of the decline of the banking industry of Lunenburg," says a prominent Nova Scotian. He bases his remarks on the fact that last season's partial, in fact almost total, failure of the fisheries, has discouraged the fishermen. The outlook for the coming season is very poor. A large number of the fishermen have left for Gloucester and other American fishing ports and many others are planning to go. At the present time it is almost impossible to secure men to man the vessels this season, and it is very likely that a number of boats will have to lay at their wharves all Summer on that account. Since the fleet arrived home a number of vessels have been sold and several others have been cast away. No new ones are being built; at the same time last year there were over twenty under construction.

This looks bad for the fishing industry of Lunenburg for 1904. But it must be admitted that if the coming season turns out to be a good one, the tables will be reversed another year.

Fish Notes.

On account of the depressed condition of the salmon market many canneries in Alaska will not be operated this year. The cause for unfavorable market conditions is primarily over-production.

A new fish firm to be known as the J. Sutton Clark Co., is seeking incorporation in New Brunswick. It will take over the sardine canning business at L'Etang, Charlotte County, and New Edinburg, Digby County, now carried on by J. S. Clark.

The Dominion Government will shortly consider New Brunswick's claim to the ownership of the sea coast fisheries and tidal waters, and to a share of the Halifax fishery award. New Brunswick wants to have a test case referred to the supreme court in order to determine her rights.

A conference of fishery representatives of the different states bordering on the great lakes and Ontario, was called for March 8, at Detroit. The object of the conference was to agree upon a uniform set of fishing regulations for use in both Canadian and American waters.

It is reported that the Dominion Government has finally agreed to allow the erection of fish traps near Victoria, B. C. Canners on the Fraser River, until recently bitterly opposed to the innovation, see now that it is the only effective way of check-mating the destructive work done by American traps at Point Robert.

At the Salmon Fisheries Congress recently held in Seattle, one of the items of particular interest was a discussion of the proposed hatchery to be located on the Fraser River. American canners are desirous of arriving at some "modus vivendi" for a joint American and Canadian hatchery on the Fraser.

The Pickle Question is an important one to every grocer and general merchant. It is to you. Consequently, when you are credibly informed that last year we sold to the trade of Canada over 25,000 cases of it must strike you that these pickles must have merit in a high degree to secure such an enormous sale against the many domestic and foreign brands on the market.

Let us tell you these facts:

ROWAT'S Pickles are sellers, they are not "shopkeepers." They are sold all the time, not asked for now and again by your customers, but once sold always bought. Isn't that an argument for you to handle them? Think it over, and when ordering Pickles again ask for Rowat's.

NOTICE: On account of our having been notified by Messrs. Lea & Perrins, of Worcestershire, England, that our label was a colorable imitation of their label, and therefore an infringement of their patent, we have decided rather than enter upon a law suit to change the style of our label and wrapper. We herewith publicly disavow any intention or desire to injure our esteemed competitors, Messrs. Lea & Perrins, and regret that we have seemed to transgress their rights.

OUR NEW LABEL.

The trade who have handled our Sauce are well aware of its superior merit. It is made from the old East India recipe of Dr. Samuel Langley, Malvern, Worcestershire. Labels have their value, but our Sauce does not depend upon labels for its sale when once known. Our new label---a more attractive one in our opinion than the old---indicates no change whatsoever in the contents of our package.

We cordially thank the trade for their kind patronage and generous recommendation of our Sauce, and confidently hope for a continuance of favor from both the trade and the public.

Salt—Reduced Prices

Having completed alterations and improvements we are now in a position to fill all orders. Our plant, as reconstructed, is the most modern in existence, and has the largest capacity in the British Empire for the production of high-grade Salt.

The improvements made having enabled us to effect a considerable saving in the cost of manufacture, we have issued new Price Lists, showing very large reductions.

As it is almost impossible to secure cooperage stock we suggest that our customers order ordinary fine Salt in sacks. Write for new Price List.

TOURIST TRADE.

SIGNS are not wanting that the Summer of 1904 will see an unprecedented rush of tourists and Summer visitors to Canada, and the wise merchant will spend some of the leisure time which the snow blockade has given him in planning ways and means whereby this profitable tourist trade may be secured. Canada is now "looming large" before the British public and the number of English visitors to Canada is bound to be largely increased. The newspapers have remarked on the large number of English tourists who have braved the rigors of an exceptionally severe Winter and have enjoyed themselves. When such large numbers have come in Winter how many may we not expect during the Summer months?

But perhaps the greatest increase may be expected from the United States where the wealthy classes in their search of Summer enjoyment are becoming more and more interested in Canada. That the great railways realize the possibilities of this trade is evidenced by the increasing attention which they are devoting to the task of attracting tourists. L. O. Armstrong, colonization agent for the C.P.R., attended the Sportsman's show held recently in New York and he has returned to Canada more than ever impressed with the possibilities of this class of trade. He found the wealthy classes taking more interest in the show than ever before and inspired with an ever increasing love of a life such as is offered in and about Canadian woods, streams and lakes. He found that many of the wealthiest people in the United States are arranging for a Summer's outing in Canada, some at the regular Summer resorts and some in British Columbia, the Northwest, and the northern portions of Ontario and Quebec. The lake regions of Southern Quebec and the natural beauties of the Maritime Provinces also claimed their admirers.

The delights of Canadian Summer resorts and the pleasures of a Summer in the Canadian lake regions were placed before the visitors at the Sportsman's Show by the representatives of the Canadian railroads and the result is bound to be a larger influx than ever of American visitors.

The C.P.R. had a very large exhibit at the show and its corps of ten guides, some from British Columbia, some from the northern posts of the Hudson Bay Company, and others from the northern sections of Ontario and Quebec were kept busy arranging details with parties for next Summer. In previous years, the railways have had difficulty in finding a sufficient number of trained guides, and the C.P.R. is now contemplating the establishment of a school for the instruction of guides. This shows that one railway at all events is thoroughly in earnest.

Now what does all this mean to the merchant in Canada? It means that many Canadian towns are to see a great influx of visitors this Summer the majority of whom have money to spend and are willing to spend it. In a town where tourists may be expected, the merchant should make a special effort to cater to this class of trade. If possible, souvenirs of local interest should be collected for this trade. The merchant could gather many ideas by a visit to city shops where such goods are sold. But trade need not be confined to souvenirs. There are many staple articles which will be required during a Summer's visit and this class want the best. The merchant whose town is favored by the Summer visitor should prepare to supply this trade.

THE RECIPROCITY QUESTION.

IT is not sound economically to contend that reciprocity in its proper sense with the United States would not be a good thing commercially.

Reciprocity with the United States is not a defunct issue because it is an undesirable international business arrangement. It is because the people of Canada are as fully persuaded as they are of their existence that reciprocity, as the compilers of dictionaries, economists and business men understand the term, is not so understood in the United States. And yet we were told 13 years ago by a writer in the North American Review that the word was first officially used in 1782 in the provisional treaty of peace between Great Britain and the United States.

"Mutual equality of rights and benefits" is the definition of reciprocity according to one of their own lexicographers. But the interpretation they put upon it is the very opposite of the root meaning of the word. No arrangement which does not allow at least 90 per cent. of the advantage to accrue to them is acceptable.

Our tariff is about 50 per cent. lower than that of the United States and as they already sell us about $66,000,000 worth more of merchandise than they buy from us they should, as an evidence of their good intentions, approximate their tariff to ours. Both countries would be then on an equal footing and perhaps nearer than they now are to the starting point for an equitable reciprocal arrangement.

In the meantime the National Board of Trade, manufacturers' associations and other commercial bodies in the United States may pass many resolutions and scatter broadcast much printed matter. It may help them to appreciate Canada and perhaps incidentally to learn what reciprocity really means. But until they bring forth fruits meet for repentence there is not even a possibility of reciprocity with Canada being obtained.

GROCERS' PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

AMONG the interesting news items for the week is that of the formation of a Protective Association by the Grocers of Gananoque, Ont. In their anxiety to profit from the experience of older associations of a similar character they would be glad to receive through their spokesmen, Shields Brothers, general literature bearing on the subject of grocers' associations, and in particular, copies of constitutions of such associations.

The Grocer would also be glad to receive copies of constitutions of grocers' organizations for its bureau of information, where they will be placed on file for future reference, the same to be always available for the use of the friends and patrons of The Grocer.

THE REMEDY FOR CORRRUPTION.

IT is clear that Canada must look beyond the two great party organizations for a remedy for the corruption which is so frequently disclosed in voting contests, municipal, provincial and Federal. The organizations of the two parties are two skilfully devised machines whose first and final duty is to win. To leave to them the guardianship of the morality of our voting system would be an anomaly.

It is said that the balance of political power rests with the man who does not attach himself to either party. Granting this, it is at once apparent that the business men of Canada or of any section of the Dominion could readily, by united decision to hold out for any reasonable and just end, so influence the electorate as to make imperative their demands.

A few years ago municipal politics in Montreal had reached such a level that business men under the leadership of Mr. Ames, now a candidate for parliamentary honors, instituted a reform movement, the cumulative force of which resulted this year in the election of Mayor Laporte by an extraordinary majority.

A few weeks ago the business men of Regina organized to invigorate the Town Council, which had got into a rut and was hindering the progress of that town by its lassitude. The results of the organization have been remarkable. The town has been improved in appearance, in its status as a distributing centre, and in its reputation for progressiveness and enterprise—a valuable asset to a town as well as to a business concern.

A grave responsibility rests upon the business men in these matters. They understand the trouble and they have the remedy in their own hands. Have they the moral courage to ignore party exigencies and look first to the welfare of the country? 'Twill be their own loss if they do not.

NOT THE MAN FOR THE PLACE.

London, March 2.—The Daily Chronicle, referring to the rumor that Sir Richard Cartwright is to succeed Lord Strathcona, says that the former is a slashing debater, a man of culture and a friend of the late W. E. H. Lecky.

THE above press despatch refers to a rumor which has from time to time gained considerable credence on this side of the Atlantic. It is to be sincerely hoped that "there's nothing in it."

Sir Richard Cartwright is one of the foremost public men of Canada, one of the most effective debaters in the Canadian House of Commons; his career has been as honorable as it has been long. He has, in fact, fairly earned the title of "Nestor of the Canadian Parliament."

Yet he is not the man to succeed Lord Strathcona in London. The office of Canadian High Commissioner is one that calls for strenuous and virile business enterprise and progressiveness in addition to its social and diplomatic obligations.

Lord Strathcona has been a business man in the truest sense and his presence in London has done much to establish better business relations between the two countries. But even with Lord Strathcona in authority not enough attention has been paid to the needs of the industrial and commercial interests. So strong has been the agitation for improvement in this regard that Parliament voted $25,000 toward the establishment of a commercial agency in London.

The responsibility for the expenditure of this money rests with Sir Richard Cartwright as Minister of Trade and Commerce. What has he done? What steps have been taken toward the establishment of this agency, which is so seriously needed and so insistently demanded by the business interests of Canada? We are still waiting to hear of the first step in the right direction, the first move in this matter. And from present indications we are likely to continue waiting—for how long none can say!

It is not surprising in view of Sir Richard's seemingly contemptuous indifference to this matter, to his inaction where prompt and progressive action was looked for, that Canadian business men should look upon his appointment to the office of Canadian High Commissioner in London with serious misgivings; more, even with anger.

If Sir Richard Cartwright is sent to London as Canada's representative the social and diplomatic duties may safely be entrusted to him, but another man of proven ability must be sent to take care of Canada's business interests. Such men are to be found in the Dominion Parliament if that be deemed advantageous. Out of the House there are many men of the right type.

In the meantime it is to be hoped that influence may be brought to bear upon Sir Richard to induce him to establish the commercial agency in London for which the necessary money has been set aside.

BANQUET NOTES.

Manufacturing Grocers' Section of Canadian Manufacturers Association, Montreal, March 4, 1904.

THE mild suburban air of Westmount was laden with the refrain in duet of "Where is my Sammy, my Sammy ?" and Messrs. Donald and Carsley's voices blended harmoniously.

As an accompanist Mr. Halford certainly is a revelation, he having that proper feeling of shading so lacking in the ordinary amateur and average professional musician.

A perceptible shiver passed through the cross-barred banner of St. George adorning the walls of the concert hall when R. T. Donald rendered that Scotch song—with omissions— —.

As a cellist Alexander Wills was a decided success, and his solos were highly appreciated. Westmount is to be highly congratulated on possessing within her borders such a finished player.

There will be a mystery unexplained unless Messrs. Halford and Ewing inform the public as to "What became of that dog ?" It's about as puzzling as to tell "Who struck Billy Patterson ?"

Sam'l W. Ewing, the host of the evening and new chairman of the Manufacturing Grocers' Section, was most attentive to his guests, and the recipient of many flattering remarks. Certainly he left nothing to be desired.

* * *

W. H. D. Miller, of the Transportation Department of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, is a most effective after dinner speaker, and Mr. Younge's running comments are decidedly interesting.

Spice and "P.D."

E. H. Cooper, Montreal, secretary of the section, received congratulations on his improved health. The trip to the West Indies has done him a world of good.

* * *

E. T. Cooper's West Indian experiences were highly appreciated and his recital brought out the importance of better trade relations between the Islands and Canada in a degree calculated to make those present think.

STORAGE FACILITIES IN WINNIPEG.

BY referring to their advertisement on page 42 of this issue, it will be noticed that Dingle & Stewart, Winnipeg, Man., are making a specialty of storage and distribution of merchandise. Last Fall they moved into a new warehouse in order to provide accommodation for this branch of their business. At the rear of their warehouse is a double track railroad and their premises are in every way convenient for the conducting of general storage and commission business. Mr. Guy V. Dingle one of the members of the firm, has been in Toronto and other points in Canada during the last couple of weeks in the interest of his firm. In conversation with The Grocer he said there was every indication that business this year would be good in the West. Building operations in Winnipeg promise to be fully as extensive as those of last year. Mr. Dingle leaves for the West the latter part of this week.

EXTRACTS FROM EXTRACT PEOPLE.

The Greig Manufacturing Co. has been taken over by R. Herron & Co., of Montreal, who in conjunction with their own extensive plant, will continue to push the "Crown" brand extracts, which have been on the Canadian market for the last 20 years, and have always enjoyed a reputation of being at the top of the ladder as regards high quality and purity among the many brands of extracts before the public.

Herron & Co.'s reputation for high-grade goods in the other lines they manufacture, such as Red Cross Jelly Powder, and a fine line of coffees, spices, etc., will be followed out in the Crown brand extracts, and the trade can rest assured that the quality will be the same as that which has made them popular from ocean to ocean.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. R. Oaten, formerly in the grocery business in Hamilton, died on March 6.

Mr. J. McNally, manager of the Montreal Fruit Auction Co., died on March 5.

Mr. G. Newton, of the British Columbia Sugar Refining Co., is ill at the hospital in Brandon.

Mr. D. W. Douglas, representing E. W. Gillett & Co., Toronto, is doing Ottawa City, the Gatineau Valley and Pontiac Districts.

Mr. Hamill, the newly appointed Canadian manager for the N. K. Fairbank Co., was in St. John this week. The sale for Gold Dust Washing Powder has been very large this season.

Mr. John H. Magor, of Frank Magor & Co., Montreal, is on a business trip to Toronto, Hamilton and London, in the interests of his well-known English houses, Keen's, Colman's, Cadbury's, &c.

Mr. E. Nicholson, wholesale commission merchant and broker, Winnipeg, has opened up a branch of his business in Calgary, N. W. T., under the style and name of Nicholson, Bain & Johnston.

Mr. Martin Niermeyer, export manager for G. F. Sutton, Sons & Co., wholesale French and Italian warehousemen and manufacturing chemists, London, Eng., is in Toronto this week calling upon the wholesale and retail trades.

Mr. C. W. Gregory, representative of Snowdon, Forbes & Co., was a caller at the Montreal offices of The Grocer this week. Mr. Gregory has no complaints of trade. "'Bee' brand goods are sellers," he says.

Mr. John Dickie, of John Dickie & Co., general merchants, Pickering, in an interview with The Grocer this week stated that his business had been surprisingly good during the past two months in spite of adverse weather conditions.

Mr. James Marshall, representing Park-Blackwell Co., Toronto, in Montreal and Eastern Townships, reports having has good business despite the extremely hard weather and bad roads. "P. B. brands bacon and hams are in the front rank," said Mr. Marshall, "and we are proud of them."

Mr. P. G. Shallcross, of Shallcross, Macauley & Co., Vancouver, was a visitor to Montreal this week. Mr. Shallcross, while in the city, interviewed a few of the leading manufacturers and arranged for representation in British Columbia, the Northwest and Yukon Territories.

Mr. A. Stuart Ewing, of S. H. & A. S. Ewing, Montreal, is now on a business trip through Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. Reports submitted say business is fair and prospects for Spring and Summer trade good. Mr. Ewing does not intend going further on this trip than Edmonton.

Mr. Paul Gumlich of the Montreal Import Co., has recently returned from a two months' trip to England, Germany, etc., in the interests of his business. Mr. Gumlich has purchased many new and interesting lines, particularly in picture postal cards.

Mr. C. Gyde, Montreal, is on a business trip to Toronto, Hamilton, London and as far as Windsor. Mr. Gyde is meeting with great success in the introduction of Macintosh Toffees, a line lately placed on the Canadian market, and one most suitable for the grocery trade.

Mr. Miles S. Chapman, for the past 7 years head clerk with John Dickie Co., general merchants, Pickering, Ont., has bought out the hardware business of W. J. Reazin. Mr. Chapman will add a stock of tin and granite ware, and a stock of stoves later on. The prospects for Mr. Chapman are bright. He takes with him in his new business the good will of a large circle of buyers; he has youth, fitness, and energy on his side; and the territory he will serve is both large and prosperous. His place in Dickie & Co.'s will be taken by Mr. S. Gormley, whose home is Pickering, but whose acquaintance extends all over Western Canada.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, March 10, 1904.

Groceries.

TRADE generally is reported to be improving, but retail merchants have been slow in responding to the strong position of the market prevailing, on account of the recent snow blockade and stoppage in freight. With transportation facilities improving steadily an active market in all lines is anticipated. In the interval, wholesalers and retailers have been equally handicapped; the former not having been able to get goods to his country customers. Prices are shading up a little generally and restocking by retailers is beginning on a large scale. Canned goods continue firm with prospects of steady prices for considerable time yet. Spices are firm, and coffee is quiet with prices easier. The molasses market is unsettled with prices showing tendency to advance. Sugar is in big demand, and prices advanced 5c. per cwt. all round on Monday. The tea market is active; low grade Ceylons have advanced in price locally as well as Japan tea in New York Prices in teas generally are likely to advance still further. Trade in dried fruits is quiet.

CANNED GOODS.

The market for canned goods continues firm. At the present time it looks as if there would be no surplus stocks at the end of the season. Fresh canned goods will begin to enter the market about August with the arrival of green peas. Fairly large stocks of canned goods are being held, and prices are unlikely to change materially before the middle of the Spring. We quote as follows:

SUGAR

The strong tone in the sugar market noted in our last report has been more than maintained and raw sugars have recorded an advance of 1-16 for the week on very large sales of Cuba centrifugals to United States refineries. There is an unconfirmed report that these sales will total fully 500,000 bags, although this may be an exaggeration. Prices are firm on basis of 2 1-8c. c. and f. New York, which is equivalent to 3 5-16c. duty paid. Cereals are mostly for second half of March and April shipments, though refiners have also been buyers of spot for 3,000 bags. San Domingo centrifugals afloat. In sympathy with the strong position, New York refined is 10c. dearer for the week. This has been reflected in the local market where prices advanced 5c. over the entire list on Monday, March 7. Refiners and different sellers report deliveries on recent contracts exceptionally heavy since the raising of the freight blockade. The European market shows a slight fluctuation for the week the price of 88 per cent. beet having advanced to 8s. 3 1-4d. and fallen to 8s. 2 1-4d. It is thought that the decline is to be attributed to the break in prices of grain.

Receipts at United States Atlantic ports for the week ending March 2, were 31,825 tons, with meltings 34,000 tons, the latter being 1,000 tons less than for the previous week, but 9,000 tons greater than for the corresponding week last year. Stocks in all hands were 103,529 tons or 53,146 tons less than for the same period last year. Combined stocks of United States and Cuba at latest advices were 280,528 tons, a decrease of 100,544 tons from last year.

There are 169 factories grinding in Cuba at the present time as against 160 last year. It is interesting to note that the estimated total crop of 10,200,000 tons, the Cubans have already sold approximately 40 per cent. This seems to indicate a strong position for the Spring months, since it will become more difficult as the weeks advance to secure large quantities in the island. Now that weaker holders have realized and sugar is believed to be in strong hands, with speculators operating to a certain extent, there is every reason to acknowledge that the market has assumed a very strong position.

Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates were 3,627,528 tons against 3,543,819 tons for last year, the excess being 8,370 tons. We have to repeat what we said in a recent report, that the excess of stocks is entirely apparent in European figures, that is, for Continental countries. In this connection we would point out that 88 per cent. beet sugar is still being held at about 30c. per 100 lbs. above the parity of cane sugars in the New York market. Probably this difference will be equalized in the near future, and the indications seem to be in favor of canes advancing to nearly parity of beets. We quote as follows:

Paris lumps in 50-lb. boxes	4 83

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Although the demand for these lines is fairly good the market is in an unsettled state. In low grade molasses very little buying is being done by the trade which is waiting to see what will be done on the New Orleans grade test. Prices show a tendency to advance although it is reported that a lot of inferior molasses is being brought on the market to sell at present prices. Our quotations are as follows:

TEAS.

The leading feature of the tea market is the uncertainty hanging over Japan, which has unsettled buyers of Japan tea. It will be months, however, in any event, before results will be serious. Low grade Indian Ceylons are higher in price. The London market has advanced in all lines and an extraordinarily active demand is reported; the reason for this is the free purchases on Russian account of all growths, con bined with the fact that the arrivals from India and Ceylon have been smaller than the trade had allowed for. Another feature of the British market is the increased attention now being paid to medium kinds of tea which have been depressed for some time. In the local market Japan tea is selling more freely and advances in price have been nominal. In the United States where the higher grades of Japan are dealt in freely, the market has advanced 5c. per lb. since the war broke out. It is expected that prices will appreciate considerably during the next few weeks. There has been a slight easing in the price of Ceylon greens. Inquiries for China greens are becoming more frequent on account of the war in the East. We quote as follows:

COFFEES.

Coffee is quiet this week and it is believed that the high prices have had their day. The condition of the market is unsettled and buyers are not anxious to move until it becomes more stationary. The recent sudden break is attributed largely to speculators who ran up the price of coffee and subsequently stocks have been unloaded. The drop in price has not been so noticeable in Brazil as in New York, although it is no less than 2c. a pound from the highest point. Options have dropped and practically no coffee is offering at present. The European market is firmer and there is a tendency for prices to advance. Our quotations are as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Trade in dried fruits is exceptionally quiet this week and enquiries are few. The last mail advice from Greece reports a steady market for currants. The raisin situation continues unchanged; the recent reduction of 1c. per lb. for the Canadian trade was unsucessful in bringing increased business, because no one has been inclined to enter the market for large quantities. A slight easing of the market is noted with respect to prunes and the demand for prunes is about to begin and is likely to continue for the balance of the season; previously prunes have been hanging fire. EGGS.

The market has eased since last week and stocks are sufficient to supply demand. The slump in Chicago being largely influential in bringing down the high price. At the present time receipts of eggs from suburban sections are increasing rapidly, and plenty of Chicago stocks are procurable if desired. At the time of going to press dealers predict a further drop to 20c. Our quotations are as follows:

Fish.

The feature of the fish market this week is a lively trade and increasing scarcity of stocks, particularly in whitefish. Dealers are unable to tell as yet whether present stocks will last out the season or not. Last week's quotation prices remain unchanged. We quote the following prices:

Green Fruits.

The market in green fruits has brightened appreciably during the last week. As the railroads have finally lifted the embargo on perishable fruit, fruit merchants are able to begin filling back orders. Stocks in the country are believed to be light. California navel oranges are moving freely, quality is good and flavor particularly sweet. Stocks begin to show signs of wasting so that it will be necessary to repack fruit en route from California in refrigerator cars. Florida oranges are out of the market. The demand for tangerines is practically over, and stocks are about done for. Mexican oranges are also out of the market. No Seville bitter oranges have been noticed during the past week. Palermo bitters are 40c. firmer. An increasing demand has been found for Valencia oranges. Stocks are good and the price for large Valencias is 50c. firmer, that for 420 cases is $1 firmer. Bahama grape fruit is scarce and has advanced in price; Bahama stocks are in demand although California stocks are inclined to drag on the market. Pineapples are beginning to arrive in larger quantities; the regular shipments are now on the way, and after the next few weeks pines will be a common article on the market. One fruit firm expects a weekly turn over of two or three carloads beginning in the near future. Pineapples and bananas will be the fruits most in demand from now on until strawberries come on the market. Bananas are scarce this week, although continuous mild weather will bring in plentiful supplies. Almeria grapes are growing scarce. Lemons are firm, and supplies are below the average. Cranberries are quiet, with considerable stocks on the market. Strawberries will be the feature of next week's market and will retail at 50c. a box.

Vegetables.

The demand for all varieties of vegetables continues lively, and supplies are beginning to come a little more freely. Onions are in big demand although not so scarce as last week. With the advent of milder weather the onion trade will slacken appreciably. The recent shipments of French onions from Bordeaux did not take well with the trade, Valencias having easily outdistanced them. Parsnips are scarce. Sweet potatoes are a little easier. There is a big demand for California celery with supplies slightly less than in previous years. Canadian celery is scarce. Potatoes are easier. Lettuce is plentiful and easier in price. Radishes are comparatively scarce. Green cucumbers are noticed on the market for the first time this week. Our quotations are as follows:

Seeds.

The market for seeds has been improving steadily since the mild weather set in. Seed merchants report a particularly good demand for the last day or two. The only change from last week's prices is a wider range of 10c. in red clover. We quote as follows:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The tendency of grain is still downward. The market this week is quiet. "In fact there is nothing doing," said one buyer. The recent soaring of grains was largely due to the manipulation of the market by speculators, and the subsequent drop is probably due to the same cause. Prices are unsteady. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, has dropped from 1-2 to 1c., Northern, No. 1 is 1c. easier, and No. 2 Northern 21-2c. easier respectively. Red wheat is 2 to 21-2c. lower, and white 21-2 to 3c. lower. Barley is 1c. firmer. Oats, peas, buckwheat and rye continue unchanged. We quote the following prices:

Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, per bush, Toronto	1 08½	1 09

FLOUR.

The flour market is uncertain, partly on account of recent speculation. Millers complain that flour is hard to get and that it will continue to be so until the country roads become passable, and freight moves more easily on the railroads. Last week's prices continue unchanged. Our quotations are the following:

BREAKFAST FOODS.

Trade in breakfast foods is quiet this week, with demand not so brisk as during the preceding week. The tendency is largely due to large quantities of will be controlled almost entirely by the war situation in the East, and the conditions of traffic locally. There are no changes in prices since last week. Our quotations are as follows:

Hides, Skins and Wool.

Still further decline of 1c. per lb. is noted in No. 1 and 2 steers while cured hides have dropped off 1-4c. This is largely due to large quantities of inferior goods being placed on the market. The market also denotes a scarcity of lamb and sheepskins which have advanced 5 to 10c. apiece since our last quotations. Our quotations are as follows:

Groceries.

THE weather has again been the most important factor as affects the trade. Though the thaw has greatly removed snow throughout the country, yet roads are still in a shape far from satisfactory. Still should the mild weather continue the rush of Spring trade will shortly be upon us, and by all appearances the said rush will be one long to be remembered. Prospects for a Spring and Summer business of the most lively character are extremely bright. We have again to record an advance of 5c. per 100 lbs. in all sugars, throughout Canada, with an extra advance of another 5c. in the Maritime Provinces. Syrups and molasses show a better movement this week, the latter being quoted 3c. lower for Barbadoes. Rice and tapioca have been moving satisfactorily. Tapioca, especially, is in better demand, and medium pearl tapioca is firmer at 3 to 3 1-2c. In almost all lines of breakfast cereals there have been advances in sympathy with the strong tone prevailing in the market for oatmeals. Sisal rope is 1-2c. per lb. higher. The price is now 12 1-2 to 14c., according to size. Dried fruits are dull and entirely without feature this week. In green fruits the Spring demand seems to have commenced, and this week a fair trade in several lines was done. The rush for fish is about over, though the demand is still heavy, and stocks have become very light on many lines. In spices Jamaica ginger has been attracting some attention and sales are reported at 8 3-4c. and upwards. Pimento is in fair demand, and firm at 9c. per lb. Peanuts are 1-4c. higher. Roasted are now quoted at 8 1-2 to 12c.; green, 1c. less.

SUGAR.

On Monday an advance of 5c. on all sugars was announced to take effect in all the provinces. On Friday, 4th inst., there was an advance of 5c. in the Maritime Provinces, making the price 10c. higher since last reported. The first advance in the Maritime Provinces followed upon a similar advance in New York by Arbuckles, the American and National sugar refineries. The tone of the sugar market is still firm, both in raw and refined, in New York and foreign markets. On the local market there has been some improvement in the demand, which is expected to increase from now on. We now quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Our statement that a certain wholesale house had been offered new Barbadoes at 25c. last week was taken exception to by another wholesale dealer in molasses. It is a fact, however, that such an offer was made, and with the subsequent decline of 3c. in Barbadoes molasses it looks as though the dealer who offered it at that knew his business pretty thoroughly. Barbadoes in puncheons is now quoted at 30c., and the tone of the market is easy. It is estimated that there are still about 10,000 puncheons of old molasses in stock in Canada and Newfoundland, and that the new crop will amount to between 40,000 and 50,000 puncheons, against the 20,000 of last year. There has been some improvement in the demand of late. One of the largest Canadian molasses importing firms writes us as follows: "In regard to the outlook for Barbadoes molasses, we may tell you that we expect to see some very low prices this year. There is quite a large stock of old molasses still held both in Canada and Newfoundland, and this will curtail buying in Barbadoes to some extent, we expect, therefore, that the price in Barbadoes will go quie low. This will probable increase the consumption somewhat over last year. But perhaps not, as people have got accustomed to other sweets, owing to the high prices last year, and it may be difficult to get them back to the use of molasses again. This is about the way we look at the situation, and we have formed our opinions from a general investigation." We quote as follows:

COFFEE.

There is a fair demand for coffee at steady and unchanged prices. There have been some fluctuations in New York during the week, but this has had little if any effect on local conditions. We quote:

TEA.

Japan teas remain very firm, and under a good demand stocks in wholesale hands are getting low. Wholesalers report that they find no Japan siftings or fannings available under 6 1-2c. or perhaps 7c. For good to mediums 18c. for lower grades is quite a low quotation considering the condition of the market, but wholesalers are still selling at that figure, though an advance is likely to take place shortly. There is a better demand for Ceylon greens, enquiries being received from all parts of the country. The tone of the market for low grade Ceylons has been stronger, and in England prices are 1-2d. higher since our last report. Sales are said to have been made at 7 3-4d., c.i.f. Pealeaf and gunpowders are firm. Low grade congous are reported scarce. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

There has been an improved demand for canned goods. Tomatoes have aroused some interest among the jobbing trade. It appears that there have been two or three canners who are not in the Canners' Association, who hold small stocks which they refuse to sell sometimes even at the association price. They ask higher prices for their goods, though they usually aim to quote lower. No one, however, seems to doubt their wisdom in holding off for higher prices. Canners are not offering "Refugee" string beans now. Corn and peas are selling well at firm prices. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

There is very little doing in this line. Advices from Greece again bring up the subject of the protection of the currant trade, by the Chamber of Deputies. Various schemes are discussed by that body, among them being to increase the limit at which the Currant Bank will be compelled to purchase all fruit offered; to provide cash to sources of the bank that immediate payment might be made for all fruit delivered, and at the same time a prohibition against new plantations for a period of ten years. The present position of the currant market in Greece is considered quite strong. According to statistics the available supply for export is now down to 28,500 tons, and if the usual demand is met with from consuming countries (which there is no reason to doubt) the entire export supply in Greece will be disposed of. We quote:

Green Fruits.

There is a fair general movement, trade being stimulated by the apparent commencement of Spring weather. There is still a quantity of frozen stock of California oranges on this market, some five or six cars having been here, and what is to be done with it is an unanswerable question at the moment. They, however, have not affected the price of good stock. Probabilities are that an advance will be made here shortly in Californian navels of about 50c. Importers have now to pay that advance for new oranges at the coast. This is on account of the large increase in the demand, thought the supply is reported very large. We quote:

Fish.

There is still a very good demand for all fresh fish. Supplies of frozen, having been practically exhausted, they continue to be drawn from United States sources. Stocks have run very low on many lines, and it is apparent that by the end of the season, there will be very little fish left on the market, for which dealers are duly grateful. Tommy cods have taken a big drop this week, on account of the soft weather, and are now quoted 50 to 75c. cheaper. Choice red B.C. salmon is $1 higher per barrel. We quote:

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The egg market shows improved conditions now, and with increased receipts both from Canadian and American sources, there is also a better demand. Old stock has been about cleaned up. Large supplies are expected of fresh stock shortly, and the market has again weakened, and for single cases 27c. is now quoted, with sales of fair sized lots at 25c. Should the mild weather continue indications are that prices will go down rapidly.

BEANS.

There has been absolutely no change in the conditions of this market. There is not much demand, though no weakening in prices is reported. Primes sold at $1.35 to $1.40 per bushel in carlots; smaller lots at $1.40 to $1.50 and lots of 1 to 5 bbls., $1.60 to $1.65.

HONEY.

There is no actual change in prices. White clover comb is somewhat scarce, and a little firmer. We quote:

Comb honey	0 13	0 13½
Buckwheat	0 06	0 07
Strained, white clover	0 08½	0 09

POTATOES.

There has been a fair but steady demand for potatoes at prices quoted before, and the market is now moderately active, at 71 to 72c., in carlots, on track, and 82 to 85c. per bag. Some frozen stock is reported to have sold on the market very cheaply.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

A few samples of new syrup were received here last week. It is expected that there will be a good run this season, owing to the heavy snowfalls. There is but little demand for old stuff, but a better trade has been done than a week ago. We quote:

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

There is still a firm feeling in this market, though with the exception of straight rollers there has been no actual advance. In Manitoba grades should the weak feeling in wheat continue, a decline will be looked for, but at present prices are steady. We quote:

Winter wheat patents	5 10	5 25
Straight rollers	4 85	5 00

FEED.

There is a moderate demand for feed, and a fair trade is doing. Ontario bran has taken another advance, and is now 50c. higher. Shorts are also up somewhat. We quote:

" shorts		21 00
Manitoba bran, in bags	19 00	20 00

OATMEAL.

Rolled oats have again advanced and the market is firm under a good demand. Business in a jobbing way is done on a basis of $2.50 per bag and $5.15 to $5.20 per barrel. Oatmeals are quoted by the wholesale houses as follows:

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of Canadian Grocer,

St. John, N.B., March, 1904.

AFTER our long Winter even the disagreeable March weather is a welcome change. We are having all the signs of the break in the season. The little German band has been on the street, and in addition we have had a thaw and a thunderstorm. There are a number of rumors of business changes, even perhaps of more importance than the usual changes incident to the season. Merchants have had great difficulty in getting Western goods forward, particularly heavy goods. Now, however, they are crowding in so there is the additional difficulty of handling them, but this is the better condition of the two.

The matter of chief importance to local merchants is the decision of the banks here to accept American paper and silver money at face value. Being so near Maine and in the Summer having continually a large number of Americans here, we always have in circulation a quantity of United States money. What to do with it has for years been a disturbing question; during the last few years we have been helped somewhat by the C.P.R. accepting it for freight. But the I.C.R. would not do so. Our money receives so little courtesy at the hands of our American friends that there was a feeling we should not place their money on an equal footing with our own, but as we were the ones put to inconvenience the position taken by the banks is greatly appreciated.

In markets the past week has seen but little change. Everything is firm; lard is considered particularly so; but in Chicago the market has been unsteady. Rice is still low and our trade has bought freely. Cream of tartar is firmer, and all spices tend higher. Cloves are firm at the high figures.

Oil—In illuminating oil the high price continues. While the retail trade are trying to get a better profit, it is in a better position in this regard than before the day of the tank wagon. Then they always felt there was a loss in the matter of measure but now there is little chance of this. Lubricating oil has particular attention. A new company started here a short time ago but their business has now been taken over by a company already represented here. In paint oils, linseeds are still low, turpentine high; fish oils scarce. Newfoundland and non-freezing cod liver oil is lower.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt there is a full stock held; dealers have been buying ahead, feeling that the war would by advancing coal, advance salt. In fine salt stocks are not large. Prices of Canadian fine is rather lower. The high price of wooden packages effects that style of delivery.

Canned Goods—A car of tomatoes has been received, sold by a Montreal house under the market price. Prices are held firm. Corn is in light supply. In fact all lines are tending higher. Meats are very firm. In domestic fish, kippers and sardines are still offered but haddies and other lines are in short supply.

Green Fruit—Apples are a light stock. There is good enquiry, and prices are higher. Lemons have a fair sale but quality here has not been good. Valencia oranges now largely hold the market, price higher. Californias, while freely offered are not large sellers. A few cranberries sold at full prices. It is thought the banana season will not open as early as last year.

Dried Fruits—The demand here for prunes is for 90-100s, and this is the size which this season has in rather light supply. In apricots and peaches there is a small market. In raisins the market is somewhat overstocked and prices are easy. Sale is for seeded, in which there is a wide range of quality. It is said some 12-oz. goods are offered. Currants have steady sale at even figures. Dates are low. Some nice Canadian onions are offered; also quite a few Valencias. Peanuts, of which a very large quantity is used here, are held firm at the advanced price.

Sugar—Prices have been slightly advanced, and the market is considered firm. Dealers carry full stocks. The sale is for granulated.

Molasses—While prices are lower there is but a limited sale. Buyers will only take such quantities as will supply present needs. There is considerable old molasses being carried over. It is an interesting question what will become of it.

Fish—The break in the season will mean a break in the fresh fish business. The season has been better than for some years, particularly in frozen herring. All lines of fish are scarce, dry cod and smoked herring particularly so. The haddie season is about over, and the supply is now light. Pickled herring have a light sale.

Flour, Feed and Meal—There has been no change in flour during the week and prices are held firm at the advance. Oats have a steady sale even at the higher figures quoted. Oatmeal shows a wide advance. The market is well supplied. Beans are higher, but have

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, March 7, 1904.

TRADE is beginning to look up considerably and city houses are getting in shape for the rush of Spring business. It is too early yet for shipments to shore points, but goods are being sold for delivery when the coasting schooners are able to make their usual voyages. The weather is now milder and during the week the province was visited by a very heavy rainstorm accompanied by thunder and lightning. This materially reduced the snow and the roads are now in better condition. Merchants, however, complain of difficulty in getting heavy freight through from Ontario, as a result some lines, spot stocks of which are light, have been advanced more here than in the upper provinces.

A disastrous fire broke out Saturday morning in the centre of the Halifax wholesale district, but fortunately all of the wholesale warehouses escaped. The buildings destroyed included two hotels, the British American and the Commercial, the E. B. Eddy paper warehouse, a large building occupied by T. H. Carroll, commission merchant, and owned by J. Walter Allison, of John P. Mott & Co., and other buildings occupied by various tenants as small shops and residences. The loss will be about $50,000, the buildings being merely wooden structures. The following wholesale houses surround the burned district, viz.: The Acadia Sugar Refining Co., John P. Mott & Co., Brown & Webb, the People's Bank, H. H. Fuller & Co., John Lubin & Co., Grant, Oxley & Co., and Bauld Brothers.

A leading wholesale house this week issued a price list to the trade making the following changes in quotations: Pearl barley, half barrels, $4; former price, $3.60. Yellow eyed beans, five bushel barrels, $3.50; former price $3. Brooms, King, 3-string, heavy, $2.75; former price, $2.90. Beef, American plate in bond, $9.50; former price, $9.25. Pork, Swift's, in bond $16; former price $15. Bean pork, in bond, $14.50; former price, $13. French walnuts, 7-1-2 cents; former price 9 cents. Brazil nuts, 13c.; former price 15c. Almonds, 9 1-2c.; former price, 12c.; Boneless chicken, per dozen, $3.25; former price, $2.85. Corn, $1.10; former price, 95c. Beans, 90c.; former price 85c. Lard, pails, 9 1-4c.; former price 8 3-4c. Lard, compound, pails, 8 1-2c.; formerly 8 1-4c. Manitoba flour, less than carloads, $6.15; former price, $5.70. Ontario patents, $5.60; former price, $4.85. Cornmeal, $3.25; former price $3. Rolled oats, barrels, $5.50; former price $5.25. Biscuits for all makes have advanced one half cent per pound. Fish have advanced 50c. per quintal. The discount on bags has been reduced 10 per cent. Wrapping paper is higher by about 5 per cent. and tubs and all lines of woodenware have advanced 10 per cent. Potatoes have advanced to $2 per barrel. The above fairly represents the changes of the week on this market.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

THE long, bright sunshiny days of March have already materially effected the snow; the streets are getting slushy and wheels are once more in evidence on all the big drays; signs on all hands that Spring is coming.

Business has been very good throughout the week, and as railway facilities improve with the fine weather there will be an increased demand for many lines of goods that have run short in the more remote of the smaller towns.

Jobbers report a generally good all round trade and appear to be very fairly satisfied with collections.

There has not been much change in prices for the week but prices in all lines of staple groceries are very firm and in a good many lines there appears to be a tendency to advance. This is very noticeable in canned goods and more especially canned vegetables which are very firm. Corn is scarce and promises to be more so as the season advances, and the price is very firm at $2.50. Tomatoes which were quite easy a few weeks ago at $2.60 to $2.65 are now quoted at $2.65 to $2.75, and the last named price is asked for all the best brands. Peas are also very firm and are quoted at $2.25 to $2.30.

Sugars—The advance in the East was confirmed here on Friday and the prices are now $4.80 in barrels and $4.70 in sacks, the difference in price being accounted for by the increased cost of wooden packages. Yellows are quoted at $4.15. The demand for sugar at the present is good.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are very firm and this season's pack of apricots and peaches is very high, a good deal of choice stock from the year before being handled. Old pack apricots are worth 12c to-day and new pack 13½ to 14c. Peaches are very firm, 8½c. to 9c.

In Raisins—The only change is the announcement of a rebate of 1c. on seeded raisins, made by the California Association; this rebate, it is claimed by some is to extend to 3 crown muscatels as well, but so far that statement lacks confirmation. Imported raisins are just about the same as they have been since Christmas and there is only a steady consumptive demand.

Green Fruits—The fruit trade has slightly stirred from the end of the Winter dullness this past week, and things have been lively. The Ottawa Fruit and Produce Company arrived in Winnipeg recently to open a branch and advertise an auction sale of oranges for Thursday, March 3. The representative of the California Fruit Association got wind of the matter and got up an auction sale for Thursday morning at which prices realized were about $2.65 per case, the prices at the afternoon auction of the Ottawa people being if anything slightly under that. The representative of the California Association announces his intention of having an auction sale of a car of oranges whenever the other people do. In the meantime, wholesale fruit jobbers have put the price of oranges down to meet the auction sale price, though this apparently was only for the moment and they would not quote them as actually lower. The Ottawa people claim they are with the thing for keeps and that they are in a position to make fruit cheaper, and there for the present the matter rests, except that the auctioneers of the city are said to be moving to prevent Mr. Borthwick of the Ottawa Fruit Company doing his own auctioneering. The rule is that a man must be a resident of the province three months before he can take out a license, and this rule was not observed by the Ottawa company, Mr. Borthwick doing his own auctioneering.

The first car of bananas is expected next week or not later than the 12th or 15th. At present bananas are still coming in by express and are quoted at $4 per bunch. Pieplant, both domestic and imported, is offering at 12c per pound and finds ready sale; cucumbers are $2.25 per dozen and tomatoes in six basket crates $1.25 per basket. Fresh lettuce is 75c. per dozen bunches.

Fish—Oysters are scarce and high, being quoted at $2.25 to $2.50 per gallon. Haddies have advanced 1c. and are quoted at 9c. per lb.

Flour—The market remains at last week's figure of $2.75 for No. 1 patent in spite of the decline in wheat prices. The demand for flour is very heavy at the present time.

Cured Meats—The market took the upturn this week and hams are quoted at 14c., breakfast bellies at 13½c., and backs at 11c. Dry salt long clear, 9c., smoked, 10c., and boneless backs 8c.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., March 5.

EASTERN people are apt to think that the only thing developed to any extent in the fisheries of British Columbia is the salmon. While that is the important line from point of extent of the industry and the capital involved, halibut fishing is rapidly becoming a very considerable source of revenue, not only to the parties interested in the operation of these fisheries, but in the amount of money put in circulation through it. The principal company engaged in this province is the New England Fish Co., of Boston, which has three fine fishing steamers, the New England, the Kingfisher and the Columbia, constantly engaged. Each of these vessels is built of steel and in dimensions is as large as any fishing vessels ever used. The Columbia is of Canadian register and the other two are United States.

Queen Charlotte Islands takes from 8 days to two weeks, the winter trip being longer as a rule. The cargoes brought to port each voyage are from 75,000 to 150,000 lbs. as a rule, but there are occasions when good weather and the proverbial fisherman's luck make the catch much bigger. This week two of the largest catches on record, one being a world's record for halibut, were brought to port. The Kingfisher came in with 240,000 lbs. and the Columbia reached port the same day with 150,000 lbs. The distribution of money from such a catch is no small amount. The fishermen, of whom each vessel carries about 24, make large wages, or rather their money is by the piece on the result of the catch. The men on the Kingfisher made an average of $100 each on the big catch brought in. The vessel was absent from port only 8 days, and the run each way takes about 48 hours, so that for the time actually spent on the banks the catch is simply enormous.

The fish is largely shipped to the Eastern States, though the company sells a good deal locally in the Northwest and Eastern Canada. The cargo is shipped by rail over the C. P. R. to Montreal and thence to Boston. The fish are trimmed of heads and entrails and packed in 200 lb. boxes in ice, and the cars are kept iced on the entire trip east. There are a number of other companies operating in a smaller way from B. C. ports, and from Seattle there are said to be some 40 schooners engaged in fishing halibut. For the regulation of these latter vessels and preventing them breaking the laws respecting fishing within three-mile limit, the Dominion Government keeps the fisheries' protection cruiser Kestrel in commission. She is now on a six weeks' patrol of the banks and northerly coast waters.

In addition to the money spent in purchase of supplies, and keeping the vessels outfitted at this port, the providing of herring, which is used for bait, has furnished a considerable industry. One small steamer, the Squid, built last year, is engaged in the herring catching exclusively for bait. She brings in from twelve to twenty tons to port each trip. These are salted and kept on hand for the halibut steamers.

The cargo of the steamer Queen, which was partly burned last Sunday while en route to this port, chanced to comprise some large consignments of California products for local wholesalers. It arrived by the steamer Al-Ki yesterday from Seattle, where the Queen was taken after the accident. The principal items were 12,236 lbs. of dried fruits, 5,740 lbs. raisins, 8,550 lbs. coffee, 4,675 lbs. malt, 550 lbs. beans, 4,000 lbs. rice, 31,000 lbs. salt, 100 bbls. cocoanut oil, 367 lbs. leaf tobacco, 1,900 lbs. oil cake, 20,000 lbs. soda, 250 cases fresh eggs, 100 boxes macaroni, and 600 packages fresh fruits and vegetables.

Local trade conditions are rather quiet again this week. There was some fairly heavy shipping North by the steamers Princess May, which loaded nearly 200 tons of provisions and groceries for White Horse and Dawson on Tuesday, but otherwise there has been a lull in shipping. The steamer Miowera, which sails for Australia this week, takes out but a small cargo, and of this Canadian food products are a small percentage. The fact that no wheat or flour is being shipped to the Commonwealth now reduces the total of consignments considerably.

The steamer Athenian leaves on Monday next for the Orient, but her cargo is not to include much in food products. Flour is not in a position to be shipped owing, as described last week, to overstocking in Oriental warehouses and the closing of Russian ports as well as the uncertain condition of shipping to Japan.

The steamer Empress of India which reached port on Wednesday morning brought a fairly large cargo of which a proportion consisted of rice and tea, but from Japan ports shipments have fallen off. The steamer's advices show that trade at the principal seaports of Japan has fallen off greatly owing to the war, which occupies the attention of every one.

Grocery stocks show little if any changes this week. Sugar has not moved in price for some time and this week no further increase in flour is noted. The firm quotation is now on a basis of $6 per bbl. for patent. The canned goods situation as compared with Eastern quotations is peculiar. Lines of vegetables which last week The Grocer quoted at $1.15 Eastern price, are being sold at $1.05 here. The wholesale trade is fairly well stocked, and as they do not anticipate re-ordering, it is likely they will keep the price about as it is, despite the fact that they could not repeat at quotations now current in the East. Dried fruits are moving better, but no further advances since last notation have occurred.

Eggs are cheaper this week. Today's quotation is 29 and 29½c. for California stock, which is supplying the market. Next boat, which is due on Monday, will bring stocks which sell for 27c. Local eggs are scarce, and the quotation is now firm at 35c.

Butter is not in big supply, though there is no shortage. Local fresh creamery is still scarce and quotation is now 32c. for those creameries which have to sell. The small stock of Australian which arrived last week by the steamer Miowera sold out quickly at 29c. There is a lot of moderate proportions expected from New Zealand by next steamer in three of four weeks' time. The car of Ontario butter expected to arrive has not yet come to hand. It will be easily absorbed when it reaches the market.

Cured meats are steady at quotations of 16½c. for hams and 17½c. for bacon, U. S. packing house stock. Lard is fairly easy and price is now coming up to a parity with Eastern quotations, though not as high yet.

Fruits are moving slowly. Oranges are plentiful and while there are indications that the California market is stiffening up local quotations to the trade are from $2 up to $2.50 for navels. Seedlings do not sell when the navels are so cheap. A few small lots of Oregon apples have been on the market at from $1.75 to $2 per box. Some Coldstream stock from the Okanagan district is expected in next week, which will sell at $2.25 to the trade.

Vegetables are in fair supply. Dry onions are from California largely now, and a shipment of New Zealand onions will be received by the next Australian steamer. These are hard dry stock, of superior class, specially for northern trade. They are crated instead of sacked for shipment. Potatoes show easier feeling. Ashcrofts are a little lower. The wholesale quotation is now about $20 per ton with local Fraser Valley stock at about $18.

In the interior there are some places such as Grand Forks and Midway in the Boundary District where some considerable quantities are now grown. A car was shipped from there to Nelson last week which had been in pits all Winter and was loaded in a refrigerator car for forwarding. It stood the trip all right, and turned out in good condition, though the weather is still Winter there.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Three cars bananas arrived this week for White & Co., Toronto.

A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, have some finest quality Canadian Stiltons, Flats and Cheddar cheese, which they are selling at interesting prices. If you want anything of this kind, get in touch with them at once.

McWilliam and Everist, Toronto, report that they have a car of pineapples from Havana, Cuba, on the way. They are also in receipt of a car of Palermo lemons.

White & Co., Toronto, expect a shipment of new strawberries on March 10, which will retail at 50c. a box.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, have received a car each of "Magnolia" brand California navel oranges, "California Beauty" navel oranges, and their old standard "Redland Beauty," California navels. They also report the arrival of 2 cars Valencia onions.

Rock crystals and Trinidad sugar in bags in store with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal.

White & Co., Toronto, have installed a private branch telephone exchange connecting all departments and fruit market, which will be found a great convenience to the trade.

The T. Upton Co., Hamilton, report that in spite of the severe frost this Winter their bitter oranges are arriving in better shape than ever, and that they are having the largest sale of their orange marmalade on record. Quality counts.

Owing to scarcity of native onions this year, White & Co., Toronto, are receiving large shipments of Spanish and French onions.

We have recently had our attention called to an article which should be of interest to the grocery trade, namely: Calvert & Co.'s carbolic 15 per cent. soap for cattle. This soap will be found of great value to owners of horses and cattle, and also for the destruction of lice and other insects. The coats of horses will be much improved by the use of this soap, which also saves them from a great deal of annoyance from fly or other insect bites. Country store keepers would find this an article which would sell for many useful purposes. Full instructions are given on the label. F. C. Calvert & Co. (of Manchester) have recently opened a depot for their Canadian business, and their advertisement appears on page 9.

Some very attractive lines of French goods such as mushrooms, peas, haricots, &c., in tins and glass, are offered at interesting figures by L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal.

There are a few of those Eastern war maps left Laporte, Martin & Cie, Montreal. They are yours for the asking.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, are offering medium pearl and seed tapioca at very low prices.

Buyers of dates will find good value and interesting prices by communicating with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal. New York Golden Hallowees in 1 lb. packages are an attractive feature.

INQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade recently received at the Canadian Government office in London, Eng.

1. A produce broker in London is desirous of taking up the sale of Canadian wheat on commission, as well as other grain, canned fruit and fish.

2. A London firm of general merchants and commission agents are desirous of obtaining consignments of fruit from Canadian sources.

3. Inquiry is made respecting shipments of concentrated apple juice which have been coming to the English market from Canada.

4. A timber merchant in London has asked to be placed in touch with Canadian manufacturers of blind laths.

5. A firm of sauce, ketchup, essence and vinegar manufacturers are anxious to appoint reprsentatives in one or two of the largest trade centres in Canada.

6. A commission agent in the north of Ireland is seeking the agencies for Canadian shippers of canned fruits, meats, condensed milk, cheese and canned fish.

7. A Canadian shipper of common and culled apples, such as are used for cider purposes, is shortly visiting the United Kingdom and France, and desires to get into touch with importers with whom to establish business relations.

The following enquiries were received at the Canadian Section of the Imperial Institute, London, Eng.:

8. A firm, working the confectionery, grocery and druggist trades, invites correspondence from Canadian manufacturers of any goods in these lines, for which an outlet is desired.

9. The manufacturers of glass bottles, of various kinds, ask to be placed in communication with Canadian importers.

10. A firm in Aberdeen would be glad to hear from Canadian shippers of cheese, butter and other produce.

[The names of those making inquiries may be obtained from the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

OFF FOR NEWFOUNDLAND.

MR. J. LISTER NICHOLS, representing E. W. Gillett Co., Toronto, in Newfoundland and New Brunswick, was in Montreal this week on his way to the East. Mr. Nichols is thoroughly familiar with the trade in the Maritime Provinces and the ancient colony, this being his second trip for E. W. Gillett Co. Although starting now, Mr. Nichols will require over nine months to cover the ground. After visiting St. Johns, Nfld., Mr. Nichols hires a sailing craft and entirely circumnavigates the island touching at all the villages and coastline towns not called at by the regular steamers, and it goes without saying that he can in this way personally reach more of the trade than the travellers usually do who visit Newfoundland.

Mr. Nichols' experience in the past among the fisher folk have been interesting and novel, and at some future time a few of his experiences may prove entertaining to our readers. He found the people generally hospitable; business is done freely and comparatively easily. One feature of interest to the traveller is the lack of proper hotel accommodation, but in this respect great improvement has taken place during the past few years. Certain conditions of trade in Newfoundland require merchants of the Dominion to put up goods to suit the habits and customs of the islanders, and those manufacturers who have fallen in with the views of the Newfoundlanders have reaped good results, and will continue to benefit, as the merchants and consuming public are very conservative. Mr. Nichols will make a tour through New Brunswick before visiting the island next June.

A VISITOR FROM CALCUTTA.

MR. E. H. TOWNEND, of Lampard, Clark & Co., Calcutta, is a visitor to their Montreal branch this week. Mr. Townend is visiting his firm's different branches in Canada and the United States, and as this is his first trip his time will be thoroughly occupied in studying the trade conditions of Canada and the United States.

"It is rather early to comment on this year's Indian tea business," said Mr. Townend, "as the tea is not grown yet; but judging from information possessed by us, and reports from up country it is thought that there will be no falling away of the output. It all rests with weather conditions; if these are favorable the season will naturally be longer and the production larger. The improvements that are being made every season, looking to the production of green Indians, are placing these teas on a high and desirable plane. I may be prejudiced in my opinion but I am firmly of the belief that our green Indians are more desirable than similar teas produced in Ceylon, as regards make, flavor, draw and character. Of course, you understand, I merely express the opinion of the Indian tea planter."

Mr. Townend is not very much impressed with the reception he got from the clerk of the weather; a little warmer weather would be preferable. However, before he finishes his tour, he expects he will find Canada all that Canadians claim for it. After making a tour of the Continent as far as San Francisco Mr. Townend returns to Calcutta via New York and London.

"FRAE GLASGIE."

Mr. David Greig, representing D. McDougall & Co., of St. Rollon, Glasgow, the well-known Scotch clay pipe manufacturers, was met among the jobbing trade in Montreal this week. Mr. Greig who is well and favorably known to the trade in Canada, in an interview with The Grocer, stated that the increase in his company's business in 1903 was phenomenal and the prospects are exceedingly bright for the future. Mr. Greig left for the West this week, and it will be a few months before he will again walk in "Auld Glasgie."

EXPORT APPLE TRADE.

DEATH OF A PROMINENT MANUFACTURER.

MR. E. W. GILLETT, one of the best known citizens of Chicago, died at 9 o'clock last Friday night at his residence, 3334 Michigan avenue. He was born in Dexter, Jefferson Co., N.Y., and when six years old moved to Chicago with his parents. On the advice of his physicians he left at the beginning of this year for Southern California, but gradually grew worse and returned to Chicago about ten days before his death occurred.

The late Mr. E. W. Gillett.

Mr. Gillett was 61 years of age, and during the past two years had been in delicate health; but prior to that time he was unusually robust and was a splendid type of American manhood. His demise will be learned with profound regret by a host of friends throughout Canada and the United States. During the past 40 years he has been extensively engaged in manufacturing grocers' sundries. Owing to his untiring and energetic efforts, the business soon attained phenomenal proportions. He took a very active interest in commercial affairs, and held a number of prominent positions, one of which was president of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, Toronto. This position he had held since the inception of the company.

The deceased is survived by his widow and two children, C. W., of the firm of Gillett & Denniston, and Lillian M. He was a Presbyterian and was connected with the Second Presbyterian Church. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the family residence to Rosehill Cemetery.

SOLID ARTICLES MADE OF MILK.

The utilization of skim-milk in the production of a hard substance resembling horn or celluloid, to which the name "galalith" (milkstone) has been given, is described in the Sanitarian, which takes its facts from a recent report of the United States Consul-General at Coburg, Germany. Articles made of this new substance, which were shown at the hygienic milk-supply exhibition at Hamburg, included combs, seemingly made of horn, cigar-holders, with amber-colored mouthpieces; knives and forks, with handles similar in appearance to ebony; ferrules for umbrellas and sticks, and balls, rings, chess figures, dominoes, etc.; also a small table with an inlaid marble slab, and finally a number of thick slabs and staves with every imaginable variation of marble colors, but of considerably less weight than real marble.

BODE'S GUMS.

The first shipment of Bode's gums "Fleur-de-Lis" and "Pepsin" brands was made this week by Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, selling agents for Canada.

MR. S. W. EWING, MONTREAL.

WE have pleasure in presenting to our readers this week the portrait of S. W. Ewing, of Montreal, the newly elected chairman of the Manufacturing Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Mr. Ewing is a member of the firm of S. H. Ewing & Sons, Montreal, importers and manufacturers of coffees, spices, teas, corks, &c., having joined his father and brother in 1898. Previous to entering the present firm Mr. Ewing represented the dry goods firm of Gault Bros. & Co., in the district between Montreal and Toronto. He covered this territory for 13 years, which means that he is thoroughly well known to the trade.

His election to the chairmanship of such an important branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association is a compliment to the ability and interest Mr. Ewing has taken at all times in matters pertaining to his branch of the trade. As a presiding officer he is equally efficient. Mr. Ewing is a member of the Montreal Board of Trade, vice-president of the Junior Conservative Club, member of Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, St. George's Snow Shoe Club, the Antiquarian Society, and a number of other leading athletic and fraternal associations of Montreal, among others the Masonic Order, of which he is a thirty-second degree member.

BACK FROM WEST INDIES.

E. H. COOPER, Montreal, secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who has lately returned from a trip to the West Indies and British Guiana, is convinced that there is an opening in those countries for many of the products and manufactures of Canada.

"Canadian goods," says Mr. Cooper, "if suitable to their requirements, are welcomed by the West Indian people more than those from any other country. We are the only ones who give them a preference in our market, and I could easily see that it was appreciated. Our first and greatest need, however, if we are to work up a trade, is an up-to-date and thoroughly competent steamship service between a Canadian port and the Islands. At present a West Indian merchant ordering goods in Canada may expect a delay of a couple of months occasionally before receiving them, while if he places his order in New York, a few days suffices for delivery of the goods. A large quantity of our exports are now shipped via New York on this account. I saw some 30,000 or 40,000 barrels of sugar on the wharves at Demerara en route for Canada, and not one of them was to be shipped via a Canadian port.

"Canada's products stand high in the estimation of the West Indian people—almost too high in fact, for the price of many of our exports to the Islands is beyond the reach of a very large percentage of the population. One scarcely likes to advise Canadian manufacturers to go into the making of cheap stuff instead of the first-class goods, but there is a big trade to be done in many cheap lines. The Americans already appreciate this fact, and are supplying the West Indies with articles at prices required. They are often of miserable quality, but they answer the purpose. As an example, one merchant showed me an American made boot, which he cut in two, from toe to heel, to show its quality. The uppers were leather and there was a thin piece of leather on sole and heel. The rest was some paper composition. A small chip of wood was placed in the instep to keep the boot in shape. These boots were selling at 4s. a pair, and large quantities of them are taken, principally by the negroes. Of course, we can sell our best goods there to a certain extent but the cheaper class, providing they are of sufficiently suitable quality, are in much greater demand.

"In flour also cheap grades sell best. There is a big market in the Islands and Guiana for our flour, which already has an excellent reputation. It will keep as perfectly as any other flour, despite the statements to the contrary of persons interested in introducing foreign brands on that market. Americans are our chief competitors there, and they watch the market very closely through their Consuls.

"We have made a very good beginning in the matter of butter, as our exporters have adopted the proper method of putting it up in tins. In fact Canadian butter is very well liked. There is great room for improvement, however, in our exports of other canned goods for which there will undoubtedly be a ready and increasingly large market in the West Indies.

"With cheese we have not been successful, for the curious reason that our product is too good. Its flavor is much admired by West India people, and if it would keep well we could easily capture the West Indian trade in that line. Our cheese, however, 'sweats,' becomes oily on top, and is very unsatisfactory. The Islanders use the white 'Dutch' cheese, which in that climate keeps firm and in good condition, though it is almost tasteless, as compared with the Canadian product. Some method of packing should be devised to overcome this drawback.

"I found during my visit quite a widespread feeling for annexation with Canada. Many people think this would be the most satisfactory arrangement possible for the progress and prosperity of the Islands. One gentleman said he already looked upon the Indies as the 'Southern States' of Canada."

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions

New and Old Designs.

THERE is relatively little room for creative work in window trims. The novice will soon discover that the best and easiest way is to select an idea and elaborate it. Starting at random without a well-defined idea must, in the nature of things, produce chaotic results. Think out your scheme before you start. The window-dresser, like the painter and sculptor, to whose work his own is akin, should first make a mental sketch of what he wishes to convey, and let his fingers carry out what his mind has conceived. Ideas, of course, will be sure to come to him that will suggest trifling departure from the original conception, and most often are an improvement, yet, in the main the original designs should be adhered to.

SIMPLICITY IS THE KEY.

You must think, plan, arrange and rearrange, mindful that simplicity is the foundation of good taste. Intricate combinations are to be avoided for they tire the eye and distract attention. On the other hand, a simple display, not crowded, rests the eye and invites it to linger. Do not rest content with the idea that seems to satisfy so many window-dressers, that all the changes have been rung, and there is nothing new. There are fertile fields that have never been tilled, and in window display there are fertile fields as yet untouched that will bring grand results for those who turn the first sod.

HELPS ARE HANDY.

So many and varied are the resources to aid the trimmer in his work that there is absolutely no excuse (except the penuriousness of one's employer) for an inartistic window. Whereas a few years ago the window-dresser had to adapt his goods to fixtures, now he can get fixtures to suit any particular class of goods.

WINDOW CARDS.

Cards in your window are a great help. Be your own card writer. Rubber letters can be had for a moderate cost, or buy a little asphaltum and a camels hair brush, 15c. will cover the cost, and print them. You, who are not adepts at making letters can obtain paste board letters for almost nothing; they are easily traced on your card and fill in with asphaltum. Catchy hints appeal to all. Priceing your articles you have in the window is a good idea.

A Cigar Corner.

So many grocers are now handling cigars that a section of the interior and an occasional window trim must be devoted to them. There is good profit in the sales made, and it is a stock that can be neatly arranged and that takes up little room. Everybody has seen the elaborate cigarette box displays that are shown in the windows of city cigar stores, which afford great plans and catchy designs. In fact in the grocery store it is seldom necessary to devote an entire trim to these goods; a little stacking in one corner, or in the background will advertise the fact that you handle tobacco and cigars.

The corner shown is from the store of Michie & Co., Toronto, and is a good example of how compactly and attractively stocks of cigars can be shown. The corner situated under the office, which is in a sort of gallery on one side of the store, overlooking the entire interior. The different lines are shown in a show case, where cigars and labels can be readily exposed without dust reaching them. Everything is ready to hand and no time is wasted in waiting on a customer.

In considering these prices it should be remembered that January is mid-Summer in Australia.

A "LITTLE" FOX.

Then there was another jolly grocer, who is fond of good things to eat and is given to being a very social, good-natured chap. But he has "a little fox, that spoils the vine," in a bad habit of always smoking in the store. Recently, a good customer of his took back a delicate article of food into which this grocer had let drop the ashes from the cigar he was smoking. That fellow doesn't realize how tobacco smoke permeates every part of the store, working irreparable injury to goods that are very susceptible to flavor, such as tea, butter, salt, three articles given to absorbing every foreign flavor within a long distance. He wants to set fox traps.

Hawkes & Barker, general merchants, Whitewood, dissolved partnership on March 1. Mr. Barker continues in business.

HINTS ON RETAILING COFFEE.

By C. J. Rahming.

OWING to the extremely low prices which prevail on green coffees and the fact that high prices on roasted coffees, to the consumer, have been maintained, the selling of roasted coffee has been for several years a most inviting business, because of the apparent large profits to be obtained. Competition, therefore, has grown very rapidly, being especially sharp in the large cities. Many new roasting plants have sprung up all over the country, all seeking a market for their output, and the retail grocer has been the most desirable factor sought as the final distributor. The consequence is, the retail grocer has a large part of his time taken up listening to the numerous arguments of the representatives, so called, of the many coffee roasters, who all have the best coffee for the least money, wonderful blends, trade winners, business makers, etc., etc., all trying to sell a can of coffee and get a wedge in. The retail grocer find it harded to say, "No" each day, as the said representative (who often misrepresents) gets into his good graces.

Unfortunately, there is too much sentiment with the retail grocer in his coffee buying, just where he should use the best judgment, and the consequence is, he maintains no standard of coffee, and has on hand most of the time too large a stock of this perishable article. Roasted coffee should be bought only as needed, as it quickly loses its good qualities, and, to get the best results, should be brought from one good house, that maintains a line of standards, roasted for their drinking qualities.

The grocer should never be tempted to buy coffee because something for nothing is offered him, in the way of a fancy can or other fixtures that he doesn't need, but thinks he wants. He should also distinguish between a scheme and a selling idea when he buys his coffee. A selling idea in connection with roasted coffee is something that will attract and hold a customer, and is worth what it costs, while a scheme is something thrown in with the coffee, that costs more than it is worth, as it is usually too expensive to be given away without the standard being lowered, and also because it will not increase the consumer's demand.

Don't buy your coffee to favor some salesman, at your expense. Salesmen who pretent to match a roasted coffee by looking at it are the ones to beware of, as roasted blends cannot be valued by appearance, but should be judged only by their drinking quality. The best drinking coffees are not always the best in appearance. Buy coffees for cup quality; not for style.

The most successful coffee retailers are those who confine their sales to a uniform line of coffees, that is, standards at the various prices sold, and, unless you are a judge of coffees, it is better to give your entire business to some reliable house that maintains this line of standards. You cannot buy coffee from all the roasters that come to see you, and hope to maintain anything like uniform grades of coffee. You must place your confidence in someone, and have him buy your coffees for you. If your business is not large enough to employ an expert coffee man, the best way is to employ the expert coffee man of some roaster, and this can be done by assuring said roaster that you will confine your purchases to him just so long as your trade grows in pounds and profits.

You should always see that your coffee is displayed in a favorable part of your store, and that it is sent out to your customers in an attractive bag that bears the name of your own brand, thereby identifying the brand with your store, so that it cannot be purchased elsewhere. This helps to hold business for you, providing your coffees are of satisfactory drinking quality.

Don't change your roaster for every complaint that you get on your coffees. Remember that many complaints are the fault of the person in making the coffee, or perhaps the fault is in your grinding it, that you do not get your coffee of a uniform fineness, or as the customer desires. Or, perhaps, you grind your high grade coffees after you have been grinding some low grade stuff, without seeing that your mill is thoroughly cleaned. This frequently causes complaints on high grade coffees. But, if the complaints are of such a nature that you cannot explain, refer them to the roaster before changing, and then the cause can be easily remedied.

You must have confidence in the quality of the coffee you are selling in order to inspire it in others, and you must also have enthusiasm, and enthusiasm cannot be had unless you first have confidence.

Your order clerks must be impressed with the necessity of always asking for coffee business, and you must remember each day that it is the most important

PURE GOLD TALK.

No. 8.

For a manufacturing company to get "cold feet," to use an expressive term, is to announce to the trade its decline. For ourselves, we have never felt that "cold feet" was descriptive of us. Part of our business is the origination of new things of the specialty order—things that are inexpensive, yet which, by virtue of their usefulness and desirability in every home, are consumed very generally. This results in a very nice and profitable trade for the grocer—a trade in an entirely new line.

A recent illustration of this inventiveness on our part is QUICK PUDDINGS.

These are 10-cent packages, and are to be had in a variety of flavors—Chocolate, Custard, Arrowroot, Tapioca, Lemon, etc.

For any season they are good. It gives the grocer a stronger hold upon the household account to be able to solve the dinner table problems quickly and economically.

And just because these packages bear the name PURE GOLD no questions are asked or required as to the merit of the article.

part of your business, and, therefore, more people are after it.

Stick to a line of standards that are purchased from some one house, as long as your business grows. Be satisfied, by drinking them yourself, that your coffees are all right, and then remember them every day, and talk them at every opportunity, and you will find that your coffee business will have nothing to fear from competition.—The Spice Mill.

MONTREAL RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held on Wednesday, March 2nd, at Monument National. A large number of members attended among whom were noticed N. Chartrand, president; E. Linoge, vice-president; J. A. Beaudry, secretary, J. A. Maynard, treasurer; Aldermen Turner, Larieviere, Paquin, and Lapointe, T. Bergeron, J. A. Labonte, J. B. Deschamps, A. O. Galarneau, T. Brossard, G. Boisvert, E. Masse, N. Sequin, A. Gervais, T. M. Taylor, J. A. Dore, Z. Colpron, J. A. Dionne, E. Upton, H. Hartel, and H. Hofmann.

President N. Chartrand occupied the chair. After the minutes of the previous meeting and those of the Executive had been read and approved, the following gentlemen were, on motion of J. B. Deschamps, seconded by T. Brossard, elected active members of the association: V. Paquin, J. A. Piquettes, A. A. Gagnier, P. Sequin and J. E. Harel, and the following elected as auxiliary members: N. Martin O. Rousseau and J. Z. Ducharme.

On motion of G. Boisvert, seconded by N. Perras, the report of the treasurer was adopted.

A lively discussion ensued on the early closing movement, as to whether Wednesday or Thursday evening should be selected. On motion of E. Limoges, seconded by A. Bastian it was decided to postpone the settlement of this question until the next meeting, when the question would come first in the order of business.

It was moved by J. B. Deschamps, seconded by A. O. Galarneau:

"That the Montreal Grocers' Association wishing to come to an understanding with the wholesale grocers upon the question of supplying consumers, be it resolved that a copy of the following agreement be sent to the local wholesale Grocers' Association who will hold their meeting on the first Friday of the month, in order to give the wholesale grocers time to discuss the matter before the president and secretary of the Retail Grocers' Association call on their respective members for their signature."

Resolution for signatures of wholesale grocers:

"Taking into consideration the complaints of the retail grocers of the City of Montreal, we, the undersigned wholesale grocers and importers of the City of Montreal, hereby engage ourselves with the Montreal Grocers' Association here represented by its duly authorized president and secretary, not to sell any goods to consumers, that is to say, private families, boarding houses temperance restaurants, nor to any relation or employe, nor to any merchant in the City of Montreal who is not in the grocery business, with exception of departmental stores. We, however, reserve the right to sell to religious communities, railroad and navigation companies, hotelkeepers, licensed restaurants and drug stores, but only for the personal use of these companies and communities, and for the commercial ends of licensed restaurants, hotels and drug stores, but never for the personal use of their employes.

"We also bind ourselves to have our respective names on every one of our delivery wagons, or if we employ any special delivery agency, to make the names known to the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association.

"This agreement to remain binding upon us until such time as we are relieved by resolution to that effect by the Montreal Grocers' Association, or after 30 days' notice on our part to abrogate this agreement has been given in writing to the secretary of the Montreal Grocers' Association.

"We, the undersigned, having duly considered the terms and conditions of the above agreement, hereunto affix our respective signatures for the faithful performance of said terms and conditions."

The next meeting of the association will be held on April 6th at Monument National.

Reply of the Montreal wholesale grocers to the secretary of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association to the above:

Montreal, March 5th, 1904.

Mr. J. A. Beaudry,
Secretary Montreal Grocers' Association, Montreal.

Dear Sir—At a meeting of the Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Association held yesterday your letter of the 3rd inst. was taken into serious consideration and though being desirous of being agreeable our association regrets exceedingly its inability to accede to your demands.

ARGUMENT.

We now offer a practical time piece for the Grocery Trade of Canada and base our statement upon the following:

First—It is absolutely guaranteed to keep accurate time.

Second—It stands rough usage and does not get out of order easily, making it the only watch for dealers outside of the jewelery trade to handle, and also making it a practical one for sportsmen, boys and all men who give a watch hard usage.

Third—Its low price and high quality insure a tremendous sale, which we further augment by furnishing many handsome advertising devices for your store.

Fourth—Last but not least, these watches offer a handsome profit. Price cutters are not supplied.

Sold by several leading Grocery Jobbers of Canada. We will tell you who they are upon request.

Trial Offer—To any Grocery Dealer who will write to us upon his business letter head and inclose 75c. we will send a sample watch (duty not paid) and our catalogue, so that he can test its accuracy and durability.

The Best Are the Cheapest

For twenty years the National Cash Register Company has made the announcement that it could sell a better cash register for less money than any other concern in the world. We have never failed to do this in a single case.

We are the originators of cash registers and have naturally been the target of all other cash register companies. In the face of this competition we did a larger business last year than ever before. This was because our 365,000 users were well satisfied with their "Nationals."

Over two hundred concerns have failed in the cash register business because they could not furnish a cash register without infringing some of our 895 patents.

Some merchants are led to purchase low-grade cash registers by misrepresentation. Later they find they will not give satisfaction. If you are interested in a low-priced machine, don't buy till you see our agent. We guarantee to sell cheaper than anybody else.

FIVE THINGS TO REMEMBER. A "National" takes care of

1. Cash Sales. 2. Credit Sales. 3. Money Received on Account. 4. Money Paid Out. 5. Changing Money.

We employ 1,400 salesmen. If you would like further information, send in attached coupon. Our agent will then call. This puts you under no obligation whatever to buy.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

The Farmer as a Customer.

DOES the farmer read advertisements? Does water run down hill? The farmer's trade is worth having and therefore worth cultivating. He is more responsive to advertising than are townspeople. He takes more time to read his paper and he reads it more thoroughly. He earns his money more slowly, and spends it with greater caution. His table is spread more bountifully and his appetite is more hearty. True, he is a producer of his own food to a large extent, but he is a consumer of no mean sort, and as such is worth having as a customer. But the farmer is a practical man and likes practical advertising. He likes business news expressed in figures. Fine writing, and self-adulation are not what he wants. Straight business talk pleases him best.

The farmer is inclined to be suspicious. His purchases as compared with those of the townsman are few in number, and each transaction is likely to be deliberate. His oft-repeated question is: "Is that the best you can do?" and if he is satisfied with the merchant's integrity, he may become a prompt buyer.

The farmer's wife equally with her husband, is influenced by advertising Her purchasing powers are more limited than those of her husband; her money or produce must provide her with a multitude of little things, and price counts with her. Therefore she likes to know what things cost. Even more than how they measure as to quality. The merchant who regularly provides helpful price suggestions does better advertising than he who talks about the surpassing excellence of his stock and service—not that these features of a merchant's business are to be belittled or underrated. It must be confessed that from the farmer's point of view and that of his wife much advertising is empty and idle.

The farmer and his wife are susceptible to a little gracious attention. They get less of it than do townspeople for they see fewer people. It follows that the merchant who cultivates the farmer and his wife finds a responsive interest that is fruitful of business. One way to pursue this work of cultivation is to use His Majesty's mail service. A letter or a circular or a post card sent out not only to one's regular customers but to those whom one desires as customers, will assuredly result in business. It costs money to send out letters, cards and circulars, but it is a very fair subject for enquiry to investigate what it is costing not to send out these messsages of good will and business news. The voters' lists provide the names of hundreds of possible customers, and furnish addresses accurate and plentiful for any merchant who has both courage and faith to use printers' ink, stationery, and postage stamps.

Too many merchants content themselves with the business that comes to them unsought. In effect they regard their constituency as consisting of a few hundreds of families. If they get a new customer it is "luck." To enlarge the list of customers by inviting people to deal with them is too uncertain, according to their judgment, to warrant the effort. Merchants of this class are found everywhere. Every little while one hears of the awakening of some of this class to a knowledge of their own lethargy, and once in a while one hears of a transformation in slothful merchants--a transformation that expresses itself in energy, energy that expresses itself in its turn in a determination to do more business by going after more business.

Farmers' business is good business; it doesn't fluctuate as does town business, and is not influenced by church and social connections. It is business that can be made to yield a good volume of trade to the merchant who deliberately and persistently cultivates it, through advertising in a way well pleasing to farmers and their wives, and by talking with and to them on purely business matters through the mails.

That THE CANADIAN GROCER is a most valuable advertising medium for those who seek the trade of the grocers and general storekeepers of Canada is as plain as day—yet some folks can't see it.

Like the man who was looking all over the house for his glasses when they were on his forehead, there be some who are looking for more business among grocers yet can't see that the easiest and cheapest way to get it is through advertising in THE GROCER.

And as long as they won't listen to nor see the reasonableness of our arguments in favor of their advertising in THE GROCER, just so long are they going to be denied the business that GROCER subscribers are continually sending to GROCER advertisers.

GREEN FRUITS

Nova Scotia Fruit Industry.

AN exchange says the Nova Scotia Government exhibit at Crystal Palace, London, this year has been of more practical benefit to the Nova Scotia fruit industry than are the big and expensive shows held from time to time in the United States, and one broker wrote his customers here that after it had been set up and favorably commented on by English and European papers the price of Nova Scotia apples advanced from 1s. to 2c. per barrel. We do not increase our sales or benefit the industry by exhibiting apples in the United States, while they impose a tariff on them amounting to prohibition of nearly $1 per barrel, and the large amounts expended on apple shows at World's Fairs and Pan-American shows were practically wasted. As over half the crop has already been sold in England at good prices it may fairly be estimated that the proceeds from apples this year will be over $1,000,000, more than all the other exported agricultural products of Nova Scotia combined.

Poor Outlook for the 1904 Fruit Crop.

AN authority on fruit growing reports that the fruit prospects for the coming season in the vicinity of the Niagara peninsula are anything but promising.

As a result of the extremely cold Winter the peach trees will not only have their fruit buds killed, but the trees in many cases have been killed. Even the pear, which is considered hardy, will lose most of the fruit buds and much of the new growth of wood. Some of the grape buds are killed, and the tender blackberries are all dead, even below the snow line. Cherries seem to be all right, and strawberries that are covered may pull through, although they have three or four inches of ice on them even on the high land, under the snow. The frost has gone much deeper than six years ago, when so many fruit trees were killed throughout all the fruit districts. Last year was the plum season, but what buds there are on the trees seem to be all right. It is not expected the apple crop will be large, as there have been two large crops following each other.

Canned Apples.

CANNED apples in one gallon tins are in good demand but fault has been found with Canadian goods on account of certain firms putting different varieties of apples in the same tin. Some varieties cook much faster than others. Another complaint is that packers apparently use "cull fruit" and have not sufficient fruit in the tins, the goods being turned "sloppy."

Only the best grades should be exported if we wish to hold, or increase our trade with Great Britain as there is keen competition from all parts of the world for the British markets. The United States, France, Germany, Italy, and Australian Commonwealth and New Zealand are shipping heavy lines of canned goods. During cool seasons like the past two, only the best grades are in demand. It is during hot weather when cooking becomes a burden, that people turn to canned goods.

Great care should be taken with goods packed in glass that all roughness is ground off the necks of bottles before they are filled as pieces of glass have been found in the contents and a prejudice created against goods put up in glass.

Canadian Apples in Leeds Market.

The Leeds Mercury says: "During the past few years Canadian apples have found a ready market in this country, and Leeds has received a fair proportion of the supply. It is a striking tribute to the quality of the fruit that although the supply of late has been in excess of the demand, prices have slightly increased. For cooking purposes Northern Spies are strongly recommended; whilst Baldwins and Greenings are also very good. There is very little difference in the price of these varieties, one and a half pence to three pence a pound being the general charge. Newton Pippins and Golden Russets are excellent dessert apples. Owing to the splendid quality of apples from the Dominion, the demand for those from New York has suffered considerably."

Apple Growers Get Together.

IN order to improve the unsatisfactory methods for the marketing of apples, which have prevailed for years in certain sections of Western Ontario, the apple growers of Ilderton met a few days ago and organized an association for the co-operative packing, selling and shipping of apples.

Many claim to have suffered at the hands of buyers and others have received such incomplete and unsatisfactory sales accounts and cash returns from individual experimental shipments to the British market that they have almost been reduced to the extremity of cutting down their orchards and using the ground for other purposes.

According to the new scheme, by beginning in a small way and expanding each year, the same fruit growers hope to be able not only to handle orchard produce more economically, but to apply co-operation to spraying orchards, making barrels and boxes for shipping, buying new nursery stock, etc. It is believed that this is the beginning of a movement that will soon spread over all fruit districts in Ontario and that the results will be that the orchard will have once more a very profitable part of the farm.

British Columbia Apples in Britain.

Some excellent samples of British Columbia apples have reached this country of late in the form of small trial shipments," says the Fruit Grower, of London Eng., in a recent issue. "One lot was disposed of at Liverpool, one at Glasgow and finally one came to London. Both realized very satisfactory prices. Samples of the fruits submitted were of excellent quality and in sound condition."

An English View of the Apple Trade.

A MONTREAL exchange gives an interesting review of the Canadian apple trade with Great Britain. It points out that late shipments arrived in good condition and sold well. According to several of the trade, however, it would pay shippers to use boxes instead of barrels for the better kinds of apples, particularly such fancy varieties as Kings and Blenheims. In this way it would be possible to avoid the bruisings which make such a vast difference in the price of dessert fruit.

A leading authority on fruit growing is quoted to the effect that it would not pay to buy Canadian apples for cider making, unless an exceptional season, such as the last, when there was a general shortage of apples in Great Britain.

Very favorable reports as to this season's shipments have been heard on all sides. At the annual meeting of the Dundee fruit merchants, the president referred in eulogistic terms to the improvements which have been effected in the packing and grading of Canadian fruit since the Dominion Government had taken the matter in hand and the Fruit Division had exercised their active and well directed supervision. This expression of opinion is endorsed in other market centres.

Protection for Fruit Growers.

Henceforth, by order of the Government, all vendors of nursery stock within the bounds of British Columbia must, before doing business, take out a license and agree to conform to the regulations of the Provincial Board of Horticulture.

This action has been brought about indirectly as a result of irresponsible agents being permitted to roam about the country distributing spurious and unsuitable stock. Fruit growers have been "bitten" once too often, and now they have retorted. It is hoped the stringent measures taken will insure a larger measure of protection to fruit growers than has existed in the past.

Apples From Tasmania.

IN 1903 Tasmania shipped over 300,000 cases of apples to England; in 1904 she will export over 400,000 cases, in addition to 100,000 cases to be shipped to the other States of the Commonwealth.

Twenty large steamers have been engaged for the conveyance of fruit—principally apples—to England, at an average freight rate of 65s. per ton measurement. Fifteen steamers will go to London, and five to Liverpool. The apples are packed in cold storage at a temperature of about 44 degrees F. Packing is made in cases measuring 20x 15x10 inches, and contents average about 40 pounds.

Grain Carriage by Rail.

GRAIN is now carried from the West to the Atlantic coast by rail both in the United States and in Canada. It must be admitted, however, that where climatic conditions permit water routes have the call for the grain trade. The great lakes have proved the great natural channel for export breadstuffs from both sides of the line. Their supremacy in this department of commerce has been so well established, few transportation experts hazard to suggest that a railroad ever could successfully compete with the lake propellor. Mr. John Charlton is the veteran in this regard. During the debate upon the Grand Trunk Pacific at the last session of the Canadian Commons, Mr. Charlton quoted a railway expert in support of his contention that with easy grades, long curves and heavy rolling stock a railroad could profitable compete with a water route in grain carriage.

An unexpected and most valuable endorsement of Mr. Charlton's claims have since been made by no less distinguished a gentleman than Sir Sandford Fleming, the surveyor of the Intercolonial, for years chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific, and now on the board of directors of that railroad.

Sir Sandford's reason for endorsing the construction of a railroad on the northern route was "Because a railway built on the northern route would be the shortest line between the two oceans, besides being the most direct for the products of the northern half of the farming region to the nearest Canadian shipping ports. By establishing on the northern route a modern, first-class railway, devoid of gradients and every other hindrance to cheap transportation, Canada would possess the means of carrying these products to the Canadian tidal ports at all seasons of the year at less cost than by any other route whatsoever. Owing to the reduced total mileage, and still more owing to the reduced graidents on the new line, grain may be carried to Quebec by the direct route at less cost than by the southern route, even if it were carried almost free of charge across the lakes from Fort William to Depot Harbor, Owen Sound or Sarnia. This, of course, only applies to the half-year of open navigation. During the other half year the northern route would be without a rival worthy of the name."

Russia's Cereal Crops of 1903.

According to official statistics the crop of cereals in the 72 governments and districts of European and Asiatic Russia for 1903, is estimated at 1,720,448,392 bushels as against 1,832,590,755 bushels for 1902, as follows:

American Exports.

FLOUR exports from the United States in 1903, says the New England Grocer, were larger than in any preceding year in the history of its commerce and aggregated practically 20,000,000 barrels. The value of the flour exports also exceeded that of any preceding year, with the exceptions of 1892 and 1893, when the value slightly exceeded that of 1903, but the quantity exported was materially less. The total number of barrels of flour exported from the United States in the fiscal year 1903 was 19,716,634, valued at $73,756,404, while in 1893 the number of barrels was 16,620,339, but the value was $75,494,347, prices of that year being materially higher than those of 1903.

In the calendar year 1903, ending with the month of December, the total exports of flour amounted to 19,551,411 barrels, valued at $75,188,050. This calendar year statement gives the very latest figures of flour exports, and a comparison of these figures with the wheat exports of the calendar year indicates that considerably more than one half of the wheat exported in the calendar year 1903 was turned into flour before exportation. The total value of the wheat exports of the calendar year 1903 was $59,329,441, and that of the flour exports, $75,188,050.

A study of the wheat exportations of the United States during a long term of years discloses some very interesting facts. Prior to the development of the great wheat fields of the United States, which occurred subsequent to 1860 a very large proportion of the surplus wheat of the country was exported in the form of flour. From 1790 to 1860 no instance occurs in which the exports of wheat equaled in value those of flour. Beginning with 1861, however, wheat exports exceeded in value those of flour, and this was also constantly the case down to 1890. Since that time, however, flour exports have on many occasions materially exceeded in value those of wheat, though in years of large crops the unusual surplus naturally found its way abroad in the form of wheat, since the capacity of the mills could not conform to the annual fluctuations in production. The growth in flour exportation has therefore been steady, while that of wheat not turned into flour has fluctuated with the surplus crop available for exportation.

Bread Will Not Go Up.

The price of bread will not be advanced in Toronto unless the wheat market takes a further rise in the very near future. The master bakers and confectioners having decided at their last meeting, owing to the erratic condition of the wheat market, to postpone taking any definite action for the present.

A Flemish artist has wasted some time in producing a picture of a miller mounting the stairs of his mill and carrying a sack of grain on his back. The mill is depicted as standing near a terrace. Close at hand are a horse and cart, with a few groups of peasants idling in the road near by. All this is painted on the smooth side of a grain of ordinary white corn and can be seen only by the use of a microscope. It does not cover a half-inch square, and while otherwise remarkable is said to be the smallest painting in existence.

The Wheat Fields of Manchuria.

APART from present considerations, Manchuria is a valuable asset for any nation to have within its grasp. It has an immense area of fertile soil and natural resources, only partially developed. In area it is equal to that portion of North America lying between Chicago and the mouth of the Saskatchewan River.

The Sungari valley seems to be especially adapted tothe production of wheat, says Henry B. Miller, U. S. Consul at Niuchwang. Spring wheat only is grown and the yield is 30 bushels per acre. The wheat is not sown broadcast, but is planted like Indian corn in Canada, and is cultivated and hoed during the growing season. Famine and bad crops are almost unknown.

Extensive growing of wheat in Manchuria has been delayed by the lack of machinery to convert the grain into salable flour. The introduction of modern machinery in place of the primitive mills is effecting a wonderful transformation in the character of the crops.

Harbin, the present centre of the flouring mill industry of Manchuria, is destined to become a second Minneapolis. It is situated in the heart of the valley of the Sungari, with water transportation both from the wheat fields and to the sea. In 1900 the place did not contain a single flour mill and now it has ten, with a daily capacity of 5,000 barrels. The mills are making a profit of 15 to 45 cents on every 100 pounds of grain ground, and are putting their earnings into enlargements of their plants.

Even at the low price of 37 cents gold per bushel paid by the mills, wheat is now the most profitable crop and will be grown in increasing quantities as fast as the mills require it. At the rate at which the production of flour is expanding it will be only a few years until Manchuria will supply the Chinese market with more flour than is now consumed, and unless the Chinese eat more under a higher standard of living, a considerable surplus may be available for export to Europe.

Siberia, because of the high altitudes of its southern portion and of the great distance of its agricultural areas from water transportation, is unlikely ever to become a great source of supply for the world's markets, but Manchuria may well become an extremely awkward competitor for the future grain and flour market in China and Japan.

Flour Scarce in Moncton.

FLOUR and oatmeal continue scarce in Moncton, principally on account of the congested state of traffic on the western railways, in consequence of the heavy storms. There is a fair supply of Manitoba flour with some of the wholesale houses, but there is a stringency in the stock of Ontario brands. The lack of the ordinary supply of Ontario flour is due especially to the impediment to traffic on railroads west of Montreal. In several cases, flour that was shipped nearly a month ago, is still on the way. Carloads are taken by the western railways for shipment, but there is no assurance of the time of delivery owing to the present condition of the roads. The effect on the market here is expected to continue for the greater part of March, and, perhaps even longer. For some time will elapse before the improved conditions of the western railroads will be felt here.

A wholesale dealer says there are several reasons for the present high price of flour in the East. In former years the Western farmer was obliged to dispose of his wheat earlier in the season as he was not in a position to hold it. Now he is less dependent. He can await the conditions of the market holding the grain himself as well as companies owning elevators. The effect of the war on the Russian shipments of wheat has also contributed largely to the present state of the market which has also been affected by subsequent manipulations of the market by speculators. Then there are the temporary difficulties in transportation.

The general condition of the market is not expected to undergo any marked change until Summer when the outlook for a new crop may be taken into consideration. But it is doubted in some quarters, however, if flour will again go down to the price of last Fall. It took a rise then which was maintained and followed by further advances.

American Flour in Brazil.

Through the activities of the United States Minister, says the Flour Trade News, the Government of Brazil has been induced to grant preferential rates on several lines of staple American products imported in Brazil. Besides several other things, the new arrangement gives preferential rates to flour in barrels, 32 per cent.; flour in sacks, 20 per cent. Six or seven years ago the United States exported to Brazil 1,800,000 barrels of flour per annum, but this export has decreased to about 500,000 barrels per annum owing to the excessive duty. This duty is now reduced through the preferential rates just granted and there is now a boundless market open to millers and flour exporters in Brazil and American flour exporters are being urged to take advantage of the opportunity.

Importing Canadian Oats.

"Some idea of the great scarcity of oats in this market lately," says the Flour Trade News of New York, "may be gathered from the fact that 50,000 bushels of Canadian oats were bought for local consumption at 55 to 60c. a bushel, duty paid. As the duty is 15 cents, it makes the price equal to 40 to 45c., whereas domestic oats of similar grade are worth 58 to 60c. It is therefore evident that we need not expect to sell oats for export."

Barley in Demand.

Of late there has been a large demand in the Orient for foodstuffs. At the present the principal demand of Japan has been for barley. The Japanese feed their horses barley instead of oats, and have lately been leaving orders with Canadian firms to fill. On the Empress of China, which sailed for the Orient a week or ten days ago, 500 tons of this grain was shipped, and on the Athenian, when she leaves Vancouver in a few weeks hence, another shipment of 1,000 tons will go forward. In addition to these consignments negotiations have been in progress during the last few days for the charter of a steamer to load a cargo of barley on the sound.

New Industry for Toronto Junction.

A. Campbell, miller, Toronto Junction, is about to increase the capacity of his mill from 700 to 1,000 barrels. He will also build an addition to his present plant for the production of oatmeal and cornmeal. Mr. Campbell expects the new industry will require in the neighborhood of 100,000 bushels of grain yearly.

Cereal Notes.

The American Miller learns that the acreage of macaroni wheat in Nebraska, Western Kansas and Oklahoma, will be greater this year than last.

Grand Rapids, Mich., now requires all packages of flour to be marked with the net weight, but execution of the law has been suspended until the flour on hand shall have been disposed of.

Cigarette Tobacco in Italy.

ABOUT ten years ago a large demand was created for Oriental tobacco in Italy, which suggested to the government a series of experiments, in order to ascertain whether it was possible to produce such tobaccos at home instead of importing them. Conditions of soil and climate were favorable. The main difficulty from the first, however, was with native husbandmen, accustomed from generation to generation to a certain style of cultivation of tobacco, who rebelled against the introduction of new methods for the successful propogation of new varieties.

As a result of continuous experiment, however, a code of regulations was drawn up, in which was given all possible information as to how the Oriental plants were to be reared, and land-owners were invited to take note of the conditions offered by the Government, the cultivation of the American leaf being restricted so that the farmer had no longer the option of continuing the cultivation of the qualities he had raised in former years. The department offered to supply all seeds, which were to be sown at a stated time according to directions. Careful treatment of the seedling plant was required, and the most scrupulous attention to its later cultivation was enjoined. During the whole time of the rearing of the plant, the producer was exposed to surprise visits at all times. Inspectors removed any defective or worthless leaves, burning them immediately; while the farmer was prohibited from removing a leaf from a plant on any pretext whatever.

At the ripening of the crop it was to be bundled, dried and carried to the government classifying offices, where the producer was paid first the price of the leaves, and later, on further examination, a premium on the results. The necessity for this superfine discrimination arises from the fact that leaves grown near the ground level are more rank and do not possess the pure aroma required for first-class tobacco, while those closest to the flower are found to be too rich in nicotine, the best leaves being from the middle growth of the plant.

For the 1903 crop, requests were permitted for the cultivation of 40,000,000 plants of the Oriental qualities alone, while proposals for 16,500,000 more had to be refused, for the reason that the government premises were not sufficiently extensive to handle more than that quantity of tobacco. The Oriental product is used, mixed with imported tobacco, in the manufacture of cigarettes of various kinds. It is estimated that the 1903 crop will give 125 to 130 tons of Oriental tobacco, hardly sufficient for one month's requirement of the country. Consequently it has not been possible so far to issue a cigarette made exclusively of native-grown tobacco.

The Origin of Meerschaum.

IT may interest the smoker to to know that the bowl of his favorite pipe is nothing more nor less than a chunk of hydrated silicate of magnesium, a fragment of sea-foam from the bowels of the earth of Asia Minor, and is so common that the boys of Morocco use it for soap, while in Madrid it is used as building material.

Meerschaum has been dug from the ground around Eski Shehier for more than one thousand years, where there is apparently an inexhaustible supply. In one district over 8000 mines have been opened, and in another, over 20,000. The yearly output of these mines is estimated at 200 tons. Meerschaum is found in a layer of red clay from 25 to 180 feet beneath the surface. Primeval methods are still used for digging out the commodity. Miners work down with pickaxes and shovels until the red clay is reached; then they proceed to build tunnels in all directions from which the blocks of meerschaum, scattered through the clay and varying from the

The "nam-tash," which is the native name for meerschaum, is white with a yellow tint, and very soft. This is first thoroughly dried, then rubbed with wax and carefully wrapped in cotton before being packed for shipment. Most of the raw material goes to Vienna where it is worked up into the fine pipes which are the delight of smokers the world over. The process of manufacture is extremely simple, pipe bowls after being turned or carved, are polished and then boiled in wax or some preparation of paraffin. A second polishing follows, after which they are ready for the coloring process—and who has not experienced with the latter?

The only kind of mouth piece for use with a meerschaum pipe is amber. Its origin is principally the shores of the Baltic Sea, where the fossilized gum is dug out, sometimes 100 feet below the surface. The amber blocks are sawed into pieces suitable for pipe stems by an extremely thin saw. These are then placed in a foot-power lathe and drilled and twisted into the requisite shape by expert workmen.

A. Michaels' Cigar Store, Montreal.

A Model Modern Cigar Store.

WE publish to-day a view of one of Montreal's most prominent and conspicuous cigar and tobacco stores, that of A. Michaels, north-east corner of Notre Dame and McGill streets. Outside of the fact that the location of the store on such a prominent corner is in itself a feature, the establishment is the more noticeable on account of the very attractive and business-drawing window displays arranged by Mr. Michaels and his staff. Changes are made weekly, sometimes oftener, and passers-by are attracted by the price cards and their appropriate wording. Variety is not lacking, but the general arrangement of the goods is such that one is involuntarily attached to them. The interior is conveniently arranged, the furnishings being in oak, and the "silent salesmen" counters display pipes, cigars, cigarettes and smokers' commodities in infinite variety. Though Mr. Michaels has occupied the present quarters only since 1901, having removed from the centre of the block, he has been in the cigar business in Montreal for a quarter of a century or more, and is always to the front in anything and everything pertaining to the wants and demands of his customers. His two assistants are equally active, prompt and polite in attending to the requirements of their trade.

Protection for Cigar Makers.

Dominion Show Case Co.
53 Richmond St. East, - - TORONTO.

Tobacco Notes.

Knapp & Peterson, pipe manufacturers, Cuffe Lane, Dublin, have made extensive enlargements and improvements in their premises.

T. J. Horrocks, wholesale tobacconist, Toronto, reports that with the improved shipping facilities his new warehouse affords, all orders will be shipped more promptly than ever.

The bonus promised to English handlers of the American trust (Imperial Tobacco Co.) goods, materialized on January 1, 1904, with an appropriation of 2¼ per cent. of the sales. John Bull ejaculates "better late than never," and the American eagle screams that sufficient prominence has not been given to American trust goods in England. Those who have offended in this particular may take the hint "to get busy" if they wish to keep the bonus scheme going.

CHRISTIE'S SODAS

Good in Sickness.

A well-known professional nurse, who at one time attended King Edward during an illness, recently used Christie's Sodas for a typhoid fever patient in Canada. "I have long," she said, "tried to get a soda biscuit that, when crushed into powder, would give satisfactory results in soups. I failed until I tried Christie's Sodas."

Cured and Packed
Where Caught!

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

One reason why the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herrings, etc., retain the rich, delicate flavor of the freshly-caught fish is because they are cured and packed right at the water side where they are caught.

There is no dirt, no slime in the "Thistle" Brand to spoil the natural flavor. There are no "odds and ends" thrown in in a hurry. The "Thistle" Brand contains nothing but carefully-selected fish—only the best will do for the "Thistle" Brand!

The cost per tin, or can, to clean, cure and pack the "Thistle" Brand is without doubt greater than the cost involved in marketing any other Brand in the country, yet the high quality has been steadily maintained from year to year even in the face of strong competition. The "Thistle" Brand competes on quality and not on price. It is the Standard Brand of Canned Fish!

Solomon said in his haste: "ALL MEN ARE LIARS!" He didn't mean it. He was simply so mad with one man that he included all the rest.

Let us not fall into Solomon's mistake. We should take out of our experience the wisdom there is in it AND STOP RIGHT THERE!

Otherwise we are as stupid as the cat who sat down on a hot stove lid. She will never sit down on a hot stove lid again, and that shows good judgment. BUT SHE WILL NEVER SIT DOWN ON A COLD ONE, EITHER.

Now, some merchants have had hard experiences lately with coupon books that were represented to be absolutely correct in count and made up just as good as any other, but they were not, and you won't know what a perfect coupon book is until you have tried either Allison's Coupon Books or Allison's Coupon PASS Books. Both are good; one book suits some, while the other fills the bill with the rest of the merchants.

We are doing a lot of special engraving work now for merchants who use books in large quantities. Our books are carried in stock by jobbers. We will be glad to send you a free sample.

DURING LENT and AFTER.

During Lent people consume larger quantities of FISH than at any other season of the year.

The reason for this is, as everyone knows, that church regulations prescribe a large percentage of fish diet. The practice of eating fish is a beneficial one, and it is GOOD, NOT ONLY FOR LENT, BUT ALL THE TIME.

Perhaps one reason why people have not been more in the habit of eating fish has been the fact that the supply in many places has not been regular, and not always of dependable quality, while a great many people do not know much about the preparation of fish for the table, and fish is frequently not a desirable article to work with in the kitchen. SAVE 25% on your HOUSE PAINTING.

If the grocers who intend painting their residences next Spring will follow the directions given below and wash the buildings with a solution of GOLD DUST Washing Powder, they will use one-third less paint than if they merely attempted to brush the dust off the house without washing it.

DIRECTIONS.

Dissolve one-quarter pound of GOLD DUST in a pint of water, then add the solution to 4 gallons of hot water; apply with a stiff brush, and follow with use of a hose. The stronger the hose is turned on the quicker and more effectual the work will be.

The use of less paint can be accounted for by the fact that after washing the house with GOLD DUST it leaves a smooth surface, so that the same quantity of paint will go fully one-fourth further. Furthermore, it leaves no layer of dirt between the paint and the woodwork, and, as a consequence, the paint will wear longer.

We have letters from several of our customers who used this method, and after washing their houses with GOLD DUST they were so well pleased with the appearance of them that they concluded not to paint them at all.

Retail grocers will do well to call this matter to the attention of their customers, as $3.00 worth of GOLD DUST Washing Powder will make the house look as well as the expenditure of $100.00 in re-painting it would.

Any grocer may experiment with a 5c. package of GOLD DUST by emptying the contents into 8 gallons of hot water, which should convince him that it will pay him to continue.

GOLD DUST can be used for any kind of outdoor work that needs renovating.

PEPPER AND ITS CULTIVATION*

ONE of the necessities for conducting a successful merchandising business, where the products are bought in a manufacturing state, is an absolute knowledge of the crude materials which enter into the manufactured article, and the cost of manufacturing; this being essential in order that the buyer may have some accurate knowledge as to what is really the cost of the finished material.

If this is true in the purchase of manufactured products, it is certainly true in matters pertaining to nature; and in order that a merchant may successfully buy his crude products so that he may manufacture them at a profit, he must know when to buy, what to buy and what to pay for them. This knowledge he will not have unless he is well posted as to crop seasons, usual rainfall, labor questions, exchange values, and all other incidentals which go to make up the cost of growing an article.

To grinders of spices, this is almost an insurmountable barrier. The seat of operations is so far away, and the avenues of information are so beset with difficulties and deceit, owing to the nature of the people with whom the merchant comes into contact. The lack of reputation of the Arabs and the Chinese for veracity place the average buyer in a position where he cannot form a just appreciation of what it costs to "grow."

Series of years, however, have demonstated to the European resident in the tropics, that at certain prices the natives of those various countries do not grow certain articles; but when prices advance, they immediately commence to cultivate; and this has been true of pepper, which subject is under discussion at the moment. Although it is impossible to state at the moment what the cost of growing pepper is (even the Chinamen who grow the stock, owing to their method of cultivation, hardly know this), it is a well-known fact that when the price of pepper was around 6 1-2c. plantations were pulled up, tracts of land were neglected, and the article came into disfavor generally; whereas now that the price has advanced to around 14c. every Chinaman is planting a small tract, and pepper appears to be more plentiful. So to the ordinary inquirer as to the cost of producing pepper, one would say that at 7c. expenses were paid and anything over this was clean profit.

I said just now that the Chinamen knew absolutely nothing about the cost of growing pepper; and this is true in both a general and literal sense, for he has learned the law of averages and knows full well the uncertainties of life, and the impossibility of forecasting with certainty what nature will do in the matter of developing his crops. So he, with great ingenuity, arranges his plantation so that out of a large tract of say 100 or 200 acres, he will have at least 15 varieties of produce—which include coffee, tapioca, gambier, pepper, nutmegs, etc. etc.

His experience tells him that out of a line of 12 or 14 articles, at least three or four will probably go wrong; some may be troubled with blight, others with need of rain, while those which require a dry period for growth may receive too much rain; he knows, however, that the average of his assortment, year by year, will net him a profitable return on his investment, so that even the owner could not figure exactly the annual cost of his individual products.

Those who have studied the question seem to agree that at 7c. pepper just pays the grower, while any profit he may receive over and above this figure must go towards paying the deficiency of one or the other of his unprofitable products.

Where Pepper is Grown.

Practically no pepper is grown on the Island of Singapore; the stock is gathered from the adjacent islands and the mainland of the Malay Peninsula, where, unlike the Sumatra peppers, it is cultivated in small plantations owned by Chinamen, who seem to have pushed the native Malay back and farther back into the forests, and while still strangers in a strange land, to have dominated the entire business and social policy of both Malays and Europeans. The result is that to-day no European house can do business in Singapore except through their Chinese compradore or go-between. These wear the finest clothes, live in the best houses, drive the best horses, and generally speaking, represent the wealth and power of the port.

Singapore pepper is grown on plantations. It is a tall climbing vine of the nature of hops, and is planted and cared for in the same way as our fields of Lima beans or other tall vines of that variety, in rows of two or three feet apart, supported by poles.

Cultivation.

Fertilization is unnecessary for nature has endowed that country with such means of production that the native has only to scratch the ground and she will reproduce herself. Plowing is almost unknown; scraping is the rule of the day. Inasmuch as the thermometer never changes more than five degrees a year at the very most, averaging between 115 and 120, it is always seed time and always harvest. The husbandman can plant his seed at any time or day of the year, and count on perfect development in the allotted time of growth; and were it not for the indolence of the natives and lack of desire to do any real work, three to four crops of almost every tropical product could be produced each year.

The rainy season, however, interfers very largely with the comfort of the native so that he does as little work as he can, and certainly no work which necessitates out-of-door life. During that period rank vegetation flourishes apace and chokes off or kills much vegetable life. The pepper vine takes at least six years to grow before it arrives at maturity, and bears for seven years afterward, giving at first three or four pounds of berries to the vine, and then going up as high as eight or nine pounds and back again to three or four pounds, when the plant dies after 13 or 14 years of life. It has few enemies so far as parasites are concerned. Strange to say, it has no odor while growing, and the workers in the fields which surround the plantations derives no ill effects from their contiguity to such a pungent article.

When the pepper is half ripe, it is green, and as the period of perfection approaches it turns red, and ultimately the sun's rays turn it jet black. It is then stripped by hand, the bunches being very like currants, hanging in clusters. It is next placed over screens where it is dried, partly by the heat of the sun, and partly by gambier fires, which article is grown side by side with pepper. The novice, on inhaling a bag of new pepper, cannot help noticing that smoky odor which is found alone in Singapore kinds; this is due to the fires by which it is dried. The stock is then sifted and made clean from dirt and stones, packed into bags and sent by steamer to the shipping port, Singapore.

All the trading is done with Chinamen, although they are alien to the country. Their frugality, keenness, and general business methods, however, place them so far ahead of the native that they have taken from him almost all business and profitable enterprise. Pepper plants are much the same wherever found, and since they require more or less the same treatment when grown in plantation form, it will be needless to further discuss their growth.

Dangers Beset the Pepper Trader.

The method of collection and growth of the Singapore varieties is not in vogue in such a wild country as Sumatra, whose people are in the real sense of the word, savage, for in the northern parts from whence come the Acheen (also called Penang) grades, travellers never go, and danger, which there generally means death, awaits those who attempt to penetrate the mountains lining the coast on all sides. To-day even steamers trading along the coasts carry armed soldiers for protection against piracy, and the trader captain usually wears under his shirt a chain coat for protection against the dagger thrusts of the disappointed or perhaps deceived dealer.

Sumatra, Penang or Acheen peppers all being different terms for the same grade of pepper is mainly of jungle growth, plantations are much the exception, and if cultivated at all, this pepper is found only in patches of less than an acre.

Political Conditions in Sumatra.

The politics of the island are a powerful feature in the rise or decline of pepper prices, consequently European buyers must have at all times an intimate acquaintance of ruling conditions. The method of Government all over the Island of Sumatra, which belongs to the Dutch, is more or less of a paternal nature. The Rajah of the district is held responsible by both his people and the new owners, the Dutch, for all that transpires either way, and has to make restitution to both ends, when difficulties arise.

The Rajah, in his turn, exercises considerable influence over the natives, and takes tribute from them in the shape of pepper and other commodities, besides being the business man of the district; so that a trader sailing around the Island of Sumatra, in search of its products, is only able to trade with the various Malay Rajahs, the system of exchange and barter being still the only method of settlement, though the more enlightened ones prefer silver dollars, at their value per pound, and not at so much each.

At present it is estimated that at least 50,000 bags of Acheen pepper are held in the island and owned by the Rajah of Acheen, the Dutch Government having levied on him a tax of $1 per bag, Mexican, in order to defray claims held by shipholders against the Dutch Government for acts of piracy which are still a common and everyday occurrence. The old man stubbornly refuses to pay the claims.

The result is that the northern end of the island is patrolled by gunboats, and nothing of any moment, except what small amount can be smuggled out on the small prows, can be exported from that island, and until the Rajah needs money to celebrate a wedding of a new wife, or the birth of a child, or until there is a death in the family, this stock will be bottled up, and be held as a menace to the entire market of the world.

Hence, as to foretelling the future values on Acheen qualities, it is one of grave doubt and great uncertainty, for until the old man is brought to terms, his huge holdings will continue to be a menace to the market and prices generally.

Sumatra, Penang or Acheen Pepper.

The Acheen crop (called "Acheen," because this is the chief shipping port), is collected en masse, without separation, usually by beating the pepper down from the vines and sweeping up what falls.

This pepper is taken by small sailing vessels, in its mixed state, large and small, light and heavy, from Acheen to Penang, the main shipping port on the Malay Peninsula, where it is graded by means of floating in huge tubs of water; two grades are then made. The large size, or that which sinks in the water, sometimes called "shot," is used for the manufacture of Penang white pepper, and what little is not required for that is mixed off in various proportions, with the light shelly stuff which floats, in order to make class A, class B, class C, or class D Penang pepper, which vary according to the weight per Imperial gallon. Class A pepper weighs 4 lbs. 13 ounces to the Imperial gallon; class B pepper weighs 4 lbs. 5 ounces; class C pepper weighs 3 lbs. 13 ounces; class D pepper weighs 3 lbs. 5 ounces. Penang pepper is one of the important things which manufacturers of spices have to give consideration to, especially when the pure food laws are such as to necessitate an exact amount of peprine or ash. Nature does not provide the same amount of rainfall very year, and her seasons of heat and cold are not regular. Consequently the woody part, or that portion, which surrounds the outside of the peppers will vary from year to year, and the percentage of ash or woody fibre will change according to weather conditions.

Tellicherry Pepper.

Another pepper of interest to manufacturers, is the Tellicherry pepper, grown on the West Coast of India, which finds its way to France in large quantities on account of the preferential rates of duty offered by her on this grade. Thus it happens in years of scarcity that Tellicherry pepper, owing to the demand from France, will rule cents per pound higher value than Singapore kinds. It is grown on plantations generally under European supervision, properly cleaned, collected and dried, and affords the most aromatic and pungent pepper there is in the market. It is almost certain that it was the Tellicherry pepper, or pepper along the Western Coast of India, which was priceless in the time of Solomon, and used as the barter for princes and a ransom for kings.

It was to that coast that the ships of Tarsish went, on account of the allurements of its flavor, the British East India Company was originally formed, whose vessels had for a time a complete monopoly of the East Indian trade; and who shall say that it was not the desire for Indian spices that finally gave England this important possession; of all products of the world, not excepting the gold and diamond mines of the Transvaal, pepper has exerted the most influence on the people of the world and the geography of nations.

To the Indian are we indebted for our knowledge of spice, and the education which he has given to the white man in culinary arts has been of vast profit and recompense to him.

White Peppers.

White peppers are the products of the same vines as the black pepper for the Singapore white pepper is nothing more or less than the unripened berry of the black pepper vines. The pepper is gathered in its green state before the outside skin has had time to become red, or rains have had a chance to swell the outer skin and make it thick, or the sun has had an opportunity to turn the exterior black. It is then dried in the shade and the green skin rubbed off, leaving the hard kernel of the berry.

It would seem that white pepper of this variety could not have the aromatic pungency of the ripe fruit, and were it not for its color, which is desirable in some instances, the white pepper would appear to be like a hard peach, lacking flavor, and all the qualities of the ripened fruit.

White pepper is never used by natives. In fact they do not use pepper at all in the way Europeans do. The article is used chiefly in making curries, and in order that the heat of the black pepper may be lost, the berry is steeped in water and finally boiled so that nothing but the aromatic part of the fruit remains; this becoming soft, is then rolled into their curry pastes, and the heat that is necessary for a successful dish, is supplied by the addition of red pepper, and not the result of the usual heat found in the pepper berry.

Penang white pepper is quite a different article, and is made from the ripened berry of the Penang, or what are commonly termed the Acheen peppers. The original pepper is thrown into large tubs of water; that which has a hard body, falls to the bottom, and is called "shot" pepper. This is then placed in huge troughs, which contain ammonia and water. Here it is allowed to soak for weeks, and when the water has penetrated sufficiently far into the skin of the pepper, the natives tread the pepper with their naked feet, rubbing the outside black skin off, which by this time has become decomposed. The troughs are then flooded with fresh water, the light skin floating over the top of the trough and eventually away to the ground, while the heavy pepper still remains at the bottom. This heavy pepper is taken out, dried, covered with clay, and becomes the Penang white pepper of commerce.

MYERS ROYAL SPICE CO., NIAGARA FALLS.

IN a recent issue The Grocer stated in error that the Myers Royal Spice Co. had only recently begun operations in Canada.

This firm was established thirty-five years ago in York, England, and as business increased they started a mill at Hull for their export trade and finally made London the centre for their European trade. About ten years ago the prominence of Canada as a cattle raising country was attracting a good deal of attention in England and Messrs. Myers thought the Dominion would prove a good market for their spices, so a branch was forthwith established at Toronto and Thomas Myers at once became a prominent figure in agricultural circles and exhibitions where the liberality of the firm in donating cups and prizes was much appreciated. It only took this enterprising firm a few years to secure a grip on the Canadian trade, so looking for other worlds to conquer they entered the United States like many others by the Suspension Bridge, and built a plain brick factory on the edge of the river Niagara, where from their office window they could keep one eye on Canada. Their factory has no architectural frills, no plate glass doors nor bronze trimmings, but Mr. Myers' private office contains twelve original paintings by Hogarth, which are valued at one hundred thousand dollars. Other valuable paintings and sketches around the office disclose the artistic tastes of the head of the firm.

The Royal Cattle Spice is used for preparing cattle for prize competitions as well as for keeping them in good conditions at all times. It is not a cheap food by any means, but a condiment for improving ordinary feed equally beneficial for horses, cattle, sheep, pigs and poultry. Messrs. Myers' system of doing business is to appoint exclusive local agents and those agents get a profit on all orders from their district, consequently one of their agencies is very profitable and much sought after in agricultural districts by storekeepers and young farmers.

Messrs. Myers have in their possession testimonials from the representatives of King Edward, five or six continental royalties, the Prince of Wales and his brothers, besides fifteen dukes and lesser nobles by the hundred. In Canada the business has attained very large proportions, and the wholesale grocery establishments are handling their goods to considerable advantage.

Anyone interested in cattle or horses should drop a card to Myers & Co., Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, N. Y., asking for circulars and testimonials.

A DOUBLE PROFIT

Royal Baking Powder yields a greater profit to the grocer in proportion to the number of cans sold than cheaper and inferior powders.

The profit per cent per can on cheap baking powders may look big—but if you will stop a minute to estimate the total profits on an equal number of cans of Royal, you will sell Royal every time.

Royal Baking Powder gives greater satisfaction to the housekeeper because it is pure and healthful and always sure in results.

You seldom have complaints about the flour, eggs, butter, etc., from a housekeeper who uses Royal Baking Powder. Why is this?

When you sell Royal you not only please your customers but maintain your reputation for selling only reliable goods.

This increases trade and swells your profits.

You profit doubly when you sell Royal Baking Powder.

LONDON'S FOOD LUXURIES.

THE cosmopolitan character of London and its grocery stores has impressed itself upon a correspondent of the Grocery World, who has been doing London.

There is in London one of the greatest grocery stores, he writes, I have ever seen. It is not the greatest in point of amount of business done, for I suppose there are several retail grocery stores in the United States which do as much business or more. The store of Fortnun, Mason & Co., of this city, is great because there is not a food luxury produced in any part of the world which sooner or later does not find its way there.

I noticed in strolling through there several articles that bear this statement out, although I know it is true from other sources. An example is the edible sea-slug from the west coast of Australia. This is a gelatinous animal on the order of a snail and comes packed in cans. It is known as the Beche de Mer and retails here at from 75 cents to $1 per tin.

Another curosity noticed was mountain cabbage, which is grown in the West India Islands. This comes shredded in cans, something like sauer kraut, and sells for 50 cents a tin.

Bombay duck is another novelty. This is not a fowl, as its name implies, but a fish caught at Bombay, India. It is dried and packed in cans and then brought to England to retail at about 50 cents.

Bamboo shoots in jars are another article of the same class. These are the tender shoots of the bamboo plant, and come from the West and East Indies and Ceylon. They are packed in pickle and are very tender and succulent. The retail price is 50 cents a jar.

Bird's-nests from Shanghai and Hong Kong, China, constitute another instance. These are the edible bird's-nests so prized by the Chinese. They are not as unsavory as the name would imply, but are very delicious and appetizing. These nests are built by a bird which never occupies it. The raw material is a gelatinous seaweed, which is said to be much stronger and purer than the manufactured gelatine of this country.

Chinese bird's-nests are imported into England packed in small individual boxes retailing at 50 cents each. They make a very rich soup stock. The stock is made and the nest cleaned and then allowed to float about in the liquid. Its substance gradually dissolves, resulting in an extremely rich soup.

Another curiosity noticed in this store was not for sale. It was plaited tea from China, from gardens tended exclusively by priests. The leaves of this tea are picked only by virgins. This is considered the finest tea in the world and is not sold. It is simply exhibited under glass in Fortnun, Mason & Co.'s as a curiosity.

As is easily understood, there is no very large demand for these things. They are mostly bought by returned colonials who have become accustomed to foreign dishes while abroad and like to be able to get them when at home. There is a small but steady trade on them all the time, but besides that the store achieves its ambition of being a source of supply for all the recognized foods of the world.

DEVELOPING CATTLE TRADE.

A RESOLUTION has been adopted by the National Stock Breeders' Convention at Ottawa last week calling on the Dominion Government to take immediate steps to encourage a live stock trade with the South American republics, Mexico, Newfoundland, and the West Indies.

The general impression prevailing in trade circles seems to be that a great opportunity presents itself for Canada to build up a large export trade in live stock with these countries, notwithstanding the difficulties of distance and stringent quarantine regulations with which she is confronted in several instances. In addition to the possibility of developing a live stock trade with the Argentine Republic there are large openings there for trade in manufactured products, fish, etc., and for extensive trade on the Pacific Coast with Chili and Peru.

A FRIENDLY CALL.

J. A. STEWART, general merchant, Exeter, was in Toronto recently on business, and paid his regular visit to The Grocer. Mr. Stewart was good enough to say that The Grocer has become indispensable to him in his business, and that in fact he could no more afford to be without it than he could his grocery staples.

Mr. Stewart is carrying on the only cash business in Exeter, thanks to a suggestion thrown out by The Grocer some eight years ago. It is reported that Mr. Stewart has been very successful, and even if he was too modest to go into particulars, he acknowledged that he made no mistake in dispensing with the primeval methods of a combined cash and credit business. "I tell you," remarked Mr. Stewart, "the only thing nowadays is a cash business through and through, with one straight cash price for every commodity in stock."

FROZEN RABBIT INDUSTRY.

In his January report the Consul-General of Melbourne, Australia, says that exports of frozen rabbits show considerable expansion. The figures are as follows:

	Pairs.
1900	2,839,112
1901	2,092,727
1902	3,274,210
1903	3,650,000

The industry has become an important one in Victoria. Over 20,000,000 rabbits were utilized during the year for export purposes. Of these, 7,300,000 were exported frozen in the fur and from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 skins were shipped and a large number of these animals tinned and disposed of.

A LETTER FROM CHINA.

THE following is a letter received by J. L. Watt & Scott, importers, Toronto, from one of the leading tea firms of Shanghai, China.

Shanghai, Feb. 13th, 1904.

Messrs. J. L. Watt & Scott,
Toronto.

Dear Sirs:

Exchange has risen to £2 10s. ½d. for 4's Bank Credits, and a further advance might at any moment be recorded; this fact, coupled with the uncertainty relative to the production of tea in China and Japan next season, should ensure strong markets with you. As far as China teas of all descriptions from Hankow and Shanghai go we are of the opinion that should war be prolonged 2 months, the crops will be appreciably curtailed; should 3 months elapse and hostilities continue, a distinct shortage would be noticeable which would tend to increase with the prolonging of unrest. The cause of this shortage would be the state of uncertainty which must always exist in China, under the present regime, as to how far trouble may spread when it is once on foot; and also a great lack of monetary facilities with the producers. Should actual warfare be confined to the North for the greater part of our season it is possible, however, that ample supplies of common blacks and of Pingsueys would be available, as such are produced in districts in comparative proximity to the ports of shipment.

We are, yours faithfully,

WISNER & CO.

In explanation of the above it may be added that the rate of exchange at which most tea invoices were settled during the past season, was about 1 tael for 2s. 5½d., or 60c. The rate now quoted per tael is 2s. 10½d. or 70c. Therefore, assuming no change in the market (tael price) of tea, the cost laid down in Canada would be enhanced by one-sixth.

I believe this is a much larger quantity of Tea than has ever been imported by any Canadian firm in a like period of two months, and I know there are very few firms in Canada who sell that much Tea in a year.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Egg Trade, 1903.

A. W. GRINDLEY, agent of the Department of Agriculture in Great Britain, reports as follows concerning this important branch of the Canadian export trade in provisions as follows:

The Canadian egg trade is in a prosperous condition, best brands selling as high as fresh or Danish selected. Eggs are chiefly shipped in the "Canadian box" with "fillers" holding 30 dozen, a style of package that is very popular. A limited number of eggs are shipped in the "Foreign box" which holds twelve long hundreds (1,440 eggs). The eggs in these large cases are packed in straw or excelsior at the request of importers. "Continental" and "Irish" eggs are always packed thus.

Both "fresh" and "glycerines" have come forward late in the year in large quantities; the quality was good, but the total shipments have not been so large owing to scarcity of eggs in Canada.

According to a book recently published in Russia, that country boasts of having left Denmark behind as regards exportations of eggs. Russian competition in butter, eggs and poultry is becoming very serious by reason of its having adopted up-to-date methods, and Russian products are becoming much more popular on the British markets, owing to the improved quality. Russia, Denmark and other foreign countries are now taking greater care in selecting, grading and packing eggs, as well as in getting them marketed as freshly as possible.

These foreign eggs now arrive regularly several days every week, as well as regularly every week of the year. Their bulk is perfectly clean, and is graded into as many as six sizes, so that to-day the British importer is not inclined to speculate as in former years, and will have little if anything to do with stocks which have been held in cold storage. Since Canadian exporters have to meet this competition great care must be taken in selecting and sending forward only eggs which are perfectly fresh, clean and graded into sizes.

During 1903 the United Kingdom imported 19,848,897 great hundreds (120) of eggs, valued at £6,617,619. Canada's share of this large trade amounted to only 557,080 great hundreds valued at £218,571. The imports from Russia amounted to £1.866,421, and from Denmark to £1,648,367. Germany, Belgium and France are the other leading exporters of eggs to Britain, each of these countries sending from three to four times as many as Canada.

Bacon and Ham Trade, 1903.

Mr. Grindley also reports as follows concerning the bacon and ham trade:

Canadian mild-cured bacon and hams are becoming very popular in Great Britain and are preferred to those imported from the United States, as they are leaner and there is always a demand for lean cuts. Canadian packing houses should make a close study of the various British markets and supply them with the cuts which are in demand by the consumer.

There is still room for improvement as regards packing cases—these are often of knotty lumber, badly nailed without battens at ends (same as American packers use) which give double nail bearings. Heavy split wood hoops should be used to bind round each end of the case, and for extra large cases an extra binder should be placed round the centre.

Shippers of mild-cured meats must take advantage of the best means of transportation which are now provided. Goods should be shipped as little as possible to be sold on commission, and then only to reliable firms who will see that they are warehoused under proper conditions as regards cleanliness and temperature.

Canadian Trade in Canned Goods.

THE Canadian export trade in canned and evaporated goods is a comparatively new one, but it is steadily increasing and promises to develop into one of large volume in the near future says Mr. A. W. Grindley in his annual report to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

British merchants have little or no idea of the large assortment of preserved meats, fish, fruits and vegetables which are packed by Canadian firms. In the past they have bought canned goods largely from France, Germany and Italy, but owing to the friendly feeling between the "Mother Country" and her "Colonies" Canadian firms may expect a large increase in orders providing their goods give satisfaction as regards quality and price. It might pay Canadian exporters to examine the methods of certain large American houses who have representatives of their own in Great Britain to push their goods; or if they consign to British firms to sell on commission, fix the price at which their goods are to be sold, allowing a good commission, but not allowing prices to be cut in order to effect sales. In addition to this they enclose handsome embossed cards in each case of goods upon which is plainly marked the retail price in English money. The goods themselves have attractive labels making a nice window ornament and the embossed card with reasonable price in plain figures attracts customers and sales are made where Canadian goods of equally good quality, but not having such an attractive label, and having no fixed price are "side-tracked."

It has been found that large quantities of tinned and bottled peas, beans and spinnach have been "greened" by a treatment with salts of copper. The public have been warned against the consumption of these goods by leading medical and food journals and it only remains for Canadian packers to show that they put up goods of a reliable quality as the British merchant has been getting from other countries (but which are entirely free from adulteration) in order to create a large demand for Canadian brands. The British consumer prefers a smaller sized pea than is usually packed in Canada. French peas are generally colored by using six tenths grain copper per pound of peas.

Great care should be taken with goods packed in glass that all roughness is ground off the necks of bottles before they are filled as pieces of glass have been found in the contents and a prejudice created against goods put up in glass.

Butter Making in the Northwest.

One of the most interesting features of the town of Moose Jaw, Assa., is the large number of creameries under the supervision of the Government located in the immediate vicinity. Cream is brought in by team and by railway within a radius of 150 miles. There is one factory south of Moose Jaw where 800 cows are kept, and large quantities of butter produced for exportation to British Columbia and Great Britain.

Provision Notes.

The annual meeting of the New Glasgow Dairying Company, Nova Scotia, was held March 8, when the old board of directors were all re-elected for 1904.

The Lipton packing plant at Chicago has been sold to Armour & Company. It is said that the price paid was in the neighborhood of $250,000. The Lipton concern has been idle and closed for four months, and Sir Thos. Lipton has gradually closed out his Chicago packing interests.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—Receipts are still light on account of the demoralization of traffic on the railroads. As soon as the roads north and south are opened a decided improvement in the condition of the provision market is expected, although at present trade from the east and west is brightening. The demand for lard continues good. Long clear bacon is 1-4c. firmer. Medium hams have advanced 1-2c. Mutton and lamb are scarce; lamb has advanced from 1 to 2c., and mutton shows a range of prices 1-2c. less than those quoted last week. Veal remains unchanged. Our quotations are as follows:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08½	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13
Roll bacon, per lb	0 09½	0 10
Small hams, per lb	0 12½	0 13½

Butter—Reciepts of dairy have increased during the past week and shipments which have been on the way for the past month are now being delivered. With increased supplies, prices will probably decline. Not much creamery butter is coming forward. Choicest grades are in good demand, but most of the butter being received is only medium quality. It is thought much stale stock will be unloaded shortly by country merchants. Supplies of butter on hand are equal to demand. Dairy rolls are 1c. firmer, and dairy prints from 1 to 2c. firmer. We quote as follows:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22
" solids, fresh	0 20	0 20½
Dairy rolls, large	0 16	0 17
" prints	0 17	0 19

Cheese—The cheese market is dull this week, very little moving either locally or for export. Last week's prices continue unchanged. We quote as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 10½	0 10¾
" twins	0 11	0 11¼

Montreal.

Provisions—Business remains comparatively quiet and prices are generally without change. The tone of the market is considered steady. There is a noticeable demand for cured meats as Easter approaches. There is some probability of bacon increasing in price, which no doubt would please the cheese men as if the working man both here and in England cannot afford to buy bacon, he naturally eats more cheese. There has been an increased demand for dressed hogs, although the prices remain about $7.25 to $7.50 for fresh killed stock. Light country killed are the same as last week, $6.75 to $7.25. There has been no change in the price of lard. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00
American short cut clear	16 50	17 00

Butter—Butter of the finest quality is very scarce. The demand is excellent. Very little fresh goods are arriving, and what does come in, does not in any way equal the best held-over Fall goods. In the Old Country there is a very much better feeling. There is practically no quantity of Summer goods available. Dairy rolls and dairy tubs remain the same as last week. Fancy creamery still brings 20 to 21c, that means for well kept Fall goods. Winter creamery is bringing 19 to 20c. We quote:

Fancy creamery	0 19	0 20
Summer goods	0 18	0 19
Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16
Finest Fall made	....	0 21
" fresh prints	0 21	0 22

Cheese—A very decided improvement has taken place in the cheese market, while the quantity on hand is limited, cheese sells half a cent better than two weeks ago. The report that a Winter shipment had come to Montreal from Kingston, Ont., has not been verified here; further, no importance is attached to it by big exporters. A good demand has been noticed for second grade cheese at 9 5-8c, this having been paid instead of 9c of a month ago.

Stocks are small, and for very good cheese 12c per lb could be obtained. Not a pound of it can be got. Generally speaking, the price is 1-2 to 3-4c better than a month ago. A well-known dealer has just returned from a visit through the country districts, and he stated that owing to the tremendous snowfall ,and the bad condition of the country roads, the season will be a month or a fortnight late. One of the largest holders of cheese here seems to be expecting a big increase in price. This is not generally anticipated. It is believed that there are not more than from 40,000 to 50,000 boxes available at this port.

Fresh and Cured Fish

To Protect Lake Fish.

AT the fisheries conference held in Detroit last week the following resolutions to regulate the fisheries of the great lakes were passed :

"That all fishing be prohibited in Lake Erie between November 15 and March 15, in Lake Huron between October 31 and December 15, in Lake Superior between October 15 and November 15 ;

"That the netting, sale and export of black bass, maskinonge and speckled trout be prohibited ;

"That a close season be established for black bass from January 1 to June 15, except in the vicinity of Pelee Island, where it shall be from May 25 to July 15, for maskinonge between January 1 and June 15, for wall-eyed pike between January 1 and May 15, dates inclusive; a close season for blue pickerel was not considered necessary, these fish being very destructive to the finer qualities ;

"That the taking of sturgeon in the great lakes and waters connecting the same be prohibited for a period of five years from June 1, 1905 ;

"That a size or weight limit be established for the following fish, under which none shall be retained : Bass, 12 inches; maskinonge, 30 inches; yellow pickerel (Dore), 15 inches; blue pickerel and saugers, 10 inches; yellow perch, 9 inches; whitefish and lake trout, 2 pounds (dressed), measurements to be from tip of snout to centre of fork of tail."

To Exterminate the Dog Fish.

M. NICKERSON, an authority on Atlantic fisheries, and at the same time a member of the Legislature of Nova Scotia, has moved a resolution in the local house requesting the appointment of a commission to investigate the dog fish problem.

For some years the presence of dog fish on the coasts of the Maritime Provinces has been a great source of annoyance and loss to fishermen, and the situation is becoming more aggravated every year. Two years ago the fishery intelligence officer for Lunenburg, N. S., reported as follows : "If the dog fish are not soon checked, the fisheries will be ruined. They are already a great hindrance to the successful operation of the fisheries, especially in our coastal waters. They were also reported by the bankers on Western, Middle, Quero, Bradley and Grand Banks, this being the first year fishermen found them on the Grand Banks.

"It has been suggested that the Government offer a bonus for the destruction of dog fish. Municipal authorities pay for the destruction of certain wild animals, and it is felt that the value of the fisheries is such that the administration might well adopt some method to prevent the increase of dog fish and the consequent depletion of our food fishes on which they prey."

Whaling in Eastern Canadian Waters.

As a result of repeated applications from fishermen in the Maritime Provinces for the exclusive privileges of taking whales in Eastern waters, legislation may be adopted next session to regulate the whaling industry from which Americans are reaping a handsome profit at the present time. Parliament will be asked to sanction the adoption of measures such as to enable Canadian fishermen to profit by the industry, and at the same time save the species from extinction.

Millions of Young Fish.

1903 was a record year in fish propagation carried on under the direction of the Commissioner of Fisheries. A total of 314,511,500 young fish were put out, being an increase of 40,000,000 over the previous year. For the first time the department reared a number of salmon up to the fingerling stage in the hatchery at Campbelltown, and placed them in the Restigouche River to the number of a hundred thousand.

Fish Notes.

Commodore J. U. Gregory, agent for the Department of Marine and Fisheries, in Quebec, has had the Imperial Service Order conferred upon him by His Majesty King Edward.

The Dominion Government have appointed Captain Bernier to go to Germany for the steamer Gauss, which has just been purchased by the Government for service in Hudson's Bay. He will be accompanied by six pupils of the local school of marine.

An application of the State of Michigan for fish eggs from the Dominion Government hatchery has been refused on recommendation of the Canadian Fisheries Inspector, because the United States authorities have not shown themselves willing to enforce regulative measures for the protection of the fisheries on the great lakes except under threat of retaliation by Canada.

CLOVES ON THE MOVE.

A SUBJECT which has recently been receiving the close attention not only of spice importers and brokers, but also of merchants in other lines, is the advancing tendency in prices for cloves, due to the decreased production and the increased consumption.

Cloves are probably the greatest speculative article in the spice trade, and have been so for many hundreds of years, because they have always come from small and restricted areas of cultivation, and have been used as tribute, almost taking the place of money in ancient times. They have been mostly grown on the two small islands of Zanzibar and Pemba, on the east coast of Africa. The production has been steady for years at an average of 90,000 to 100,000 bales per annum, while the consumption has steadily increased until now it is 120,000 to 130,000 bales a year. This augmentation in the consumptive demand is due to the increased use of pure ground cloves, to the greater demand for oil of cloves in medicine and to its increased use in the manufacture of vanillin during the last three years.

The clove crop of 1902-3 was fairly full, being 100,000 to 110,000 bales. The crop of 1903-4 so far is 27,000 bales, and possibly 30,000 bales, altogether. As a rule a good crop is always succeeded by a moderately short crop the next year. The Bombay operators this year bought the entire crop and shipped it to Bombay. Last Fall they had already taken up all future deliveries offered by European bear operators, and later on had purchased a large proportion of the London and Holland stocks, which were already very small.

TORONTO RETAIL GROCERS MEET.

THE regular monthly meeting of the retail grocers of Toronto was held on March 14, when the Assessment Act and other matters were discussed, F. W. Johnson, president, occupying the chair.

Satisfaction was expressed at the rating of the business tax on retailers at 25 per cent., as compared with 50 per cent. in departmental stores, which was considered much better than the original proposal.

Hugh Blain, of the Eby, Blain Co. delivered the first of a series of addresses to be given by members of the Wholesalers' Association. He said they had many things in common, standing together as guardians of the public health. Pure food was of the first importance and a heavy responsibility rested upon wholesalers and retailers which should be assumed by the associations. Individual responsibility was fast disappearing and co-operation and united effort was taking its place.

The wholesale trade was responsibile for the creation of Toronto as a great distributing centre. The retailers should form a Dominion association so that the same influence could be brought to bear on outside wholesalers as on those in Toronto. There was no doubt but that the wholesalers sold many goods that the retailers should sell, but if they did not do it, others at outside points would.

Mr. Blain then spoke on insurance, of which every merchant should carry sufficient to protect himself and family. The advantages of good bookkeeping, on the detrimental effects of the long credit system and bankrupt stocks. Although the trade was now in a healthy condition there was no other branch of trade in which industry and intelligence received so small a recompense.

LONDON TEA MERCHANT VISITS MONTREAL.

H. R. HUNT, of the firm of Hunt & Co., of London, Eng., and Yokohama, one of the biggest Japan tea dealers in the world, was in town this week visiting the firm's Montreal offices. Mr. Hunt is a young man who is thoroughly conversant with his business. Regarding the tea trade, he speaks as most Britishers do, in a calm deliberate manner, and gave some interesting facts. Incidentally he stated that he was on his way to attend the annual market, which opened towards the end of April in Yokohama.

As King Charles' head was always getting in the story that Mr. Dick (in David Copperfield. was writing, so it is impossible to interview anyone on their way to Japan without taking into account the war between Russia and Japan. Mr. Hunt, however, does not take the war very seriously as a trade issue, especially in the tea trade, principally because the tea picking is done by women and children, and in preparing the tea at Yokohama his firm do most of the work by machinery. There is another fact that may bear upon the situation, and that is that up country where there is not much machinery, plenty of stalwart men will be called to the war, and this will cause a large percentage of the second crop, which is due here in about four months, to be of a much coarser quality than it would be otherwise. He does not anticipate a large increase in the price. Notwithstanding this fact, the probabilities are that high insurance and scarcity of labor may raise the price. This will not affect the consumer in Canada, however, as the price usually paid to the retailer is 25c for Japan tea; to go higher would mean to lose that constituency, and normal conditions will have to be awaited. Tea wholesalers are pretty well cleaned out of the old stock which was the custom, and not caused by the war at all.

Mr. Hunt has just arrived from Londone and at their New York office the consumption of first quality Japan tea is reported still strong everywhere. The information that might be gathered by newspaper reports, that it would be a wise thing to buy all the Japan tea now that could be obtained is valueless, because no one except the big dealers in Yokohama can estimate how much tea the Japs have in reserve, and as stated before, the consumer in Canada will not pay more than the price quoted, 25c. Mr. Hunt will be in Canada for some time prior to sailing for Japan, and he will visit different branches of the big house in the Dominion.

ALL-CANADIAN GRAIN ROUTE

IT is reported that the Dominion Government will be asked to erect a grain elevator at Port Colborne, with a view to making it one of the leading grain ports on the lakes. They will also be asked to keep Canadian canals free of tolls, to keep them open every day through the season of navigation, to make the national port of Montreal free of ordinary freight charges, and to construct a second grain elevator at the latter port. All this looks as if Canada was beginning to wake up to the importance of controlling grain traffic from the great West en route to the Atlantic seaboard.

AN OTTAWA CASE.

On March 14 Chief Justice Falconbridge dismissed the action of J. Castle, wholesale tea merchant of Ottawa, against Chaput & Company, wholesale grocers of Montreal, and their commercial traveller, J. C. Campbell. The action was tried at Ottawa in January and was brought by Mr. Castle for damages for non-delivery of goods alleged to have been sold to him by Chaput Co. through Campbell, or in the alternative claiming damages against Mr. Campbell personally.

A RECENT LEGAL DECISION.

A RECENT decision of Judge Newlands of Moose Jaw, Assa., on a case in court between a local landlord and his tenant, may prove interesting to readers of The Grocer. The judgment, which explains the case, is as follows:

The plaintiff was a leaseholder of the defendant for one year at a monthly rental. After the expiration of the lease, the defendant remained in possession, and paid two months' rent. During this time the plaintiff gave the defendant one month's notice to quit and refused to accept further rent. Considerable correspondence took place between the interested parties both before and after the termination of the lease, and one letter in particular in which the plaintiff refused to lease the building for a year as his tenant had requested, but agreed to keep the latter as a monthly tenant. By the mere posting of such a letter the landlord claimed he had rebutted the implication of the law which is that by remaining in possession of property after the expiration of a lease, a yearly tenancy is established on the condition of payment of rent to a landlord. The judge's decision was to the effect that under the circumstances a new proposition from the tenant or an acceptance of the same would have invalidated the claim of the tenant to yearly tenancy; no new tenancy could be created by an offer which was intended only as a further confirmation of rights which the law already afforded the tenant.

Hasty conclusions lead to speedy repentance. Do not buy your coffees thoughtlessly on the spur of the moment. Exercise the same care in selecting coffee as you do in buying the other necessities of life. Be sure of obtaining the best by securing

MAPLE SUGAR FRAUDS.

IT is apropos for the grocer to exhibit the sign "Fresh Maple Sugar" at this time of year, indeed there are many proper things much more difficult to do. The nearness of the sugar season prompts the suggestion, and even now the sign may be seen all over the city. The regular markets will shortly be flooded with what is called "Pure Maple Sugar," too often made up of granulated sugar that has never seen the fresh sap of the maple tree.

Adulteration has been written about in The Grocer for years, especially in view of the continued prevalence of the evil in the Province of Quebec. It is not, however, because there is no law to protect either wholesaler or retailer that the fraud arises; it is because the laws in this particular are not carried out. In the middle of March there is no real maple sugar; still there are two classes of individuals to be considered; one which has lived in the country, and the other which knows nothing of country life. The former class cannot be fooled by the plausible "Pure Maple Sugar"; they know it. In fact the genuine sugar has left such a strong impress on their memory that it is linked with the big black pot, of running sap, and perchance pleasant memories of merry-making. It has the flavor of the tree and cannot be mistaken for the mixture of white and granulated sugar which may have been dipped in the wood of the maple to give it the requisite flavor. Glucose is often used to give fraudulent stuff the necessary firmness. There is another sort of sugar, made from old brown stock which is melted and made to acquire a smooth appearance and the significant dark brown color, granulated sugar being sprinkled over the cakes. This delusion is offered by the deceiver to the undiscriminating public without the least compunction.

Montreal confectioners receive from time to time circulars from certain American firms, offering to sell a "maple" essence at $12 a gallon, which in every way they claim carries out the "just as good" absurdity. About a year ago a well-known sugar firm in Quebec failed, owing to having filled orders extensively with the spurious article. Their fate has been chronicled before; it serves, however, as a reminder that Canadians as a rule know maple sugar. The amazing quantities shipped to the English market where the consumer has a reputation for being hypercritical if anything, is somewhat reassuring and goes to show that the fraud of adulterating and substitution is the exception in Canada.

There is another side of the story; it must be admitted that many a dealer thinks he is selling the genuine article, when he is not, which fact increases the difficulty of procuring the real thing. It is tobe hoped that Canadian firms will be warned of the peril they run in attempting to adulterate such a food product as maple sugar. There should be enough native pride in the Canadian producer to make him scorn such a proceeding or at least to enable him to get along without resorting thereto.

A MONTREAL EXHIBITION.

THERE seems every reason to expect that Montreal will again have an annual exhibition, and if such turns out to be the case every effort will be expended to make it one that will surpass any yet held. It is some years now since the last one took place, but ever since, a few indomitable spirits have year after year brought the subject up, and at last their efforts bid fair to be realized in the Summer or Fall of 1905. The Business Men's League—an association which is never behind when Montreal's interests are concerned—have taken the matter up with characteristic energy, and at a meeting on March 9, at which their president, Mr. Henry Miles, took the chair, the plan was outlined. Men representing all important interests, agriculturists, capitalists, manufacturers, merchants and railway men were present, and were plainly thoroughly interested in the project.

In many ways the Toronto Exhibition is taken as a model. Mr. Miles in his address to the meeting, pointed out that that exhibition had been run for some years before it paid, but that the advertising gained meanwhile by Toronto had been recognized by the people of the Queen City to be of great value to them, whether a profit was obtained direct from the exhibition or not.

The number of tourists, American and English, who visit Montreal now every year is immense, and constantly growing, though there is next to nothing in the way of advertising done for the city. Its historical associations are alone the attraction. With a yearly exhibition, of sufficient merit, another drawing card would be added which would doubtless greatly lengthen the roll of visitors. All these visitors are good customers. Montreal merchants in almost all lines of trade fully appreciate that fact, and the great majority of them are showing their appreciation by the hearty support they are giving to the proposed exhibition.

A permanent board of directors has been elected as follows: H. Laporte, Mayor of Montreal; S. D. Vallieres, chairman Finance Committee, Montreal; L. A. Lapointe, L. Payette, H. A. Ekers, C. B. Carter, D. L. Lockerby, R. Wilson-Smith, Col. Labelle, Hon. F. L. Beique, C. H. Catelli, J. X. Perreault, Hon. J. D. Rolland, James Cochrane, Hon. G. A. Drummond, Henry Miles, T. Gauthier, Hon. W. C. Edwards, W. E. Davis, A. H. Harris and Dr. Lalonde, representing the agriculturists.

At the meeting of the directors the following officers were chosen:

Hon. Presidents—Hon. Sidney Fisher and Hon. Mr. Tourgeon.

President—Senator Drummond.

Vice-Presidents — Senator Beique and Mayor Laporte.

Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Henry Miles.

CANNED GOODS.

THERE is a queer notion extant in the grocery trade, that has a political flavor. But leaving political prejudice out of the question, it is certain that Canadian canners are not making the best use of the Old Country market, especially canners of fruit. One paper says that if the canners were not under the "narcotic" of high duties they would be better off. Another says, that protection or politics has nothing to do with the situation in canned fruits. The daily newspaper suggestion of the nature quoted, smack of combine. As a matter of fact protection has about as little to do with the absence of goods of Canadian packers in the British market, as it could possibly have.

Judging from English trade papers, in many lines of canned fruits, it is like bringing coals to Newcastle to send Canadian goods to the old land. There is a scarcity of English fruits this year, however, and the attractive prices of California and other fruits is likely to create an increased demand, which should help Canadian packers.

In canned meats there is a tendency towards the continuance of present high prices. The salmon market for instance, has been firm throughout Lent and the demand from the country during the past week has been surprisingly poor.

For special lines of Canadian preserved vegetables there is a demand. It might just as well be understood now as at any time, that the Britisher is more of an exporter than an importer of this line of goods. Anyone who uses jams or pickles will confess this without argument, as the British manufacturer in these articles has never been surpassed. In connection with sardines it might be mentioned that unsatisfactory reports have come from the fishery centres, and the stocks held are said to be small. Another fact too which is worth noting, is that some packers of meat expect an advance in price early next month.

THE SPRING TRADE OUTLOOK.

DESPITE the exceptionally unfavorable weather of the Winter months and notwithstanding the pessimism which was expressed in some quarters early in the Winter, the Spring of 1904 opens with business prospects in Canada as favorable as has been the case for many years.

It is probably true that considerable trade has been lost as a result of the heavy snow storms and the severe weather.

It may still be argued by some, as was done a few months ago by many, that Canada is in imminent danger of the "dumping" of American goods on this market. But there is little indication that any movement of this nature will attain serious proportions. The general verdict is that the danger of it is less serious than six or nine months ago.

On the other hand there are many factors which give reason for confidence in and satisfaction with the prospects.

The past six or seven years have constituted an era of development unprecedented in the country's history. This development has reached a stage that ensures, always barring a severe crop failure, admittedly a remore possibility, an era of exceptional constructive activity in all parts of the Dominion.

The building of the Grand Trunk Pacific and hundreds, if not thousands, of miles of branch lines on other railways; a record volume of immigration to the farm lands of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories; a continued expansion of the mineral and industrial developments of Ontario, Nova Scotia, Quebec and British Columbia, steady activity in the lumbering districts of Quebec, New Brunswick, Ontario and British Columbia, all combine to increase the demand for the necessities of life, and to keep the factories in all parts of Canada working at full time and to ensure for the employes a continuance of the high scale of wages of recent years.

Our readers are warned against paying this man any money as he is not authorized by us to transact business for us in any way. He is not and never was in our employ, and we cannot hold ourselves responsible for his actions.

"DON'T BE JUST OUT."

THE past Winter has taught the majority of Canadian grocers the wisdom and necessity of laying up supplies for a stormy day. With conditions of traffic in such a demoralized state throughout the country that for a time merchandise could not be distributed except by express, village after village was reduced to the ridiculous extremity of moulding its own candles for illuminating purposes as in the old pioneer days. In certain towns, supplies of sugar became practically exhausted, and the citizens had to content themselves with comparatively plain living for a considerable period.

The rub comes nearer home, however. A grocer ought not to allow himself to "be just out of" any article belonging to the category of a grocery stock, even supposing he had never received his recent warning to be always prepared for a big emergency.

The successful grocer has established a reputation for himself, and the lesser lights in the trade are emulating his example. His customers have some idea or another that their grocer is infallible and that he can supply their wants better than any one else living. Unfortunate man, if he allows such customers to go a-hunting for any article of which they are in need. His sin is one which is fertile in practical results. First, he endangers his reputation, second, he loses his grip on his customers, and third, he sacrifices trade. The farsighted grocer will see to it that he is never "just out of" anything. If such chances to happen, he does not rest until he has sent out for the article in question. Come what may, he realizes the importance of always being ne plus ultra in the eyes of his customers.

GRAIN SECTION MEETS.

THE annual meeting of the grain section of the Board of Trade, Toronto, was held March 15, J. C. McKeggie, the chairman, presiding. In his annual report Mr. McKeggie commented upon the fact that, although representations had been made to the Dominion Government urging the appointment of official weighers and also the fixing of flour standards, nothing had been done in either of these matters.

The following were appointed officers for the ensuing year:

Chairman, Hedley Shaw.

Vice-Chariman, D. Plewes, Jr.

Executive, F. W. Hay, W. D. Matthews, C. B. Watts, John Carrick, John Fisher, C. W. Band and A. N. Pearce.

Complaint Committee, C. Goode, D. O. Ellis, J. C. McKeggie, Hedley Shaw.

Membership Committee, D. O. Ellis, J. L. Fisher, W. Ross, M.P., D. Plewes, Jr., Thomas Martin, F. W. Hay.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. W. Wilson, president of the Wilson, Lytle & Badgerow Co., vinegar manufacturers, Toronto, died on March 14th.

A. S. Bowman is now representing the Tillson Company. "Tillson" stands for quality and commands the highest market prices.

Mr. F. P. Sawyer, president of the Great Western Cereal Co., Chicago, has been in Canada this week looking into the oatmeal situation.

Mr. Henria Jonas, of Henri Jonas & Co., Montreal, who has been confined to his home with an attack of rheumatism for the past few weeks, is able to get around again to his offices.

Mr. J. M. Agnew, who has been connected with the Hanbury Manufacturing Co., Brandon, Man., for the past nine years, left on March 15 to assume control of the North Star Lumber Company, Cranbrook, B. C.

Mr. H. T. Connolly, manager of Barker's White Store, Moncton, N. B., has severed his connection with this firm and accepted a position with Bryant & Macdonald, tea importers, Halifax, as traveller for New Brunswick.

Mr. W. Dobie returned to Toronto on Saturday, having been in Chicago since the 5th inst., where he went to attend the funeral of the late Mr. E. W. Gillett, president of E. W. Gillett Company, Limited, Toronto.

Mr. B. O. Beland, Montreal, has secured the services, with interests, of Mr. R. Carignan, for many yeats travelling representative of D. Masson & Co. Mr. Carignan enjoys a good connection with the trade of Montreal and district.

C. L. Farnworth, representing the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, Ont., between Ottawa and Quebec, was in Montreal this week. He reports business good and though weather conditions have in a measure made it harder to interest buyers, the feeling on his ground is that the current year will be a good one.

Mr. W. A. Winterstein, the manager of the Montreal branch of the Canada Flour Mills Co., Chatham, Ont., has made many friends since he came to the city, and it may be mentioned that he is is known as one of the most capable men in the business, notwithstanding the fact that he is one of the youngest in the trade.

J. Reed, representing J. E. Baillie, produce and commission merchant, Toronto, passed through Montreal this week on his way to the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Reed also covers Eastern Ontario and Quebec, and reports business satisfactory despite the hard weather and worse roads.

Mr. W. Calvert, of Myers' Royal Spice Company, Niagara Falls, N. Y., is on his way to Calgary, Alta., to introduce Myers' Royal Spices to the customers of J. Turner & Co., Calgary. Mr. Calvert is one of the oldest representatives of Myers' Royal Spice Co., and as he has won an enviable reputation as a salesman, it is not unlikely that large sales of this firm's goods will be made in the West.

Mr. E. N. Smith, of Smith, Baker & Co., New York and Yokohama, was in the city recently looking for orders. Mr. Smith called on Mr. Marceau, one of our local dealers, and spoke of the ever present war. He, however, said that it had not affected his business very much here, in as much as orders were generous and business seemed good in Canada.

Mr. J. A. Courtemanche, a well-known Montreal traveller, is leaving for Winnipeg and the West, where he will represent the Ocean Mills, Montreal, the famed originators of Chinese starch. The other products of the mills also will be in his capable hands, and it is expected that they will all become as much appreciated in the West as in the East.

Mr. H. J. Colville, one of the biggest grocers in Winnipeg, was in Montreal for a few days recently, and was welcomed by a large number of old friends here. He was on 'Change and very much appreciated the development in the grocery trade in Montreal, where some of the finest wholesale houses in the Dominion are located.

Mr. F. M. Beamish, grain merchant, Winnipeg, is dead. The late Mr. Beamish moved to Manitoba sixteen years ago from Port Hope, Ont., where he had been interested in milling, grain buying and farming. On taking up his residence in Manitoba he went into wheat raising on a large scale. Two years ago he gave up active farming operations, and engaged in grain trading in Winnipeg, in which business he continued until the time of his death.

PURE FOOD BILL BEFORE U. S. CONGRESS.

"NO bill now pending in Congress could be of more importance to the people of the United States than the Pure Food Bill now before Congress, should it become law," says H. D. Perky, president of the Natural Food Company, Niagara Falls, N.Y., in his letter to influence United States Senators.

Mr. Perky is one of the men who are working earnestly for the passage of the Pure Food Bill, and an enthusiastic advocate of pure foodstuffs. As he has devoted his life to the study of foods there is perhaps no American better qualified to speak with authority on the subject. At the present time there are pure food laws in force in most of the states of the Union but these are not serving the purpose even in a measure, Mr. Perky is emphatic in urging the enforcement of a common pure food law all over the United States as absolutely necessary if the best interests of the nation are to be conserved.

AGENCY FOR ONTARIO SUGAR REFINERY.

W. H. Millman & Sons have recently been appointed agents for Toronto and outside tributory points for the Ontario Sugar Refinery, Berlin, and report large sales with good prospects.

CANADIAN AGENT FOR AMERICAN GRAPE JUICE.

J. H. Maiden, Youville square, Montreal, has secured the agency for Montreal and the Province of Quebec for the Gleason Grape Juice Company's (Fredonia, N. Y.) products. These goods, which have secured a reputation for absolute purity in the United States, should meet with ready acceptation by the grocery trade. Certainly if Government analytical reports may be relied on Gleason's grape juices cannot be excelled. Grape fruit juices have of late years secured a prominent place among the necessities, not only for the sick room but as table beverages, and the grocery trade is the true channel through which the consuming public is becoming acquainted with these delicious beverages. They are put up in bottles to retail at 25c and 50c.

The foregoing by "Pope" can be aptly applied to the position of affairs created by the introduction of "SALADA" Natural Green Teas in competition with Japans.

Before these new Teas were known as being meritorious, cautious hesitancy on the part of the trade was not unnatural, but now that they are an established and unqualified success, there can be no further excuse for delay in handling.

Japan Tea imports have declined 60% since meeting this competition—what is left continues to dwindle.

"SALADA" Green Teas are packed in Sealed Lead packets only, same form, style and price as the celebrated Black Teas of "SALADA" Brand.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Toronto, March 17, 1904.

Groceries.

THE grocery trade cannot be said to have reached a normal state yet after the protracted dullness and tie-up of business generally. Collections continue slow. The canned goods market is improving with prices firm. Sugars are firm with an advance of 5c all round on Monday last and strong market at present. The demand for syrups and molasses is fair with the market uncertain. The tea market is active and prices rule firm; Japan and China teas are likely to advance in price. Coffees are firm and quiet. The spice market is firm with fair prospects. Rice, tapioca and sago are in big demand at full prices. The demand for dried fruits is only fair. Cured fish are still in brisk demand although the season is practically over. The price of peanuts has advanced 1-4c and a strong market is reported.

CANNED GOODS.

It is reported that canners are practically sold out of canned goods, and that stocks are all in second hands. Trade in canned goods generally is improving although the storm of a day or two ago interfered temporarily with business which was beginning to recover from its recent prolonged dullness. Prices are firm and a number of cities have advanced prices materially. A considerable number of lots of canned tomatoes are reported to have changed hands during the past week. Higher prices in canned goods are prospected in the near future. The demand for canned fruits is brisk, this being the season for sales in this line. Canned vegetables are in fair demand at firm prices. Canned meats are being freely booked for future delivery. Beans 2's are 5c firmer, also corn 2's. Cohoes are 1-4c easier. SUGAR.

In our last report it was stated that the estimated total crop of Cuban sugar was 10,200,000 tons; this should have been 1,200,000 tons. The strong position of the sugar market has been fully maintained during the week under review and large sales of raws at 1-32 advance from spot and at 1-16 advance for second half March and April shipments from Cuba are reported as we go to press. There are still buyers on a basis of 2 5-32 c. and f. for nearby sugars, but no sellers, while we hear of second half March shipments at 2 3.16 c and f. which is equivalent to duty paid price of 3.53. Sales could still be made on this basis for shipment and at 3½ for spot sugars at which the market remains nominal. Holders are firm, however, in their pretensions and not disposed to continue on this basis. The market may be called decidedly healthy. Sales for the week under review total fully 150,000 bags. Europe reports a stronger market which has recovered what it lost the previous week. 88 per cent. beet is now firm at 8s. 3¾d. basis f. o. b. Hamburg, which is equivalent to 3.75 parity of duty paid N. Y. for 96 centrifugals. Thus it will be seen that cane sugars have still a differential of ¼c per lb. in their favor. European beet sowings have already commenced; some anticipate that these will be sufficiently reduced to make a decrease of 400,000 tons in the coming crop, which is not improbable, although it is too early to speak with certainty. The strength of the raw market has been reflected in N. Y. refined market where prices have risen fully 10c per 100 lbs. for the week and the market closes firm on net basis of 4.50 for standard granulated. On Monday, 14th inst., all Canadian prices advanced 5c per 100 lbs., and they are now firm on basis of 4.23 for Montreal granulated and 4.13 for Acadia and Berlin granulated. Sugar in bags is sold at 10c per 100 lbs. less than in bbls.

Receipts at U. S. Atlantic ports for the week ending March 9 were 45,113 tons with meltings 41,000 tons the same as on the previous week, thus increasing stocks for the week by over 11,000 tons to 114,641 tons of which slightly over 93,000 tons are in refiners' hands. It will be observed that on the present basis of melting this is equal to less than 3 weeks' supply. Combined stocks of U. S. and Cuba at latest advices were 311,641 tons, a decrease of 108,000 tons from last year. Combined stocks of U. S. and Europe at latest uneven dates were 357,610, an increase of 45,275 tons as compared with an increase of 83,709 tons last week and 209,885 tons on January 1, 1904. There are 170 central factories grinding in Cuba as against the same number grinding last year. The decrease in stocks there is because of much freer selling by the planters. The immediate indications for the raw market are favorable to firm prices without the probability of much further advance, and the same may be said to apply to refined. It would seem safe policy though to carry fair stocks for all immediate requirements. We revise quotations below as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrups and molasses continues fair; at the same time the market is unsettled and will remain so until the New Orleans grain test question is settled. Buyers are cautiously holding back; they will buy one way only, namely, duty paid and in view of this fact, are considering the advisability of bringing in syrup and molasses from the West Indies. TEAS

The demand for tea is fairly active this week. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in getting suitable markets for buyers on account of firm prices. Latest advices from London, Eng., say there has been an advance of from 1-4d. to 1-2d. in the market since the week of previous sale, and that prospects for brisk sales are good. An almost complete absence of Ceylon teas possessing a full desirable flavor is noted in the London market. If the import tax on Indian and Ceylon teas is abolished it will have the effect of booming the London market. The war in the East is keeping people guessing re Japans and Chinas; the views of local holders of Japans are strengthening and some shippers of Japans are holding aside and will not discuss business. Ceylons, Indias and greens are strong, and the demand for them is brisk with prices unchanged. A large shipment of China tea was sent down from Canada to New York last week, to take advantage of the relatively higher prices prevailing there. Clearances of all teas from London warehouses for the month of February were 18,763,919 lbs, and for the same month last year 17,205,128 lbs. Demand for Indias was well maintained at slightly advanced prices, mediums were fully firm to dearer, while any Autumn flavored invoices continued to attract active competition, extremely high prices being paid for a shipment from Okayti. Deliveries for the month were satisfactory, being nearly quarter million lbs in excess of last February. Stocks have been reduced by four million pounds during the month. Brisk competition was experienced in Ceylons, the improvement noticed in last report being further accentuated. Common kinds ruled strong to a fractional advance, and medium descriptions continued to grow in favor with buyers, particularly Pekoes and Orange Pekoes with good cup. Colombo telegrams estimate March shipments to Great Britain at seven and a quarter million pounds, as against seven and a half millions last year. English imports of Java for the year have been 1,066,000 lbs, as against 509,000 lbs in 1903. We quote as follows:

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues firm but quiet this week, very little trading having been done. The demand for Rios is improved; other brands are quiet. Any change in prices of coffees is unlikely at least for some weeks. The coffee crop is being picked in Brazil at the present time, and nothing is certain yet as to the extent of this season's coffee crop. Latest reports advise that the coffee berry this year is particularly good quality and hint at a lighter coffee crop than usual. Any idea as to the exact extent of the crop, or an intelligent forecast of prices will not be possible for several weeks yet, meanwhile the market is uncertain. Last week's prices continue unchanged. RICE AND TAPIOCA.

Rice is in good demand this well at full prices; the same remark applies to tapioca and sago. Stocks of Japan rices are exhausted and new stocks have not yet arrived; the markets in the country of growth are high which would seem to mean high prices here for Japan rice. Rogoon rices, contrary to usual experience, are easier. The rice market is advancing right along, although it is not likely to hold thus. Our quotations are as follows:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

Trade in dried-fruits is fair but quiet with firm prices of last week unchanged. Letters from Spain say stocks of raisins are steadily reducing without any appreciable change in prices. Currants are also in fair demand with no changes in prices; no particular inquiries from jobbers in Canada having been received during the week. Prunes are becoming active in the market. There is a small demand for apricots and peaches at firm prices. Evaporated apples are reported quiet. We quote as follows:

EGGS.

The egg market is firmer than it was last week and stocks are barely sufficient to supply the demand even with shipments from local sources gradually increasing. One provision firm had to resort to an importation of 150 cases from Chicago, on which they paid a duty of 3c per dozen. As The Grocer predicted the price of eggs dropped to 20c; it is, however slightly firmer this week, and a wider range of prices is recorded. We quote as follows:

Fish.

The fish market continues active this week. Present indications are that there will be a scarcity in whitefish and trout. Sea herring and bloaters are out of the market, otherwise stocks are holding out all right. Fresh herrings are 2 1-2c easier, and oysters 55c easier. Finnan

Green Fruits.

The general condition of the market in green fruits continues much the same as last week, the local trade being brisk and outside distribution of fruit largely hindered except in express lots, on account of the demoralized state of railway traffic, especially in Northern Ontario where trains have not been running for a fortnight. There is very little demand at present for Florida and Japan tangarines, which are practically out of the market. Supplies of California tanfarines are easily available if their importation was warranted by the demand of the fruit trade. California navel oranges easily lead in the orange market, with a big demand and plentiful supplies of stocks of first-class quality. Bitter oranges are quieter than they were last week. There is an improved demand for Mexican oranges, and stocks are excellent quality. Valencia oranges are easier this week and will be cheaper still. The market is quieter than it has been. Stocks of Valencias are coming freely; they rank after California navels, however. The demand for lemons is good, and there is very little change of the price declining. Stocks of California lemons are plentiful in the United States, but the Canadian trade does not care for them, principally on account of their poor keeping qualities. The demand for grapefruit is brisk and improving steadily, although this is a comparative novelty on the market. Pineapples are easier in price. The local banana market is brisk, but it is difficult to determine the exact state of the general market because out of town orders are not usually filled until the week-end after The Grocer has gone to press. Orders, however, are coming in freely. Apples are plentiful and a little easier in price. Florida tomatoes are becoming plentiful on the market. The demand for limes is brisk. Strawberries are on the market in smal lots and are selling at 60c a box. We quote as follows:

Vegetables.

There is a brisk demand for vegetables of every description this week, although supplies continue to come in very slowly and do not begin to meet the demand. The city market is supplied largely by market gardeners in the outlying country districts who find it absolutely impossible to market their vegetables on account of the impassable state of the roads. Parsnips, cabbage, and beets are scarce, particularly the two former. Onions are plentiful but the demand is not so great as it was. Parsley is particularly scarce. Green-house asparagus has appeared on the market in small lots and is selling at 25c a bunch. Last week asparagus sold on the New York market for the fancy price of $12 to $18 per dozen buches. Supplies of lettuce and rhubarb are plentiful but the market for them is slow. Potatoes are 10c easier. The demand for California celery is fair, but suffers by comparison with that of former years. There is a brisk demand for green cucumbers which are 25c firmer than last week's quotation prices. Canadian green cucumbers are on the market this week for the first time and are quoted at from $1.75 to $2 per dozen. Our quotations are as follows:

Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market is inactive this week, and prices continue to fluctuate on account of the manipulations of speculators. During the last 12 days there has been a rise and subsequent fall in prices in Chicago, so that in the market then and now as far as prices are concerned there is not much difference. Manitoba wheat, northern, No. 1 and No. 2, are ½c and 1c firmer re-

FLOUR.

The demand for flour is fair with prices firm, but the market continues uncertain owing to the manipulations of grain speculators. Until the grain market becomes steadier a forecast of the flour market is out of the question. Very little wheat is coming in from local sources, although grain from the West has begun to move more freely. Last week's quotations are unchanged. We quote as follows:

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, March 17th, 1904.

Groceries.

ONCE more the sinning of the weather has proven a foe to trade. The long looked for thaw lasted only a couple of days and the country roads are in serious shape. No doubt there will be a rush shortly and things will be humming in all branches of trade. The feature of the market was sugar again this week, which advanced another 5c per hundred; no doubt in sympathy with the strong New York markets, that is, for both raw and refined. This marks an advance of 10c per hundred within a week. Syrups and molasses are featureless although the market is strong, no change in prices is recorded. Some rather noticeable features in connection with the war have cropped up. One is the price of sulphur which has risen from 1¾ to 2c per lb. Camphor has jumped up from 75c to $1 a lb. When it is known, however, that most of the camphor comes from Japan, this is not surprising. For tapioca the demand has been first-rate, while sago is firm but slower. There seems to be a sympathetic movement prevailing for all lines of breakfast cereals. Low grades of rice have declined 10c, effecting only grocers in the Quebec Guild. Grenoble walnuts have become much firmer and are quoted at 12c and 13c, according to size and quantity. Brazil nuts are much easier, being quoted at 10c and 11c, according to size and quantity. Dried fruits are still dead, and the demand is limited. For green fruit there is a good demand for fine sound California stock. Florida grape fruit has jumped up $1.50. In fish there are some noticeable changes as quotations will show. Oysters have dropped a little and Tom Cods have dropped away down, in some cases as low as $1. Fish is very scarce. Japan teas have advanced a penny in London and Ceylons and other teas are expected to follow.

SUGAR.

Yesterday sugar again advanced, showing 10c per hundred rise within a week. This takes effect in Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba, and strange to say a half an hour after a similar advance was quoted for the Maritime Provinces. On the local market there is a marked firmness, and a very decided probability of an increased demand keeping right up.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Dullness marked syrup and molasses this week, and while the markets are strong the demand is good from day to day, and a decided increase in strength is expected. There is no doubt about the statement already made, that there is an abundance of old molasses in Newfoundland and other places, and that Barbadoes will be low. We quote as follows :

COFFEE.

The demand for Coffee is increasing, and it is expected prices will steadily harden, as the receipts are reported to be smaller than usual. However, no marked advance has been quoted locally, although in New York there have been some wild quotations during the week. The big dealers report that the longer buyers hold off, the greater must be the demand later on. We quote as follows :

TEA.

Tea has dominated the interest locally by noticeable advances in Japans and Ceylons. One large dealer stated that he had disposed of 5,000 half chest packages of Japan tea, since Feb. 8th. There has been an active demand and the market has developed a strong tendency for all descriptions of tea. There is every prospect that the recent advances will be maintained. The medium qualities have noticeably hardened up, especially Japan style China Congous, which advanced from 8 to 10c, and to 10 and 10½c. An interview with Mr. Hunt, the well-known tea dealer, elsewhere in this issue, tells tersely the Japanese situation. However, there is another important feature in teas, in-asmuch as the Ceylon and India tea is expected to advance. The tea market will no doubt be very interesting right along. CANNED GOODS

The condition of the market remains about the same as last week, except that the old stocks are getting low, as they usually do at this time of the year, and there is very little change in prices. Foreign Dried Fruits.

The demand for dried fruits is limited but improvements in currants has been maintained, and even accentuated. From abroad it is learned that holders show every disposition to meet buyers, and business may be expected to continue and develop in activity. An improvement is also reported from abroad in the demand for Sultanas. Holders in this line as not so friendly, as they seem to think that the excessive yield of Smyrna fruit this season will be averaged by the corresponding diminution in the ensuing one. Dates have shown a remarkably good demand, but the price has changed to 3½ to 3¾c per lb. Our quotations are as follows :

Green Fruits.

Things are awakening in the green fruit trade, and that lot of frozen oranges referred to last week is still clogging the market, some of them selling as low as $1.50 to $2. Good stock, however, is bringing good prices, and Florida oranges have advanced from $4.75 to $5.25 a box. Valencia oranges, 420s, have dropped 25c and are selling freely at $3.75. Florida grape fruit advanced from $5.50 to $7. Lemons have a good demand, $2.50 to $3. There has been a noticeable drop in Florida tomatoes of $1 per crate, and a drop also in California cauliflowers owing to the poor quality of the goods on the market. Apples are selling freely at full prices. The risk in handling naturally increases as the season advances, and retailers should buy from hand to mouth. Boston lettuce is selling well at $1 a dozen. Cucumbers at $2.75 a dozen, and watercress at 60c a dozen. We quote :

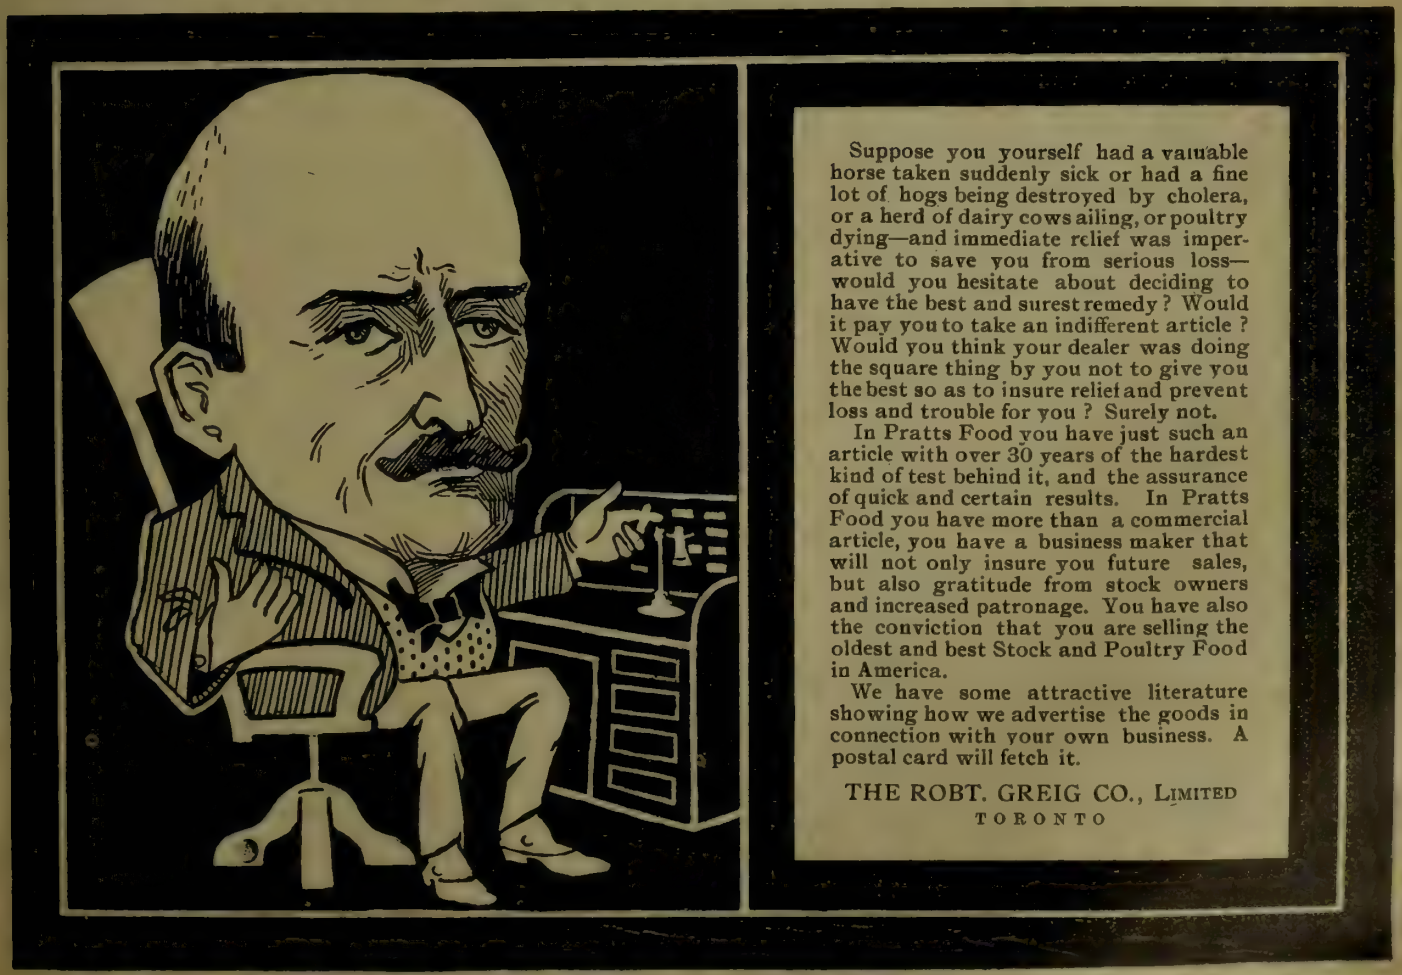
Fish.

With the sanity of nature, fish grows less interesting as Lent fades. Fresh fish is easier in price owing to the better supply. Salt fish continues in good demand, and frozen herring are practically finished for the season. Prices for other lines are slightly higher. Apart from this the fish market is in good shape, and stocks are very light. A slight error was made in the drop in salmon last issue, which was quoted as



Suppose you yourself had a valuable horse taken suddenly sick or had a fine lot of hogs being destroyed by cholera, or a herd of dairy cows ailing, or poultry dying—and immediate relief was imperative to save you from serious loss—would you hesitate about deciding to have the best and surest remedy? Would it pay you to take an indifferent article? Would you think your dealer was doing the square thing by you not to give you the best so as to insure relief and prevent loss and trouble for you? Surely not.
In Pratts Food you have just such an article with over 30 years of the hardest kind of test behind it, and the assurance of quick and certain results. In Pratts Food you have more than a commercial article, you have a business maker that will not only insure you future sales, but also gratitude from stock owners and increased patronage. You have also the conviction that you are selling the oldest and best Stock and Poultry Food in America.

Country Produce.

EGGS.

The fresh egg which has been almost extinct for the past few months, except for millionaires, has been discovered, and the conditions are improving. There is no immediate likelihood however of there being any sharp break in the market, and retailers are advised to be careful and to adjust their prices from one to two cents from day to day. Report from the country indicates that the roads are still bad and large supplies are not expected until there is some improvement in the means of getting about. The market has again weakened, however, and for single cases 26c is quoted, with sales of fair sized lots at 25c. As Easter nears the price of eggs will diminish.

BEANS.

The bean market is still stronger, and Western dealers are blamed for this, in fact one wholesaler stated yesterday that he could not understand the bean market. Primes sold at $1.40 to $1.50 per bushel in car lots. Smaller lots at $1.55 to $1.65, and lots of one to five barrels $1.60 to $1.65.

HONEY.

Honey is very scarce, and there is a decided advance in price. White clover comb honey is bringing from 14c to 16c. There is not a bit of buckwheat on the market. The price if available remaining the same, 6c to 7c. Extracted white clover remains unchanged at 8½c to 9c.

POTATOES.

Americans have been after our potatoes this last week, and an advance in price has been the result. Shipments have been made to Boston and New York, and other New England points. Dealers have been compelled to pay higher prices for first-class stock. Stocks are very light here, and 75c to 80c was quoted in car lots on track, being a decided advance of nearly 10c, and 85c to 90c per bag was quoted. Offerings are fair.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

The season is at hand for new maple products of all kinds, and great care should be taken in avoiding fraudulent goods. It is all very well for the dealer to say he has pure maple syrup, but there is really no new maple syrup on the market now. If the dealer is sufficiently honest to leave out the word "pure" and is willing to confess that the maple sugar he is selling you is mixed with granulated or any pure product, he could not be subject to criticism. Prices remain about the same. Sugar was quoted very scarce. We quote :

Maple syrup, in wood, per lb.	0 05½	0 06
Maple syrup, in large tins	0 70	0 75
Pure sugar, per lb.	0 07	0 07½
Pure Beauce sugar, per lb.	0 08½	0 09

FEED.

There is a better demand for feed, and trade is much better every way. The advance in Ontario brand has been maintained, and shorts also remain strong. We quote :

Ontario bran, in bulk	....	19 00

OATMEAL.

Oatmeal has kept firm and rolled oats has held steadily to the advance made. There is a good demand everywhere. Plenty of jobbing is done on the basis of $2.50 a bag and $5.15 to $5.20 a barrel. Oatmeals are quoted by the wholesale houses as follows :

Fine oatmeal, bags	....	2 90
Standard oatmeal, bags	....	2 90

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., Mar. 11, 1904.

MUTTON from the pulp of sugar beets is certainly a novel "by-product" of the beet sugar industry. That, however, is one of the results of the commencement of the beet sugar industry at Raymond, Alberta. The big beet sugar refinery there built by the Mormon settlement, and now in operation, has been finishing off between three and four thousand muttons on the pulp, and as the cost of the pulp for the purpose is but 50c per ton it is a very cheap feed. The pulp is not good as an exclusive ration, having to be combined with hay and grain, but it has turned out most satisfactorily.

A proof that the mutton is all right is that P. Burns, the millionaire cattleman and butcher, has purchased the lot. It has always been urged as the great fault of Western feeding of all butcher's stock that it is not "finished" as the same stock would be in the East. In this one instance that difficulty is removed. Following the establishment of the sugar refinery at Raymond, there is to be a consequent extension of the area in beets this season. The Winter has been favorable for the preparation of the land and in addition to the ground last year several thousand acres of new territory have been contracted for. It is largely owing to the prospects of this industry that such a large influx of Mormon settlers to the district now occupied in Southern Alberta is expected. The report is that three thousand families are expected to come in this year. The town of Raymond, the centre of the Mormon settlement, now has a population of 2,000. This trade, like all that of Western Alberta, is largely tributary to the Vancouver wholesale trade.

The results of the recent provincial mining convention in Victoria are making themselves felt in Vancouver. There have been some meetings held here to accentuate the effects of the convention in the way of increasing the interest taken by the business community generally in the welfare of the mining industry. Many wholesale merchants not directly interested or engaged in mining enterprises have taken hold of the movement to establish a flourishing branch of the mining association here, and it is likely to be a big success.

The wholesale trade is deeply interested in the welfare of mining in the province, and they recognize the fact. It is a well understood thing that the trade sends a large number of travellers to the Kootenays and receives a large patronage from the mining centres there. The value of coast mining to the business of the coast cities in not so well understood because not so prominent. There has been wonderful development, however, in the trade with up-coast points, and large quantities of supplies for many prospectors and miners are shipped from here, especially in the Spring, Summer and Fall seasons. In order to meet this rapidly growing interest and aid it in every possible way, the wholesale and other business men of the city are taking hold of the mining association.

TERMS: F.O.B. MONTREAL, Net 30 days or 1% 10 days.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie.

MONTREAL.

Princess May, which arrived a day or two ago from Skagway, give particulars of development on Bullion creek and other properties in the new Alsek district. The trade being done by White Horse merchants in out-fitting parties and miners who are going in to the new fields is rapidly increasing. Every steamer northbound takes a full complement of passengers, and now it is difficult to get accommodation without booking some time ahead.

There has been a slight falling off in the size of shipments, due partly to the fact that over-the-ice consignments to Dawson have practically all gone forward, and that the stocks at White Horse have been liberally filled up in advance. As soon as large parties now preparing to go North start out, there will be a heavy movement of goods North. Shipments for the open season on the Yukon river have of course not yet begun. It is not to be expected that that trade will begin until the end of next month, as the river does not open till then.

Local wholesale and retail trade has been rather quiet. Interior orders have been lighter, as there is so much snow in the country the commencement of season's operations has not begun. On the coast, there has been so much catchy weather of late that from the logging camps up coast to the building trade in the cities there has been much interruption. The fact that the weather in the Northwest and Manitoba has been severe keeps back the lumber shipments which would otherwise have begun to be heavy by this time. The unsettled conditions in the lumber market are also partially responsible for the slowness.

In local markets there has not been much to feature. The condition of the staple grocery market is steady. Two ships from the Old Country have arrived on the coast this week. The China Mutual steamer Ping Suey discharged at Victoria and has moved up to Vancouver, where she will deliver several hundred tons to local merchants. The sailing ship Hougomont, also from Liverpool, has reached Victoria and her full cargo is for the wholesale trade of that city and Vancouver.

From Vancouver, Wash., the namesake city of this metropolis, comes the report that the Fruit Growers' Association of Clarke Country are discouraged with the results from their efforts in the prune packing industry. They have a prune packing plant which is being run on only a small scale. Weaker condition of the market, they say, has caused the association to look gloomily on the outlook. The probability is that many of the orchards will be grubbed out this season, in fact some growers have begun to take out prune trees.

In the provision trade there is a marked scarcity of good butter. Some Eastern Canadian fresh made creamery is expected at present, but it has not arrived here yet. The supply of local dairy is slightly improved, but it cuts no figure to any extent in the market. Most of it comes direct to the retail trade from the makers or is bought in a jobbing way by the trade at the weekly New Westminster market. The local creameries are not yet putting up any great quantity. Price of California is still too high to bring it in here, and there is little likelihood at the present moment that there will be any importations from there this year.

Eggs locally and from California are easier this week. The local fresh stock will now sell at 35c retail, while the California stock is easy at 28c to the trade. Next week it is likely that supplies from California will be still cheaper. There is no possibility of any from the East yet for some time.

Fruits are fairly active for the sorts that are in the market. While oranges have been very cheap owing to big stocks in California with very light demand, there is a decided firming up of quotations from 'Frisco this week. The weather in states east of the mountains has been so severe that the early season for oranges was a dead failure. Now, however, demand is brightening up and prices are therefore better. There were a few frosted oranges received here this week, which are about the last "bargain-day" oranges this season. Prices are now quoted for navels all the way up to $2.75 from $2 per case. No seedlings moving. Lemons are selling fairly well at $3 to $3.50 for fancy, and $2.50 to $3 for choice.

Apples locally are scarce. Some Coldstreams are still in the market and a few are arriving, but it is reported that they are oversold, and will thus be short at the end. The lower mainland stock is practically out. Principal receipts are now from Washington, with a few from Oregon. Prices are about $1.75 for these with $2 and $2.25 quoted for the fancy Okanagan fruit of the Coldstream ranch.

Whether tomatoes should be classed as fruit or vegetable, it is interesting to note that this market has them all the year round. Before the last of local grown stocks in the late Fall are out, the hot-house stocks from California are coming in early in the Winter, long before Xmas. That supply keeps up steadily. Now the stock is coming from Mexico, via 'Frisco. The market is supplied with the Mexican fruit now and will have it until the California stock comes on. Then the local Victoria and Vancouver hot-house stocks will begin to come in and later on in the early Summer there will be open air grown stock from Spence's Bridge. After that the later growths of the lower mainland round out the year's supply. The fact is that the market has not been bare of ripe tomatoes all Winter.

Fresh cauliflower at $1.25 per doz. to the trade, asparagus tips at 15c per lb., celery at 80c per doz., and rhubarb at 15c per lb., are the features of the fresh vegetable supply this week. All these stocks are coming from California. Other lines are, of course, stocked regularly as well.

Some little movement upward in the potato market is noted this week, as Ashcrofts, which were down to $20 wholesale, are again up to $22 per ton. There may be considerabfe quantities in the hands of growers on the lower mainland but not in any large lots, as these are usually heard of before this date. Chances of higher prices are very probable.

Local onions are really out, very few dealers having any stock to speak of. There was a small quantity, the last of the season, offering from Ashcroft this week, and it was all taken up readily at 3½c per lb. by the jobbing trade. As noted formerly, there will be a stock from New Zealand by the next Australian steamer.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, March 14, 1904.

ABOUT the usual March business is being done. Matters might be brisker and no doubt there will be more activity in the course of a few weeks. Considerable interest attaches to the numerous market changes of the last few weeks. Conditions throughout the province are more favorable from a commercial standpoint than earlier in the year. During February there were only three assignments in the province, and these were small traders whose total liabilities amounted to less than ten thousand dollars. One trader absconded, but the liabilities were not large. Three others are seeking compromises or extensions of time. The record since January has therefore been very favorable and it is hoped that with the opening of Spring collections generally will improve.

Locally the flour market is very strong; in addition to the advances at the mills, an important factor is the scarcity of supplies at this point and the difficulty of getting more from Ontario. An idea of the prices may be gathered from the fact that hard wheat patents are quoted at $6 to $6.10 in car lots. Oatmeal and rolled oats are 40 cents a barrel higher than at last report, and we now quote $5.10 to $5.20 in a jobbing way. Cornmeal has advanced to $3.05 per barrel.

There have been several advances in canned goods. British Columbia salmon has been advanced to $5.75 per case for No. 1 and $5 for No. 2. Beans, peas and corn were all advanced about 5c a dozen by jobbers last week. American pork is firmer and 50c higher at $20 for clear fat back. Lard has advanced ½c a pound.

Eggs, which have been high all Winter, are dropping rapidly and are now jobbing at 22c. Cheese is rather dull and the market is easier at 12c. Some very fair shipments have been made to the West Indies during the last month and jobbers hope to get rid of their stocks before the new make is marketed. Oats have advanced to 48c a bushel. Hay is scarce throughout the province and at some country points $16 a ton are being paid. A Halifax, where hay is brought in from Quebec, quotations run from $13.50 to $14.50 per ton. Feeds also are about 50c a ton dearer.

There has been quite a change in the salt trade of this province in the last ten years. At one time about all the salt sold here was imported from Liverpool. Better grades are now sold almost exclusively, the well known Windsor and Rice's salt of domestic production having supplanted the imported article for household purposes.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

A HEAVY fall of snow during the week has again tied up traffic considerably and this has had its effect in reducing the volume of trade. It is like making bricks without straw to get anything in the way of actual news in the grocery trade. Sugars advanced 5c. and are now quoted $4.85 for granulated and $4.20 for bright yellows; everything else is holding firm at the prices quoted last week.

Green Fruit—So far as can be learned there have been no further developments in the matter of auctioning oranges which was reported last week. At present it is not possible to quote oranges accurately, but other lines are moving along without much change, shipments to country points being necessarily restricted. Apples are quoted at $3.50 to $4.50 for spies. Malaga grapes $9 per keg, bananas $4 per bunch; tomatoes $1.25 per basket; lettuce 75c. per dozen; cucumbers $2 per dozen.

Cured Meats—Markets are firm at the prices quoted last week and there is a heavy demand from British Columbia and all Western points for all lines of cured meats, with prices inclined to go higher. The trade expect the demand to increase still further with the influx of immigration now setting in.

Eggs—Eggs were just beginning to ease up a little when the snowstorm retarded shipments and dealers are still offering 28 to 30c. for fresh gathered. A short run of mild weather will inevitably bring the prices down with a thump.

Butter—At present nothing is being done in creamery except to dispose of small lots of storage goods. Dairy butter is offering in very limited quantities, in fact it cannot be said to be coming in at all in a wholesale way and dealers quote 25c per lb. for separator made bricks for anything at all choice.

A good many potatoes have come in during the week and prices have declined; farmers' loads are now worth 65 to 70c and the retail price is 90c as against $1. Carrots are exceptionally scarce on this market; in fact the supply seems to be almost exhausted, the crop last Fall being a small one.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only,not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are selling Oregon prunes at very low prices.

E. D. Marceau, Montreal, is offering special values in Japan, Ceylon and Indian teas this week. See ad. in another section.

White & Co., Toronto, received a shipment of fresh picked plums from South Africa last week. The shipment, after travelling by sea to London, and thence to New York, reached Toronto in prime condition. The experimeot goes to show that with the good system of ventilation and cold storage in use on Atlantic steamers, fruit can be carried such remarkable distances and still be marketable on arrival.

J. H. Maiden, Montreal, and district agent for Smith Bros.' (Beachvill, Ont.) Star Fly Felts, reports meeting with good demand for Spring orders.

The extra special Scotch whisky of Macleay, Duff & Co., Glasgow, with B. O. Beland, of Montreal, as sole Canadian agent, is taking an important place in the market, the last order consisting of 500 cases—one of many others.

Quaker Oats and Banner Oats are now coming along in good style. The slight delay caused by the fire at the American Cereal Company's Peterborough mill is overcome, so H. Wright, their Toronto broker, is wearing the smile-that-won't-come-off.

Two cars California celery arrived this week for White & Co., Toronto.

A shipment of genuine Roquefort Cheese of very fine quality has just been received by A. F. MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto. The MacLaren Co. control the sale on this continent of the finest brand of Roquefort Cheese which is made and are, therefore, able to offer to Canadian buyers the choicest of French Roquefort Cheese. They will be pleased to quote you if you will communicate with them.

"Humpty Dumpty" egg crates are in stock with the Eby, Blain Co., Toronto-who report very satisfactory sales for this line.

D. M. Rennoldson, wholesale grocer, Montreal, reports good sales of G. F. Sutton, Sons & Co.'s (London) table delicacies. The quality of this company's products which are well known and exten(ively sold in Great Britain, should bring good orders to Mr. Rennoldson.

McWilliam & Everist, Toronto, have engaged in the early Spring vegetable trade, and are receiving large quantities of lettuce, radishes, rhubarb, etc.

The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, are quoting very low figures on new crop Japan "Patna" and "Rangoon" Rice, to arrive.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, advertise having some two million automatic paper bags to offer at less than manufacturers' prices. This should interest the trade.

The prices quoted by Hudon, Hebert & Cie, Montreal, in their ad. in another part of this issue, should tempt buyers—the figures speak for themselves.

McWilliam & Everist, Toronto, have received a car of "Rose" brand, California navel oranges, also a car of "V" brand, extra choice navels.

The offer on brooms made by L. Chaput, File & Cie, Montreal in their advertisement in another section this week, should tempt buyers. The payment of freight in 6 doz. lots looks attractive.

Buyers of Rio coffee should communicate with H. P. Eckardt & Co.

J. M. Douglas & Co., Montreal, manufacturers of Blueol advise the trade that in buying Blueol the merchant obtains 10 packages more to the box than any other blue. Blueol contains 50 packages each, 4 squares to the box. The pecuniary advantage is obvious and should interest all dealers.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, report the arrival of two cars of California celery, one car of "Magnolia" brand and "California Beauty" California navel oranges, one car of Valencia onions and a shipment of tomatoes from Florida.

The attention of the trade is called ta the advertisement in another part of this issue of L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, who offer in vinegars some 25,000 gallons bought before the advance. A non-corrosive pump goes with every 100 gallon order.

The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, have a special snap in an imported pickle to retail at 10c.

ST. JOHN'S TEA IMPORTATIONS.

READERS of Grocer are directed to the statistics which appear on page 15 of this week's issue. T. H. Estabrooks, tea importer and blender, St. John, N. B., is authority for the statement that St. John is the natural port for the distribution of Ceylon and Indian teas in Canada, having imported 3,377,165 lbs. of black and green tea direct from Ceylon and India during the year ending June 30, 1903. Direct importations of tea from the country of growth are growing more and more in favor, Russia playing a leading part in importing direct in large quantities via the Siberian Railway from China, etc., instead of buying indirectly through the London, Eng., market as heretofore.

Large quantities of tea are imported by Canada indirectly through London and other intermediate centres, however. Mr. Estabrook also places the port of St. John very near the top of the list of Canadian cities importing the largest amounts of tea from all sources, giving it third place. Montreal and Toronto coming first and second respectively with the largest total imports of tea from all sources and are closely followed by St. John with a total of 4,448,942 lbs., for the year ending June 30, 1903.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

Office of The Canadian Grocer,
St. John, N.B., March 17, 1904.

ONE feature of interest to the grocery trade is the small stocks of fish held. In some lines these are smaller than for years. In dry codfish it is said prices have not been as high for 10 or 15 years. In general all lines are high and firmly held. The rise is a very noticeable exception as prices are generally low. Flour, which has shown the most active advance, while firm, is at least no higher. Winter port business is drawing to a close. The number of immigrants landing here this season has not been as large as last. Less live stock has been exported; of course last season, in this line, was exceptional, owing to the embargo in connection with American ports. In other ways business has been satisfactory. The Canadian Pacific Railway which now carry goods all the way from Liverpool to Hong Kong without once letting them out of their hands, are easily the greatest transport company in the world.

The Winter is breaking up and the trade is preparing for Spring business. In dry goods, in particular, St. John shows very wide expansion, and this Spring the imports have been greatly in advance of any former season. St. John, which now has the largest number of wholesale grocers of any city of its size in Canada, is to have one more. There is no doubt business would be in better condition with fewer wholesale houses or so-called wholesale houses. The population with which we can do business is not large.

Oil—This is a line showing few changes lately. Burning oil continues high. Lubricating oils are firm but this is a line in which value rather than price is the factor. The low price of linseed oil has resulted in large sales. Turpentine continues high. Fish oils are high and stocks are light.

Salt—In Liverpool coarse salt large stocks are held. Coal is the large factor in the cost of this line and as the coal supply is usually quickly effected by war, dealers feel it is safe to carry full stocks. Freights are also easily effected by war which is a large item in the price. In fine salt it is early for much demand. Stocks are light. Canadian prices, particularly in bulk salt, are slightly lower. Considerable quantities of box salt are now packed here.

Canned Goods—Our market seems well supplied. Holders in some lines are getting some advance but the market has shown less change here than in the West. Tomatoes show an advance and corn is higher. Blueberries also show a good profit. In meats prices are higher. Dealers had bought freely at the lower prices. Salmon is held firm. Lobsters are firm. Clams are light stock. Haddies are very scarce. There is still a light supply of domestic sardines and kippers.

Green Fruit—There is improved business. Apples are higher, stock is light. There is good enquiry. Valencia oranges are higher and have a large sale. California oranges are low but sale is light and Floridas and Jamaicas are about out of the market. Lemons continue low. In other lines business is small at this season.

Dried Fruit—Business is dull. In raisins full stocks are held and market is easy. Prunes have a fair sale, small sizes are scarce. Apricots are too high for business. Dates are low and market well supplied. Figs and peels have little sale at this season. Evaporated apples are firm, and sales are firm. Currants have a regular demand at even figures. Onions are higher, Valencias are more freely sold than at any previous season. In peanuts prices are still advancing.

Sugar—There has been a further advance, so that the last two weeks show an advance of 15 cents. Prices are very firm and dealers are holding full stocks.

Molasses—In both Barbadoes and Porto Rico further supply of new goods is expected. The market is easy. The new Customs regulations will have little effect here as no low grade New Orleans is imported.

Fish—In dry codfish the price is higher than for many years. Stock held is very light and there has been little chance of lower prices for sometime. Pollock are scarce and high. Smoked herring are almost out of the market. Pickled fish are light supply and fresh fish are scarce. Haddies are higher and the season is about over. These are bad conditions for Lent.

Flour, Feed and Meal—In flour while the advance is firmly held there is no change. Stock was light owing to slow deliveries by the railway but in this regard there is improvement. In oatmeal very high prices rule and oats are high. Barley and peas rule at full figures. Beans are unchanged. Seeds are rather higher. Dealers are now pushing sales. Cornmeal rules firm.

MAPLE SYRUP QUOTATIONS.

The following quotations on maple syrups were unavoidably crowded out of "prices current" this week:

BEAVER BRAND.

CANADIAN CATSUP ABROAD.

The Organ, Elliot Co., Montreal, have recently closed a contract with an English house for the sale of their Royal Hygienic Tomato Catsup. The contract calls for delivery of not less than 200 gross per month. The first shipments to London met with ready acceptation by the trade. It speaks well for the quality of the goods put up by the Organ, Elliot Co., to receive the endorsation of a prominent London firm. Representation in several of the leading Canadian cities is still open.

A commission agent in Belfast writes to The Canadian Grocer saying that he is anxious to represent Canadian firms in that city. Anyone in Canada desiring his services may correspond with him through The Canadian Grocer.

DIDN'T KNOW BEANS.

"TO know beans" is a famous slang expression which originated in Boston. It means much there. Here, however, it does not apply in trade to a man's knowledge, except when it refers to the beans we grow in the garden. The Province of Quebec has been somewhat rebellious in the bean market. So much so that the great western bean companies such as the Canada Bean Co., of Chatham, Ont., who control about seven-eighths of the bean business of this country also rebelled. Beans went up in price last week which no doubt was caused by the fact that the crop is almost entirely out of the hands of the farmers, and the snow blockade has deterred shipment.

N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co., Chatham, and R. Newman, of the Canada Bean Company, were in Montreal this week as ambassadors to sift the bean question, in fact it was from these gentlemen that the facts quoted were obtained. Their mission here should interest every grocer or provision dealer. They wish to establish a grade for beans which will prevent fraud. Hand-picked and primes are familiar to all dealers. To tell the difference is another question. Messrs. Newman and Stevens have a bean tester which does the trick. Only last night they tested some beans for a big wholesale grocery house of Montreal, which were found to pick six pounds instead of three, and were worth about 15c a bushel less than what they were reputed to be. The man who sold these beans is well-known, and perhaps he was unconscious of the fraud in which he was participating. If not, it is well for him and others so inclined, to take warning that no such action will be tolerated in the markets of Montreal; in fact Mr. Stevens has arranged with W. A. Winterstein, local manager for the Canada Flour Mills Co., to have a bean tester at the Montreal branch, which may be used by any firm in Montreal. They are doing this for the benefit of the trade, and would consider it a favor if firms would use it at their own pleasure.

Owing to disorganization of freight traffic the R. & J. H. Simpson Company, Guelph, report that large quantities of goods have been received in their district and delivered by team, a distance of 30 to 40 miles.

THE IMPORT DUTY ON TEA.

THE Indian Tea Association, London, Eng., and the Ceylon Association in London, have sent a memorial to Mr. Austin Chamberlain, M. P., Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the subject of the import duty on tea. The document states that for 16 years before 1900 the increase in consumption averaged 4½ million lbs. per annum, but since that date consumption has practically remained stationary, the figures being—1901, 255,873,082 lbs.; 1902, 254,440,188 lbs.; 1903, 255,365,953 lbs. The natural increase in consumption due to the normal growth of the population in these last two years should have been 3¾ million of lbs.; so that it is evident that Englishmen are consuming less tea per head than formerly, which no doubt is in a large measure due to the raising of the duty to 6d. per lb. This rate of duty has most injuriously affected the tea producers of India and Ceylon in another manner. Increased supplies of the commonest grades of China tea have been imported into England, a not inconsiderable quantity of which has been rejected by the United States customs authorities as unfit for consumption. This class of tea is admitted into the United Kingdom without question, as there is no enactment to prevent it, and sold to importers under the cost of production. Being blended here with the higher qualities of British-grown teas, it has in large measure had the effect of saving the consumer from the incidence of the extra duty and thus throwing the burden on the producer of British-grown tea. Figures are given to show the extent to which Indian and Ceylon teas have been displaced in England by other growths since 1900, and the memorial states that if the people of this country were protected from the dumping of rejected teas from other countries and standards of quality enacted by Government, the association believe that, with the importation of uniformly good tea, coupled with a reduction in the duty, consumption would increase instead of remaining stationary as it is now doing. They urge that in other countries the duty on tea is being generally reduced or abolished, and say in conclusion: "We desire to point out that although we were aware when the duty was increased on account of the late war that its incidence would fall heavily on the industry we made no formal protest, as we felt that our loyalty to the Empire demanded that we should in no way embarrass the Government in its scheme of taxation at such a critical time; but we now feel we are entitled to receive the fullest consideration and relief that the Government can afford.

SOAP TREE OF ALGERIA

Steps are being taken in Algeria to manufacture natural soap on a large scale from a tree known as sapindus utilis. This plant, which has long been known in Japan, China, and India, bears a fruit of about the size of a horse-chestnut, smooth and round. The color varies from a yellowish green to brown. The inner part is of a dark color and has an oily kernal. The tree bears fruit in its sixth year and yields from 55 to 220 pounds of fruit, which can easily be harvested in the Fall. By using water or alcohol the saponaceous ingredient of the fruit is extracted. The cost of production is said to be small and the soap, on account of possessing no alkaline qualities, is superior to the ordinary soap of commerce.

ENQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade recently received at the Canadian Government office in London, Eng.:

1. A London firm with South African connections has asked to be placed in touch with reliable shippers of flour from Canada.

2. A north of England firm has requested to be put in communication with a few of the largest exporters of eggs from Canada who are not already represented in their district.

[The names of those making inquiries may be obtained from the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

PEANUTS ARE "CORNERED."

Private telegrams from Norfolk, Va., show that the recent sensational advance in the price of Spanish peanuts was due to the working of a "corner" by large speculators. Spanish peanuts advanced to the highest price in 15 years. Speculators bought up 30,000 bags of the nuts for a syndicate in North Carolina, thereby "cornering" the market. The price of Spanish nuts has advanced so high that it is now profitable to import this grade of peanuts from Marseilles, France, the world's largest market for African and Asian nuts.

CANADIAN TRADE.

The trade returns for the eight months which terminated on February 29 show an increase in Canada's foreign trade over the same period of the year previous of over $13,000,000. The aggregate was $313,627,519, which includes imports for consumption, exports, and coin and bullion. The exports exhibit a falling off in several lines amounting to $5,232,247. This is undoubtedly due to the severe weather and heavy snowstorms which have crippled the railways, especially in Western Ontario, and prevented the movement of much freight.

Biscuits And Confectionery

British Candy Trade in 1903.

THE year 1903 was one of the least prosperous known to the British confectioner for a long time. The wave of depression all over the country undoubtedly had much to do with the unsatisfactory state of the candy trade. Directly, confectioners had to contend with a comparatively high price for raw materials. After having been able to buy raw material at cheap prices for many years they found it difficult to adapt themselves to the new condtions prevailing.

A large portion of the confectioner's trade is in what is known as 2 oz. 1d. goods. Buyers refuse to pay more than a certain price for these goods. It was therefore imperative that goods be kept somewhere near prevailing prices if any business was to be done. The manufacturer had the other alternative, to reduce the quality of the product, which meant an immediate curtainlment of the demand. British candy makers up to the present, have kept up the quality and advanced their prices only the merest trifle.

Novelties were scarce. No epoch machines made their appearance in the trade, although a greater tendency was noticed in the more important factories to install labor-saving machinery. Prob ably the greatest attention was paid to the various chocolate covering machines, some of which have reached a point of high efficiency although there is much scope for improvement in the matter of speed. The pulling machine, which has caused so much controversy in America found its way into certain works, but the taste for pulled candies among the British people will have to be much more developed than it is, before extended employment can be given to such a machine.

It must be confessed that the outlook for the trade is by no means promising. the fiscal agitation is producing a feeling of uncertainty in commercial circles, and until the policy is put on a certain basis—one way or the other—an improvement can hardly be hoped for. Again, the relatively high cost of the basic material is a main factor against any considerable return of prosperity; and until that is reduced a return to old conditions is impossible. In the face of all the difficulties attendant upon existing times confectioners look forward in 1904 to the bare maintenance of the present volume of trade; but until there is some modification of the prices of raw material and greater stability in the general trade conditions of the country, no great increase in demand or enhancement of profits is expected.

Cakes Will be Dearer.

FOLLOWING the example of Toronto confectioners who recently increased the prices of cakes from 25 to 30 per cent. on account of the high prices of flour and butter, and the scarcity of eggs, London confectioners are said to be considering the advisability of taking similar action.

A local confectioner states that at present prices of the raw ingredients there is no money in cakes. Prices should have been raised long ago, but London confectioners are not bound together by an association, and each confectioner fears the other's competition in case he raises the price. But the prices of cakes must go up, and that very shortly.

The increase in Toronto is for one month only ending the 1st of April.

Confectionery for April 1st.

Tempting looking chocolates, whose interior consists of cotton, sawdust, soap, etc., are quickly bought by the would-be "fooler" for April Fool Day. Grocers and confectioners should provide a small stock of these for the approaching occasion.

NOTES.

Supplementary letters patent have been granted to the White Candy Co., St. John, N.B., increasing their capital stock to $75,000.

J. F. Roelofson, managing director of A. J. Stewart, confectioner, Toronto, was in New York recently negotiating for export trade. He was successful in opening up some very desirable foreign accounts, and in this connection it is pleasing to note that in the face of keen competition on the part of leading American makers, Canadian goods were chosen on the score of quality.

PURE GOLD TALK.

No. 9.

One of the much abused articles of the grocery trade is Tomato Catsup. Makers abuse their opportunity for one thing; and the grocer abuses the goods after he buys them. Tomato Catsup is put in the window and has to submit to fierce sunlight or to the rigorous treatment accorded by Jack Frost. Between these extremes lies the uneven temperature of every grocery store. Can it be wondered at that Tomato Catsup sometimes goes bad or loses its peculiar quality?

With all abuse

Pure Gold Tomato Catsup

fulfils the Pure Gold claims, and is sustained by the Pure Gold guarantee, which says "Money back" if the goods fall down on the score of attractiveness, saleability and quality. Given tomato fruit of the finest sorting and pure spices, and Pure Gold preparation, it is not to be wondered at that Pure Gold Tomato Catsup is trustworthy if given fair treatment.

And the grocery trade has this satisfaction—that those who KNOW buy Pure Gold goods. We haven't every grocer in Canada on our books we are sorry to confess.

AN ALUM MOUNTAIN.

One of the recently discovered nautral curiosities of China is an "alum mountain," 1,900 feet in height and about 10 miles in circumference at the base. The Chinese quarry the alum or masses containing alum, in large blocks, which are heated in ovens made for the purpose, and afterwards dissolved in boiling water. The alum then crystallises in layers about half a foot in thickness, and is cut up into 10-pound pieces. Its principal use is in the purification of water.

BETTER CHEESE BOXES.

A STRONG appeal has been made for better cheese boxes by J. A. Ruddick, chief of the dairy division, Ottawa, at the various dairy conventions recently held through the country. "Boxes are," said he, "necessary to protect the cheese from injury in transportation, to facilitate their handling and to permit their being piled several tiers deep in a warehouse without being crushed out of shape. Without such boxes cheese cannot be delivered in Great Britain in presentable condition. At present a large percentage of cheese shipments are landed on the other side with 25 per cent. of the boxes broken; but what is more serious, broken boxes in a shipment, not only detracts from the actual value of the cheese which they once contained, but make the whole lot less attractive to a purchaser."

"Various reasons are accountable for this unsatisfactory state of affairs. In the first place the weight of Canadian cheeses has been increased, but at the same time the strength of the box has been reduced. The latter discrepancy is probably owing to the increasing cost and scarcity of elm, and the demands of cheese manufacturers for a cheap box."

"As a matter of fact the veneer should never be cut less than full five to the inch whereas a great deal in use for cheese boxes is six or seven to the inch. Another fault in the veneer is that the log is often not boiled sufficiently to soften the wood; consequently the veneer knife shatters it while cutting, and gives it a tendency to split easily. Another result of insufficient boiling or steaming is that the salts of the wood are not extracted; consequently boxes made from such stock mould very readily.

"When I began buying boxes for the cool curing rooms," said Mr. Ruddick, "I insisted on getting heavy selected veneers. The box makers tried to persuade me to accept the thin veneer, some claiming that it would stand more rough usage than the thicker material. I have had to give 2c. above the regular price for such boxes, but it paid to do so, for the reports on shipments from the curing rooms showed only one and two per cent. broken. Of course these shipments were all carefully loaded into the cars and not left standing four or five tiers high, to be thrown down and smashed by the first shunt. Hundreds of boxes are broken in that way. I believe there is almost enough wasted in trimming boxes either in the cheese factory, or at the warehouse to make up this difference of two cents. Boxes are now worth at least one cent per inch in depth, and that part which is cut away is absolute waste.

"If boxes are not thoroughly dry when put on the cheese, the growth of mould is started. This is particularly the case in cold weather when the boxes dry slowly.

"In aiming to have the cheese fit the boxes without trimming, it is well to remember that a box, which measures twelve inches deep when newly made, will shrink to eleven and a half inches as it dries out. The same box will expand again to nearly its original depth after it has been in a warehouse for a week or so, because it absorbs moisture from the cheese. In fitting dry boxes to the cheese it is necessary, therefore, to have the cheese project at least one-quarter of an inch above the edge of the box. One would think it hardly necessary to call attention to the importance of having the box of the proper diameter to fit the cheese snugly. No box will stand the handling that is not supported by the cheese on the inside."

TEA IMPORTS AT ST. JOHN, N.B.

Editor Canadian Grocer: In an advertisement in your last week's issue, figures were quoted to show that in the direct importation of tea from Ceylon and India, the Port of St. John, N. B., took first place and third place of the cities of the Dominion in the total importation of tea. One reading these figures might be led to believe that the St. John merchants imported tea to the extent of the figures quoted; but this would manifestly be a very incorrect conclusion, because it is well known in the trade that large quantities of tea are imported on through bills of lading to Toronto and other points West in Canada, but conveniences are given by the carrying companies for entering these teas at the St. John custom house, and storing them there to await final orders as to their destination, so that a Western merchant or agent of a foreign shipper, bringing teas out from India or Ceylon, does not need to declare to the carrying companies the destination of the goods until he has actually sold the teas.

The custom's returns from St. John would, of course, include all this vast quantity of tea in its returns of tea entered at that point, and would not mean that the merchants of St. John had anything to do with the handling of this tea. Besides this fact, the figures given are simply direct importations from Ceylon and India, and as vast quantities of Ceylon and India tea are imported from London, and as nearly all the finer grades are imported from London, (that being well known as the large market for fine teas), the figures given in the advertisement last week do not at all represent the respective tea trades of the cities named in the advertisement.

SALADA TEA CO.

Toronto, March 12.

THE COMING COFFEE CROP IN BRAZIL.

The consul-general at Rio de Janerio, predicts that the coming coffee crop (harvest of 1904-5) in Brazil will be below the average. The coffee trees have suffered a great deal lately; first, on account of exhaustion in consequence of consecutive abundant bearing, and second, through severe droughts that have prevailed for the last few months. There has already been a considerable rise in the price of coffee in Brazil as well as abroad, although this seems to be caused more by speculation than the natural conditions of the market, as the visible supply abroad is sufficient to satisfy a year's consumption without further receipts. The present rise in prices will mostly benefit dealers abroad who hold large stocks, the producers having already disposed of the bulk of their holdings.

IMPORTS FROM CANADA.

The imports to Great Britain from Canada for the month of February were as follows: Cattle, 5,158 head, valued at £88,279; sheep and lambs, 3,273 head, valued at £5,086; wheat, cwts., 475,000, valued at £172,093; wheat, meal and flour, cwts., 141,600 valued at £70,870; peas, cwts., 22,180, valued at £7,796; bacon, cwts., 53,064, valued at £117,511; hams, cwts., 13,496, valued at £35,940; butter, cwts., 2,205, valued at £9,728; cheese, ckts., 75,446, valued at £193,219; eggs, great hundreds, 150, valued at £75.

THE SCARCITY OF TAPIOCA.

The shipments of all kinds of tapioca to America and Europe so far this year are away below those of previous years. Advices from Singapore and Penang for the last year have been that the manufacture of tapioca at present is a losing proposition, and only the largest are continuing in business.

GREEN FRUITS

Fruit Growers and Co-operation.

THE following is the substance of an address given recently by the chief of the fruit division, Ottawa, before the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers' Association:

Co-operation is the most important subject before the fruit growers of Canada to-day. Individuals can accomplish very little if they work entirely alone. All the fruit growers' societies and associations should co-operate and pull together. Several objects are to be obtained by co-operation. First of all, growers who are beginning to plant in a new district might co-operate to secure information and purchase the best varieties of trees for that district at the lowest price. Seven or eight varieties are plenty for any district, and each man would probably want three or four of these. Then these growers might get together and agree to adopt uniform methods of culture, pruning, spraying, which would result in an entirely uniform quality of fruit. Growers within a radius of five miles, with a total of, say, 4,000 trees, could co-operate to secure effective and systematic spraying by means of power outfits.

Another advantage of co-operation is in securing cheap and reliable supplies, such as implements, chemicals for spraying and packages for shipping fruit. The man who wants only 200 barrels must pay a higher price for them than if he were buying all the barrels required in the district. By putting up packing houses at proper centres it will be possible to secure uniform grading and packing by experts, who will pack the fruit like machines and turn out an even grade all through. A great deal of the success of California fruit is due to this system, and it was reported recently at the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association that Ohio growers had prospered greatly under the co-operative method of packing and marketing peaches. Large quantities of one grade of fruit are packed in exactly similar packages, and purchasers know that they can get as many as they want of that particular kind in one place. This facilitates sales and enables the growers to avoid glutted markets, for even with apples there is a time to ship, and a time not to ship. With the best of orchard management there will always be some culls, which might be disposed of economically if a number of farmers owned a co-operative evaporator.

Advertising can be done much more effectively by co-operation. For instance, buyers attending the sales conducted by a co-operative association would be able to depend upon the fruit and would buy without hesitation. The value of such advertising cannot be overestimated. Co-operation also means increased influence with transportation companies to get fair rates, reasonable care and better cars. The transportation companies are groups of stockholders who want dividends but it is well to remember that the fruit growers want dividends too. Pressure must be brought to bear upon the managers of such companies and upon the Railway Commission to secure the removal of all real grievances.

Niagara Fruit Growers.

The Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers are holding a series of meetings this week, commencing at Stoney Creek on Monday, the 14th; Grimsby, Tuesday; Beamsville, Wednesday; Jordan Station, Thursday; St. David's, Friday; St. Catharines, Saturday. The forenoon sessions are being devoted to demonstrations of power and other sprayers and the afternoon sessions will be taken up with addresses and discussions.

Hints to Canadian Apple Shippers.

Mr. Ball, commercial agent, in Birmingham, England, writes the Department of Trade and Commerce stating that apples sold in that market have been coming in boxes. The plan of sending in boxes is all right, and he much commends it. At the same time he complains that the material of which the boxes are made is too slight, and does not stand the wear and tear of the voyage. He points out as hints to shippers that no apples are too good for the English market, especially for that part of the market situate in the Black Country. Shippers, he points out, make a mistake in consigning all their shipments to the port of destination of the vessel. The consequence is that the apples on arrival are all sold by auction, and then there is a surfeit for that particular market, whilst there is a scarcity at an inland market not many miles away. If apples were consigned to Birmingham and other places the chances are that better prices would result.

Florida Oranges Scarce.

Mail advices from a prominent orange shipper in Florida say that not more than 100,000 boxes of Florida oranges remain in that state for shipment north and west. The Florida orange crop was not as large as estimated, the total not being over 1,500,000 boxes.

British Columbia Apples Abroad.

THE following laudatory notice of British Columbia apples appears in an English exchange :

"The Government of British Columbia is not to be outdone by that of New Brunswick, which has recently been attracting the attention of English fruit importers and intending emigrants to the fertility of the Annapolis Valley and other famous apple-growing portions of that province. This week we received from the agent-general for British Columbia samples of apples grown both in the interior of the province near Lytton, on the Fraser river, and also on Vancouver Island. These, both in size, flavor and appearance, are everything that could be desired, and not inferior to those produced in Eastern Canada. Considering that this consignment has been almost two months on the way, having been shipped from Victoria on December 8, the excellent condition in which they arrived speaks well for their keeping qualities. Although land in British Columbia is not to be obtained on quite such easy terms as in the Northwest Territories, the life of a settler there is in many ways more comfortable, and for fruit growing there is no portion of the continent which offers to-day greater possibilities. In making this statement we are not unmindful of California, but it is well known that the northern fruit is greatly superior in flavor and keeping qualities, in addition to which the enormous market that is opening up in the Northwest Territories for fruit of all kinds can be better supplied by fruit growers in British Columbia than from elsewhere. The agent-general informs us that he would be glad to supply all information possible on fruit culture in British Columbia to those interested, and to callers at his offices he will show tangible proofs of the fertility of the soil."

Red Bananas.

"Red bananas are not often seen in the market these days," said a local commission man, "and when we do get them they bring fancy prices. Fifteen or twenty years ago the reds were the leading banana and sold for a lower price than the yellow."

The change is due to commercial reasons—the yellow banana is more profitable, requires less time in its care and cultivation, and consequently, costs less. More of the yellows grow on a bunch, they stick to the stem better, and stand handling far better than the red variety. With these advantages, the reds have been practically driven out of the market. The comparatively few bunches brought here are soon gobbled up by fancy fruit dealers, who get high prices for them. Some people prefer the flavor of the red banana, and some like that of the yellow, but the price has had most to do with their practical disappearance from the market.

Pineapples in Texas.

Around Corpus Christi, Tex., a few growers are testing pineapples. About 5,000 plants have been set in that vicinity and an experienced Florida grower reports that they are doing remarkably well. Those who are interested are enthusiastic over the prospects and declare that the future production of pineapples in Texas is assured.

Fruit Notes.

The directors of the Crystal Palace Exhibition, London, Eng., have awarded a special commemorative medal to the Government of Nova Scotia for its display of green fruits.

F. Fitch, Dominion fruit inspector, of Clarence, N.S., has gone to England to visit London, Liverpool, Glasgow and other apple markets. His intention is to examine closely into the condition of Spring shipments of fruit and see them in competition with the early shipments from Australia and New Zealand.

In regard to the complaint of Ontario fruit growers and others that they have been discriminated against by the railways, Hon. Mr. Blair says they will be asked to state their case, after which the railways will be duly notified. A date will then be arranged as which both sides will be present for an official hearing of the complaints.

Fruit growers at Grimsby, Stoney Creek and the surrounding district, complain that field mice are damaging the bark of the fruit trees, eating it away from the ground up. They are at a loss to know what to do to stop the destructive work of the mice.

DRESSED STOCK BRINGS A FANCY PRICE.

THE large exhibit of dressed poultry, beef carcasses, dressed pork, etc., at the show of the Eastern Ontario Live Stock and Poultry Association in Ottawa last week, was bought in by a local dealer at a price much in advance of current city quotations. Chickens and turkeys each brought 18c. a pound, whereas the market prices are 10 and 15c. respectively. Ducks and geese brought 15c. a pound; the ruling price of both these is 10c. Beef by the carcass, sold at 8 1-2c. a pound, as against 6 1-2c. on the market, and lamb brought 9c. as compared with 7 1-2c. on the market.

Such prices as these should satisfy the most pessimistic farmer, that his calling, if properly attended to, is quite as profitable as the paths of city industry, tempting though the latter may be.

An authority on stock and poultry raising says it is about the nearest approach to the "get rich quick" game that can be located in this twentieth century. The above evidence at any rate is sufficient to show that it pays in stock and poultry raising as in anything else to be careful.

CIGAR MANUFACTURER EN TOUR.

L. M. Fortier, son of J. M. Fortier (J. M. Fortier & Co., Montreal), and vice-president of the company, is on a business trip to the United States. Mr. Fortier, who is accompanied by E. Mathurin, superintendent of the factory, will visit New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago and other large centres with a view to studying the conditions of the cigar trade in those cities. Mr. Fortier's observations will no doubt prove interesting and instructive, and as the application of practical ideas is one of the characteristics of his house it may be expected that the trade will be largely benefitted.

J. F. Fortier, who lately returned from a trip to Cuba, reports the condition of the leaf tobacco trade in that country as very satisfactory. His purchases were large and the quality of the stock secured was of the highest. The outlook for business in Canada is very promising and as soon as the roads are in good condition and transportation facilities properly available once more trade is bound to boom.

Newfoundland Abolishes Duty on Flour.

MONTREAL merchants, and particularly those interested in the flour trade, are congratulating themselves over the recent decision of the Government of Newfoundland to abolish the duty on flour. In the old days this duty, which applied against all countries alike, amounted to 30c. per barrel. It was then reduced to 25c. per barrel, at which figure it has remained up to the preesnt.

Considering the population of Newfoundland an astonishing amount of flour is imported into that country from Canada. Last year the total imports amounted to 383,000 barrels, and of this amount Canada probably supplied about two-thirds. The duties upon this flour amounted to $95,000.

At different times the flour trade from Canada to Newfoundland has fallen off to an appreciable degree, the United States mills capturing a large proportion of the trade. This was owing mainly to the fact that the rival mills across the border manufactured flour of the grades most desired by Newfoundlanders. Latterly, however, the Canadian millers have been getting the business back until now they have the greater share of it.

Milling at the Soo.

IT is surmised that the day of ascendancy of the Minneapolis milling interests are about over, so far as grinding for export is concerned. American exports of flour and grain will grow less and less because the United States needs its crops for home consumption. With the vast area of splendid wheat lands in Western Canada coming into cultivation, Canada and not the United tSates will become the great exporter.

In view of this fact, and with the assurance that the Algoma Central will be finished and the Hudson's Bay opened, an advantageous spot for the establishment of a milling centre in Canada will be a question of the utmost importance. Milling interests have already been prospering around the Soo. Having water power in abundance, and a magnificent new water power canal, the Soo will be a most advantageous spot for export grinding, since it is also easy of access both from the West and to the sea whether the northern or southern route is taken.

Canadian Flour for War Rations in Japan.

A recent arrival from Shanghai, China, says that in the event of a prolonged war in the East Canada will have a chance of supplying Japan with flour, as Canadian flour is especially adapted for the making of the biscuits required by the troops at the front. Trade in this particular however, will develop gradually as Japan is well supplied with flour at the present time.

The Price of Bread.

The Master Bakers of Toronto, at their regular monthly meeting last week decided not to raise the price of bread for the present.

Seed Grain Men.

AT the regular meeting of the Eastern Ontario Grain Association, in Ottawa, March 9, Professor Lavitz, experimentalist of the Agricultural College, Guelph, delivered an interesting address on "The Best Variety of Grain for Seeding."

Discussing the varieties of grain the speaker said that in oats Siberian was the most prolific yielding 54 bushels to the acre with Liberty second and Alaskan third. In six-rowed barley, Mandscheuri stood highest in the yield, Oderbrucker next and Sucess third. In hulless barley, the black variety yielded 24 bushels to the acre and the white 20. The speaker recommended Silver Hull as a prolific kind of buckwheat with Japanese as second. For peas, the Early Britain stood highest and the Canadian Beauty second. In the line of poy beans, the Early Yellow and Green varieties were recommended and in corn, King Philip and North Star.

Large Demand for Seed Grain.

Farmers who made exhibits at the Eastern Ontario Seed Fair held in conjunction with the live stock and poultry show in Ottawa last week, benefited by receiving large orders for seed grain. The prices paid are about 25 per cent. above the market quotations on account of the purer quality of the grains offered. Wheat sells at $1.25 a bushel, oats 50 to 55 cents, barley 75 cents, timothy seed $2.50 to $3, Soja beans 10 cents a pound, Giant sugar mangels 20 cents a pound, Dwarf Essex rape seed 6 cents a pound and purple top Swede turnips 15 cents a pound.

Cereal Notes.

Three acres are devoted to the display of pure foods at the World's Fair at St. Louis this year.

The firm of Hanham & McColl have purchased the Lake View flour mills, Welland, which are being extensively improved to meet the demands of increased business.

It is reported that American grain merchants are building line houses all over the Canadian Northwest, with terminal elevators in preparation for the bonding of a big crop this Fall.

A. McLean, Ottawa, has been appointed Canadian commercial agent in Japan to push trade with the empire of the rising sun. Mr. McLean will leave at an early date to take advantage of the special opportunity which the war should afford for the sale of Canadian foodstuffs

The Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is in receipt of a cablegram from the Queensland Department of Agriculture at Brisbane, asking that some Manitoba seed wheat be forwarded by steamship via Vancouver at an early date.

The Grain Growers' Association of Manitoba and the Northwest have appointed W. G. Rogers of Carberry, to represent them on the Exhibition Board of the province. The object in view is that the grain growers shall have entire charge of the exhibits in their classes at the coming Dominion Fair.

"Force-thoughts"

BY SUNNY JIM

IV.

I THINK that many folks dodge breakfast because they can't look it squarely in the face.

¶ They are never sure of breakfast anyway—sure of what it means for them, I mean.

These people, you will find, are wobbly on pretty nearly everything else that's worth while.

¶ I am sure that breakfast is something besides the first meal of the day.

I am surer every day that what I eat and what you eat makes us what we are. If we are eating for happiness we'd better eat the food that brings it.

The sun must be in the food before you can get it out.

¶ There is just so much sunniness in the world. If you haven't your share, then it is still in that breakfast of "FORCE" that you did not eat.

"FORCE" is not a philosophy.

It merely enables you to be philosophical.

¶ Which is a long way of saying,

Be Sunny.

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

Shrinkage in North Carolina Leaf.

ADVICES from North Carolina are to the effect that about 70 per cent. of the present year's tobacco crop has already been put on the market, and that within a couple of months at the latest the entire crop will have been sold. It now appears that tobacco men in general were fooled in their first estimate of the crop for this year, which they thought would be at least 40 per cent. more than the crop of last year. From present indications the crop will be about 40 per cent. smaller than last year's crop.

With a large supply of tobacco on hand, manufacturers started to buy slowly at the beginning of the season, and the result was that there was a big drop in the prices. Later, when it was evident the crop would be short, the buyers began to pay better prices, with the result that fair prices have been paid lately. During the week of February 25 to March 3 something like 500,000 pounds of tobacco were sold in Durham, one of the chief tobacco centres of the South, averaging about ten cents, this being the same average of the preceding year. Up to date nearly all of the South Carolina crop has been sold, as well as a considerable part of the eastern North Carolina crop. In Durham and the bright tobacco region there is less than one-third of the crop to be offered to the manufacturer, and from now on it is anticipated the prices will be better.

Well informed tobacconists are of the opinion that there will be a great falling off in next year's crop, with the result that high prices will prevail. It is said that many farmers of South Carolina and the eastern part of North Carolina will convert their tobacco lands into cotton fields.

The unsatisfactory state of the tobacco trade has caused some 60 planters in the tobacco belt of the adjoining belt of Tennessee to abandon the exclusive cultivation of tobacco and to devote their attention largely to a diversity of crops.

English Matches Advance in Price.

ACCORDING to a leading exchange the leading match houses in the United Kingdom have combined for the purpose of advancing the price of wax vestas, each firm having deposited £250 with the chairman of Bryant & May. In case of breach of the rules or underselling that gentleman has power to inflict fines. Wax vestas which could be purchased previous to January 1 at $1 per gross, are now raised to $1.50 per gross so that the very lowest price the wholesale dealer can resell at is $1.60. The street hawker will suffer considerably, as he will have to pay 3 cents per dozen more for his matches than formerly. According to an expert the sole purpose of the movement is to supersede wax vestas by placing pine wood matches on the market. Twelve months ago a similar scheme was tried, but it failed, as there was then no penalty for underselling. The expert says the British manufacturers have fallen headlong into an American trap. "All along American manufacturers have had designs on our match trade, which is confined to some eight firms. Two years ago the Diamond Match Company absorbed Brayant & May, who, rather than face a ruinous war, came to an understanding with the newest form of invasion."

sisted of 30 cars full of one brand of smoking tobacco. The shipment contained 2,880,000 packages of tobacco, enough, it is said, to give every adult person in the United States three pipes of tobacco. When sold to the consumer the shipment will bring about $144,000. The train was a quarter of a mile in length and had no other cars save those loaded with tobacco and the caboose.

Tobacco Growing and Curing in Japan.

WHILE nothing but war operations in Japan against Russia are heard of in the newspapers, it is a relief to hear something of the triumph of peace in connection with growing and curing of tobacco in the Flowery Kingdom, as related in a recent letter from the Japanese Experimental Tobacco Station, at Nishigahara, Tokio.

Regarding the last crop of Tobacco raised there he writes as follows:

"We harvested and cured here last year the best crop of bright yellow tobacco in years. Flue curing bright yellow tobacco has passed the experimental stage, and is now a well understood method, and we estimate that about a half million pounds will be produced to flue cure here in 1904. Our experiments have proved that the flue barns can be used to good advantage in curing out the regular Japanese varieties, and getting that much esteemed 'dark cherry red' color used mainly for fine-cut for small pipe filling. The tobacco department of the Japanese Government is now publishing a farmers' bulletin, which will be distributed and will explain the formula of heat manipulation."

Philippinos Petition U. S Congress.

A PETITION from the Tobacco Workers' Guild of the Philippines is before Congress at the present time asking for the free entry of Philippine tobacco into the Customs houses of the United States.

The petition has been submitted on the ground that the Dingley tariff which provides for a duty of 75 per cent. on manufactured tobacco is practically equivalent to making the exportation of Philippine tobacco to the United States market in impossibility.

The policy of the United States to protect the wealth and trade of the Filipino people, they claim, demands nothing less, since at the present time no less than 14,000 tobacco workers in that country are living in the greatest indigence. Their plight has been made worse by the fact that the markets of Japan and Australia, once great consumers of Filippino tobacco, no longer favor them with those large orders that in the past so greatly stimulated production in that country.

Exports and Imports of Tobacco.

The quantity of leaf tobacco imported by England from the United States during the month of January, 1904, according to the Western Tobacco Journal was 2,918,726 pounds, a large increase over the importation for the corresponding month a year ago. The same is true of importations by Belgium, Mexico, and Japan, the rate of increase in the latter country being particularly remarkable. Importations by Canada from the same source have largely decreased.

For the seven months of the current fiscal year exports of leaf tobacco from the United States have fallen off to the value of $4,929,501. Importations of leaf tobacco for the same period show a steady increase in wrapper leaf, but a decrease in fillers and the manufactured product.

Tobacco Growing in Ireland.

THE British Government has decided to allow experimetnal cultivation of tobacco in Ireland upon a considerable scale for a period of five years under the supervision of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction. A rebate of one-third the existing duty will be granted to any tobacco producer as the result of the experiments.

An English exchange comments as follows: "Ireland will be glad to hear than the Chancellor of the Exchequer has given leave to grow tobacco for five years on very favorable fiscal terms, for Ireland badly needs a staple industry. This experiment, however, touches only the beginning of the difficulty. There is no question as to the possibility of growing tobacco in the United Kingdom; it was grown a few years ago as an experiment by the late Mr. Faunce de Laune in Kent. It was grown largely in Ireland until the industry was suppressed in the interests of our colonies in America. Nor should there be any difficulty about collecting the duty on tobacco, for Australia which grows much tobacco, manages the collection as easily as excise officers in England collect the duty for breweries. The real problem arises when the leaf comes to be treated, and here is the reason why the comparatively small crops of Australia, though confessed by American experts to be equal in some cases to Virginia growths, have never succeeded in rivalling the American exports. A small industry cannot afford to employ the highest experts in the selection and treatment of the leaf. And, though it is quite certain that Ireland can grow tobacco, it is equally certain that Ireland can only set up a paying tobacco industry by growing on a large and generous scale."

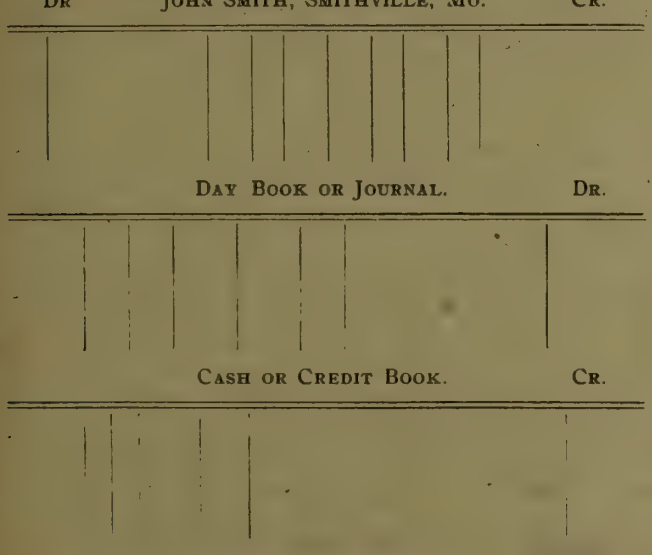
A SYSTEM OF BOOKKEEPING FOR COUNTRY MERCHANTS.

By Henry C. Nelson, Kansas City, Mo

BOOKKEEPING is not a new subject by any means; we know that it has been practised and in vogue since the time that mercantile business was started. Of course there are a number of merchants who have taken up a course of bookkeeping and can therefore readily understand its use, but I feel confident that there are many merchants who do not recognize that bookeeping is a necessity towards obtaining success in the business world. The probable reason for the ignorance of some of these merchants is the fact that bookkeeping as taught in the schools and colleges of to-day is too complicated, and they do not feel like spending the time learning the theory. I sincerely believe that if the retail merchants could be interested in a very simple system of bookkeeping which would not require much thought or experience, it would be appreciated and perhaps would induce some of them to keep such records as would show their financial condition at any time.

The system I have in view is very simple, and I believe that the busiest merchant could not give the excuse, substantially, that it would require too much time to operate it. I would use three cards; one would be the ledger card, another a day book, or, properly called, a journal, and the last a credit book, or, in other words, cash book, which is of different color, as follows:



It is about as simple as could be made to get the results which we are after by posting on the day book or cash book each item as it is sold or received, as the case may be; then the only entry required for the time being is made, and at the end of the day a balance can be taken with the cash on hand, showing the exact amount of business done for that day. The ledger could be posted from the journal or cash book either at the end of the day or whenever convenient during the month.

I would also suggest that a separate ledger card be made for merchandise sold for cash and posted the same as an account. This would bring the books into balance without any trouble whatever. As regards the individual accounts that the merchant carries on his ledger, I would suggest that a card for each one be made and each item posted at the merchant's convenience, so that should he be called upon by his customer for a statement of his account he will have no trouble in giving the information desired, consequently it is to his interest to have his books posted up to date.

Now to get at the merchant's financial condition, I would suggest the following system of bookkeeping in connection with the above. Post invoices when goods are received on the cash card, just as if so much cash had been received. When the bill is paid, it should be posted on the journal, just as if so much goods had been sold and taken out of the store; for money paid out by the merchant for bills that are due will decrease his resources that amount. Should he be called upon to render a statement of his financial condition, it will be necessary for him to take an inventory of his stock on hand, then refer to his ledgers, adding accounts that are owing him, together with what cash he has on hand and his balance in bank, his unexpired insurance, and other assets, such as real estate, furniture and fixtures, etc., etc., deducting bills which he is owing for goods and any further existing liabilities.

If the system was operated as above, and books were balanced each month, he could, after taking inventory, which in my opinion would only be necessary twice a year, give a true and complete statement of his financial condition, showing all assets and liabilities, together with his net worth, and there would then be no occasion for any man to estimate his condition when called upon to make a statement of his affairs. It may appear to you now that the system is a little complicated, and I admit it is not perfection as yet, but the idea is there, and I have already installed the system among our customers, and I will make it a point to personally visit these people to see whereby any improvements can be made to make it more simple. There is no doubt in my mind but that this system of bookkeeping, properly installed and properly operated, will prevent many of the failures now recorded.

I have interviewed customers who have requested credit and have inquired is an off-hand way regarding their condition. Some of them have replied, estimating their worth, and have afterwards found out that they were entirely wrong. We had a case in Missouri which I beg permission to cite. The party in question was a good customer and had always met his bills promptly, was considered honest, although he was not worth very much over and above exemptions. A few months ago he had a very good and prosperous business, and after the busy season he contemplated taking a rest and went on a visit to some of his relatives in Colorado, taking $500 with him, which he thought he could spare. After his return he began to figure how much ahead he was on the season and found out that he had overestimated his profits and had taken $250 more to spend on his vacation than he had really made. Of course it put him in a very embarrassing position, but he reported his affairs to our representative and stated that the next time he wanted a vacation he would first find out how much he could afford to spend. He has since been using our system on our recommendation and considers it a success. He was a man that did not believe in bookkeeping, as he considered it too complicated for such a small business as he had been doing, and although he was honest, the weakness of his condition nearly finished him.

Sometimes failures are due to carelessness and not dishonesty, and a thorough system of bookkeeping will no doubt prevent carelessness in the majority of cases. On every occasion that an out-of-town customers pays us a visit, we take up the system of bookkeeping with him thoroughly, and it is surprising to find how willing they are to learn a system which will prevent errors. In reporting their condition there is no doubt but that many of the statements given to the mercantile agencies are made in good faith, but are entirely wrong through the merchant being obliged to give a hap-hazard account of his condition. In some cases the wholesale house suffers when giving credit to a man apparently in good condition, according to his statement, who afterwards makes an assignment or is forced into bankruptcy.

As I have stated before, I am not satisfied until some improvement can be made on the above system, and any suggestions for its betterment will be a further step towards the common end we all have in view. If we can interest merchants to adopt a system of bookkeeping which will prevent even a few failures, I think we will be amply repaid for any efforts we may make.

"CLOSED FOR LUNCHEON."

THE practice of closing commercial offices during lunch hour, which is general on the Continent and has been largely adopted by houses in Manchester, Glasgow, and other large cities, is now being introduced in London. Last Summer the proposition was made that the warehouses should be closed during the middle of the day, but the suggestion was not taken up very readily. The idea has been revived again, however, and, amongst others, E. & H. Tidswell & Co., of Wood street, are now following the custom, and it is said to be greatly appreciated on the part of the firm's customers as well as the staff. This firm is well-known to readers of Bookseller through their advertisements, and the adoption of this new idea is quite in line with their progressive business policy.

A QUESTION OF CASH DISCOUNT.

ONE of the subscribers to the Bookkeeper ventilates an interesting question which recently came up for solution in his business. He says:

"Our friend sold to a customer July 1st a bill amounting to $4,286. Terms cash, 10 days, less 4 per cent. The customer remitted $4,000 on account within the time limit. How much discount should we credit to his account? He may settle the balance within the time limit or possibly not for several months."

That is, should the customer be credited with 4 per cent. discount on that amount of bill covered by remittance supposing same had been in full settlement, or is he only entitled to 4 per cent. discount on the actual amount of his remittance?

One authority decides one way—another authority decides in favor of the other. Which is right? Perhaps some of our subscribers might be disposed to favor us with their views on the subject.

THE APPEARANCE OF LETTERS.

A BUSINESS man may well tremble to think of the good or bad impressions being constantly multiplied and sent out from his stenographic department, remarks Mahin's Magazine.

The position of typist is a very responsible one. A business letter is the representative of a firm. If it is slovenly and careless in appearance it creates instant prejudice.

If neatly and intelligently written it inspires confidence and respect.

Only a small percentage of the patrons of most concerns ever come in personal contact with the house. They judge of the firm's intelligence, its enterprise and business management by the smartness and finish of such work as comes to hand.

A typist may look upon a letter merely as something to be done and gotten out of the way, but a letter has a long life. It is filed away and preserved for years. It may be referred to many times. A letter written to-day may be criticised or complimented ten years hence.

It is a mistake to suppose that no one cares or notices when work is well done. It is always noticed; besides, good work is worth while if only for the self-satisfaction it gives.

It is something to feel that one is improving a little every day; going forward, instead of backward; becoming more capable and efficient.

The habit of good work makes everything easier, makes the day pass more quickly, and puts one on good terms with one's self.

A letterhead placed in the machine is merely a sheet of paper, like a piece of white sketching board before the artist.

The operator can make something beautiful of it if she will give it form, expression and character.

A perfect typewritten letter is really a thing of beauty, attractive to the eye and the mind.

FLOWER POTS FOR GROCERS.

WITH the approach of Spring, it behooves grocers handling flower pots, hanging baskets, fern pans, lawn vases, etc., to make preparations for supplying the needs of their sections in this direction. We are inclined to think that many grocers who do not handle this class of merchandise should do so, not only because of the money made through the addition of such a saleable line but also because they owe it to their constituency to provide hanging baskets, lawn vases and similar goods.

Most people are only too ready to possess themselves with such helps to home adorning, and require merely to have some attractive pots, baskets and vases brought to their attention to become prompt purchasers. The love of flowers is universal and the accessories to their culture and display are very proper articles of merchandise for every grocer and general storekeeper.

In this connection a reference to the Foster Pottery Co., of Hamilton, is timely. This concern was founded in 1878 by the late Leonard Foster and was successfully carried on by him until his death in 1890. He was succeeded by his sons who continued the business until the present company was formed, with F. L. Foster as manager and S. Foster secretary-treasurer of the new company.

A large sum of money has been expended in installing the most improved and modern machinery, and it is safe to say that there is not a better equipped flower pot factory in Canada. The company controls some of the finest clay beds in the country, and turns out a class of pots unexcelled in quality and durability. In 1903 the output was something over 5,000,000 pots. The capacity of the plant under pressure is double this amount.

Inasmuch as grocers have a better opportunity than florists for selling flower pots it is hoped that they will appreciate the value of the above suggestions regarding flower pots. The Foster Pottery Co. issues a very attractive and helpful price list which will be furnished to any desiring it.

RADIUM TO PRESERVE FOODS.

A NEW agent for preserving foods of all kinds has been discovered by H. Leiber, New York, who has performed some interesting experiments showing the preservative qualities of radium and thorium.

There is almost no substance that encourages the development and growth of germs as much as bouillon. Mr. Lieber, therefore, inoculated a quantity of bouillon with so-called mold taken from infected food. He divided this solution into eight parts, keeping each of the parts in an open glass jar at a temperature of about 80 degrees.

In each of two of these jars was placed a small tube containing radium.

Two other jars of bouillon were contubing with an air-tight glass bottle containing radium solution, so that the emanation from the radium could enter the solution.

Two other jars of bullon were connected with a glass bulb containing thorium oxide and the emanations from this were applied to the bouillon in the two jars.

The two remaining jars of bouillon were left in their original state. Close examination showed that the mold in these began to thrive at once, and after three days the surface of the bouillon in the two receptacles was covered. By the end of two weeks the matter had become so thickly infected with germs that it had to be destroyed.

There was no growth of the mold in the jars treated by radium and thorium, and after two months the bouillon was as good as when first exposed.

Experiments were made with other food materials, with similar results. This opens up a field for the use of radium as a food preservative which is of the utmost importance.

THE CURRANT QUESTION.

A COMPANY of English capitalists have submitted to the Government of Greece a proposal to take over the management of the currant crop in that country for the benefit of the Greek growers on a fixed commission; to purchase the entire crop; to adopt special methods for treating the excess crop and to make advances to growers, the minimum amount which the company will advance to be equal to 200 drachmas per 1,000 v.p.; the profits secured for account of the growers to be paid them direct, and at once. The company also propose to maintain the currant bank by means of a fixed payment and to erect warehouses in Greece and at the consuming markets abroad.

They ask for a three years' term to make out lists of the currant properties, and to formulate a basis on which to regulate the question of debts, etc., and with this in view undertake to grant the nation a loan of £300,000. The company assures the Government that these proposals will secure the acceptance of the Governments of the consuming countries, and that in the manner the advances will be made there will be assured to each grower three-fourths at least of his expenses of cultivation, even in cases where such should prove unremunerative or a failure.

THE MODERN RETAIL GROCERY.

"THE evolution of the grocery business during the last 60 years has been most marked," says a leading exchange.

"Among other things dry goods and boot and shoe departments have disappeared and meat departments have been installed in every up-to-date grocery throughout the country. In the early days no attention was paid to the display of goods, or to making a store look neat and inviting. Everything was helter skelter, and it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to find anything. Dust was apparent on the goods and shelves, and the broom was used but very little. Now everything is changed. An up-to-date store is a thing of beauty, and the artistic display is very noticeable.

"There is also a great change in the matter of profits. Some years ago the small grocer considered a trade of $5 a day pretty good, and figured his profits at 100 per cent. At the present time the margin is so small that profits have to be figured on the bulk of business done. A revolution has also taken place in the matter of credits. Formerly it was the custom to let accounts run six months, or even a year some times, to accommodate customers, while now, 30 days is considered the limit, and some are demanding the cash, giving no credit whatever."

STORAGE IN BRANDON.

For the convenience of business firms wishing to extend their business in Manitoba and the territories, and for that purpose to secure storage facilities in the West, the Manitoba Commission Company of Brandon have opened warehouses in that busy town. They have a large warehouse 48x100 feet, with two flats and a cellar; also two cold storage rooms, and are thus in a position to render important services to their clients. They are the only commission company in Brandon and are open to receive communications from persons or firms who want the sale of their goods pushed in Brandon and its dependent surrounding country.

The Best Grocers make a point of Keeping always in Stock.

A Wonderful Canvass of the Northwest has been made to ascertain what proportion of the people used breakfast foods, and the proportion using beverages other than coffee or tea.

This canvass was conducted in a most systematic manner by the "Northwestern Agriculturist" of Minneapolis. The inquiries covered many other subjects, such as "What make of Chocolate do you use?" "What Soap?" "Washington Powder?" "Watches?" etc., but we here direct your attention to the prepared breakfast foods and Postum Cereal Coffee upon which the report showed as follows:

PREPARED BREAKFAST FOODS.

GRAPE-NUTS	227
Quaker Oats	180
Force	147
Cream of Wheat	145
Banner Oats	81
Vitos	71
Yankee Rolled Oats	63

Wheat Hearts	6
Horseshoe Rolled Oats	6
Great Western	5

BEVERAGES.

POSTUM	232
Grain-O	24
Gooderich Mills	8
Carmel Cereal	7

You will observe that almost double the number of families use Grape-Nuts than use any other prepared food. Out of 1587 families who use some kind of beverage, including coffee, Postum, tea, cocoa, etc., nearly one-sixth or 15% use Postum. We submit that is a tremendous volume, and gives some sort of an explanation as to where the many thousands of tons of Postum go to. It has emphasized the further fact that Postum is as firmly established a national beverage (somewhat less in volume, but just as surely built) as coffee or tea.

Quality the Secret of Success.

Where there is not quality there cannot be success. Christie's Biscuits are based on quality. The various ingredients that enter into the manufacture of our 500 varieties are the very best that can be obtained; the machinery and labor are of the best, and every batch of biscuits is carefully tested before being packed and shipped. Christie's Biscuits can therefore be recommended with confidence.

Wasting Your Energies?

If it pays to push an article, it pays to push it to some purpose and to push more with an object of gaining permanent trade than of temporary profit. If the demand for any article stops when you stop pushing it 95 per cent. of your energy has been wasted.

You waste no energy whatever in advocating the sale of the "Griffin" Brand of Dried Fruits and the "Thistle" Brand of Canned Fish, because people who buy them once will buy them again and again. Briefly, the intrinsic merit of both these articles backs up the highest praise you can give them.

"Griffin" Brand Dried Fruits.

Seedless Raisins and Prunes. Dried Apricots, Peaches and Pears in all their original goodness. A revelation to the grocer who has been buying other Brands.

Selecccted with the greatest care and shipped in original boxes right from the Vineyards and Orchards on the Pacific Coast.

Look for the "Griffin" trade mark before you buy.

"Thistle" Brand Canned Fish.

Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring and Herring and Tomato Sauce. Selected, cured and packed by Captain Austin of The Thistle Canning Co., Little River, N.S.

Absolutely clean, rich, delicate, appetizing. Prepared right at the water side where they are caught. The brand of highest quality and so recognized the world over.

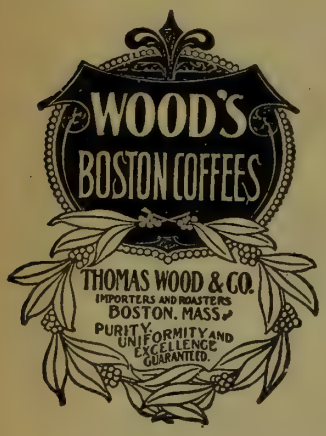
THE RECORD SPEAKS



"What is the record?" is a question so frequently asked concerning things animate and inanimate.

It is something that effects the price and sale of the horse and the yacht, and a good record is a prize to the merchant and the statesman.

It speaks volumes for WOOD'S COFFEES, with their quarter-century success.

The record is plain; it reads. Purity, Superiority, Uniformity.

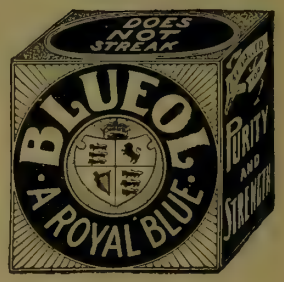
It Will Pay You To Handle It.



We beg to call the attention of all RETAILERS and GENERAL STOREKEEPERS to the important advantages "BLUEOL" has over all other Washing Blues, viz —

1st. It yields a greater profit because in a 10-lb. box there are 50—4 square packages as compared to 40 in a 10-lb. box of other makes. (A square of "Blueol," though lighter in weight, is as strong, if not stronger, in working qualities than any other.) 10 lbs. of "Blueol" will not cost you any more than 10 lbs. of any other, and you have the great advantage of getting 10—4 square packages extra—PRACTICALLY FOR NOTHING.

2nd. There is no finer Laundry or Washing Blue made.

3rd. It will positively not streak or spot the clothes.

The Scientific Preservation and Preparation of Foods*

MR. PRESIDENT and gentlemen—When your secretary did me the honor of asking me to address you at your annual meeting I understood it as the expression of a feeling that a chemist, whose work has to do mainly with the products of animal and vegetable life, might be able from a theoretical standpoint to suggest some things which may be of value to you as practical men, who have to do with the preparation and handling of food-stuffs that are of course obtained entirely from these same sources. I do not suppose that you will credit me as a professor of chemistry with more than a general knowledge of the many processes which you employ in the preparation of the various articles of food in which you are severally interested, it is from this standpoint that I wish to address you.

I shall commence with the assumption that the aim of the food manufacturer is to present to the public an article which is entirely wholesome, as appetising as possible, and therefore as like as possible to the original freshly prepared material even after the lapse of a considerable period of time, at the minimum of cost and with the maximum of profit, and I hope to be able to suggest one or two things which may, if followed out, advance that aim. I propose to consider very briefly the food problem from two points of view; first, under what condition is even first class material likely to deteriorate by preservation and storing; second, are there any legitimate means by which material of a lower grade may be so treated as to be of higher value than it is at present? Both of these are problems which as practical men must be of very great interest to you.

Deterioration by Preservation and Storing.

Regarding the first question I intend to say very little, for to the expert manufacturer along established lines the treatment of a high-class raw material is not likely to be a matter of very much difficulty. He can afford to spend greater care in its preservation because it will generally fetch its price in the market. Even here, however, there are some fundamental chemical rules which ought to be of guidance, while there are other points which are open to debate.

In the case of meats or fish the best material preserved while fresh is very little liable to be impaired by storing in tin even when the solder employed is not of a good order, but the same can scarcely be said of fruits or of some vegetables. Fruits are mostly acid even when ripe, and should surely never be canned in anything but glass unless the best possible solder is employed, for the acid juices are bound to act on the lead of a poor solder and give rise to a contamination of the contents of the tin which must be hurtful to the system when taken in quantity and frequently. Personally, I should never intentionally eat any fruit or tomato which had been canned in tin for this reason. I fail to understand why, as I am informed, only the highest grade of many of these classes of foods are put up in glass. I cannot think that the cost is so much higher but that a ready market would be found for even a secondary quality at a much lower figure with a quite reasonable profit. Certainly, however, if it is necessary that tin should be used to meet the purse of the poorer consumer, the canner should see to it that the highest grade of solder is employed.

Take the case of peas. Here the canning is not a matter of so much importance but the method of preserving employed in France at least (I do not know if the Canadian canner does the same or not) is from a chemist's point of view open to very grave question. There seems to be a public demand for a nice green pea, and this is attained by heating in copper vats. The copper acts on a certain constituent of the pea and forms a bright green compound with it. But copper compounds are distinctly poisonous and although the amount of it contained in a 1-lb. tin may be quite harmless, it seems from analogy as if the continued use of such a food must in the end be hurtful. I would suggest to any of you who are connected with that line that the same result might be obtained in a perfectly harmless way by using the green coloring matter of plants, the so-called chlorophyl. But it might need the aid of an expert chemist to work out a process of applying it.

Improving Lower Grade Material.

This mention of the service an expert chemist may give you in almost any line whatever you choose to name, leads me to the second question that I proposed, viz., whether there are any legitimate means of so treating a substance of poorer quality that it will fetch a higher price in the market. It is here that a chemist would be of use to you. As an example, let me take what has in the last ten years come to be one of the great Canadian industries—the manufacture of butter. Last Summer I spent part of my holiday on Speyside in Scotland, and among the many delightful things that charmed me there was the delicious butter. It had a delicate flavor and aroma that I have seldom found before, and which is certainly wanting in the best grades of that material which I can obtain in the city of Montreal. Canadian butter, as we get it here, may be perfectly pure, and it may be excellently preserved, but I can seldom accuse it of having a flavor. Wherein lies the difference? It was only necessary to walk along the country roads at Speyside to feel that. The air was filled with the delicious scent of some herb that abounded in the pastures and a small quantity of this fragrant chemical found its way into the cream and the butter. Now, if Canadian Summers are too dry to raise such pastures as that, if it needs the mist and the rain of old Scotland, why cannot the Canadian manufacturer set some one to work to find out what the chemical substance is which is contained in the herbs of that pasture and to which the butter there owes its flavor? It seems to me that it would assuredly pay him to do so; the butter would command two or three cents a pound more, I should think.

*An address delivered by Professor J. W. Fraser, F.R.S.C., of McGill University, at the annual meeting of the Manufacturing Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers Association at Montreal, March 4, 1904.

Where the Chemist Comes In.

It would not be necessary in a case like that to rely on the pastures of Speyside to supply the amount of the aromatic substance that Canadian butter needs, for the use of a chemist lies in this, that when he has found out what a substance is, he is very often in a position to tell almost at once how the same substance may be made from some entirely different common material. To instance what I mean, take the production of the fragrant vanilla from the bark of the pine trees, of the very valuable indigo dye from the naphthalene of coal tar, or of vinegar and alcohol from sawdust and wood chips. Such an addition to our Canadian butter I should call a perfectly legitimate means of obtaining a higher price for the article, as it surely would in any market. I may seem to be advocating a contravention of the "Adulteration of Foods Act" but if such treatment of a necessary food is contravention of the Act, the worse, say I, for the Act. The sooner it ceases to interfere with the ordinary citizen obtaining as delicately flavored an article of food as possible, the better.

And if a trained organic chemist could be of use to you here, his service would surely be in equal demand in the fruit canning industry. How often does a spell of wet weather spoil the flavor of nearly a whole crop of strawberries, cherries, or peaches! And yet to discover the essence to which any particular fruit owes its flavor and to prepare the identical substance from some other cheap source ought to be, for a well trained chemist, a comparatively simple operation. The necessary amount of the flavoring material could then be easily added, and the less valuable crop brought up to the best standard. This suggestion would again, I think, be worth your while looking into, as a perfectly legitimate means of giving to a food the requisite quality. And even in preserving the best of fruits they lose something in flavor. Well, why not return it to them? We all want to think in Winter that our pears and peaches have the full flavor of the fresh ripe fruit. It is only a question of putting the right man to work on the subject to find out the way of doing it, and assuredly the increased returns will soon pay the chemist's salary many times over. And then, what about the waste material which reaches very large proportions in every canning industry? In many other industries it is just the disposal of the waste bye-product and its conversion into something useful which enables one manufacturer to compete against another, as you very well know. To take the fruit canning industry once more, it would not take an organic chemist of very extensive training to suggest a use for the skins and kernels and general refuse of peaches, pears, cherries and such like, or to find out whether something valuable could not be extracted from the leaves and pods of the pea or bean.

These, gentlemen, are some of the lines which occur to me in the short time which, in the stress of other business, I have been able to spend in considering what I should say that would be of interest to you. In all of them the nation or the man who would reap the profit must be first prepared for some outlay, but I have never yet heard of an industry in which a well trained chemist was employed where he did not rapidly save his employer far more than his salary, and that very often in the utilization of what had before been waste. In fact it is very often the function of the chemist to fulfil the letter of scripture in "gathering up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost," and not unfrequently he makes it worth twelve basketfuls of the original material.

But I said a well trained chemist. You can scarcely expect a youth fresh from the mere routine work of college to undertake at once the difficult task of finding out the essential principles of plants and fruits. Give him a chance first to see how such work is done in college. Let him stay on for a year or more doing scientific investigation; he will learn how to tackle the problems that you have to set him afterwards. I may have given a very poor outline of them; you know better than I what they are, and if he is worth his salt he will find them out for himself when he gets into your business. But an extra year at college means extra expense to him, and he is anxious to earn a livelihood as soon as possible. Why not help him, gentlemen to spend the extra year—the best year of all his course—in the university? It will pay you in the long run as I have tried to point out, by his far greater efficiency in knowing how to tackle your problems.

Gentlemen, I would conclude by saying that I hope in a short time to see established by the Grocers' Section of the Canadian Manufacturers Association as has been done by similar associations elsewhere, a research scholarship for organic chemistery in McGill University.

THE MOLASSES WAR.

THE molasses war goes merrily on, and the arrival in St. John, N.B., of ever increasing supplies of the new crop will tend to reduce the price, says an eastern exchange. As recently as March 17 a large consignment from Barbadoes was received by rail.

The fight in the molasses market which is now in progress, has been going on for five or six years, but broke out rather more fiercely than usual last season, when one concern almost cornered the market. This combine is known by different names in different places, and has agencies all through Canada as well as in different parts of the United States. Last year the combine by buying high secured the greater part of the output from Porto Rico and much of that from Barbadoes. Late in the season other wholesale dealers were unable to buy direct and had to get their supplies from the combine. This concern gradually increased the price to about ten cents per gallon more than usual, and the result was a proportionate increase in the retail price.

Early in January a large firm of molasses importers in St. John managed to get hold of a consignment of the new crop Porto Rico molasses. This was bought at such a reasonable rate that the firm was able to sell much below the prices then demanded by the combine, and even lower than the latter concern could well afford to sell. Accordingly a cut of six cents per gallon was made, and all that the said firm could secure was rapidly disposed of. At that time the combine had perhaps 15,000 puncheons of molasses of different quality in Canada, stored in warehouses at their agencies chiefly in St. John, Halifax and Montreal. Since that time the snow blockades on the railways have grgeatly interfered with trade and some thousands of puncheons of old crop molasses are still held by the combine, in addtion to the supplies of new crop now coming in.

Porto Rico molasses is the best and is now selling, according to size of lots purchased, at 35 or 36 cents. Barbadoes new crop brings an average price of 27 cents. There are some thousands of puncheons of Porto Rico and of the cheaper grades of molasses stored in the provinces, which must be sold at a reduced price. They belong to last year's crop and have already been held long enough. These grades will in all probability be sold for about 24 cents, and the sale will undoubtedly be forced by the steadily increasing importations of new crop now being received. The Porto Rico new crop is not yet here, but is due at almost any time, when further cutting of rates may be expected.

According to latest advices the combine is again endeavoring to corner the market. At one port the St. John firm bought largely and next day the market dropped one cent. They then tried to purchase the balance of the output, but found that the combine had stepped in ahead and secured what remained.

FABULOUS PRICE PAID FOR POTATOES.

At a sale of seed potatoes at Spilsby, Lincolnshire, Eng., recently, all existing records for extraordinary prices were eclipsed. Six tubers of the Eldorado variety were disposed of by auction, the lot weighing only five ounces. They realized £56 3s 6d, and as this works out at £402,658 13s 4d per ton, it constitutes a world's record. One potato sold for £11 and another for ten guineas. Nine guineas was paid for a tuber that weighed only half an ounce. A stone of a new variety, which has been named the Sir John Franklin, and which has only been on the market a fortnight, sold at the rate of £3,000 per ton.

RICE GROWING IN TEXAS AND LOUISIANA.

THE development of rice culture on a commercial scale in Texas and Louisiana has been carefully fostered for the past six years by the Bureau of Plant Industry. An expenditure of about $3,000 annually has been devoted to the work, the amount being spent in the introduction of new seed, the testing of varieties of rice and experiments in better cultural methods. Largely as a result of this work the rice production of these two states has been increased from 115,000,000 pounds in 1898 to 300,000,000 pounds in 1903. With the increase of home production the imports of the United States have fallen from 4,000,000 pounds in 1889 to practically nothing in 1903. The value of the land in thees two states where rice is now grown has increased from $1.50 per acre, to $35 and $50 per acre.

READJUSTMENT IN BUSINESS.

The firm of V. S. White & Co., grocers, lumber merchants, etc., St. John, N.B., in view of the increasing demands of their business, have been compelled to make some important readjustments. Their grocery division will in the course of a short time be controlled by the St. John Mercantile Company, which will be composed of the White firm and McCavour & Co., who have been conducting a grocery business in the immediate vicinity.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Canadian Butter Trade.

OWING to the war in the Far East, says the Trade Bulletin, it is expected that a largely increased demand will be experienced for Canadian butter during the coming season, in consequence of the prospects of a heavy decrease in the Russian and Siberian supply, the gap in which, it is claimed, can only be profitably filled by Canada. It is not thought, however, that there will be much call for Canadian creamery before the grass product is available. Although shipments from Australia and New Zealand have fallen off somewhat within the past few weeks, they have still been ample. These, however, will soon show a material decrease, the English markets have already evinced signs of decided improvement. No very great advance in prices is looked for, as the Irish and English make, as well as the Continental, will soon show an increase. But if the shrinkage in the Russian imports into England prove as large during the coming season as European trade apprehends there wil necessarily be a much greater demand for Canadian butter to take its place.

The imports of Danish butter into Great Britain for anuary were 136,109 cwt., against 161,988 for the same month last year, being a decrease of 25,800 cwt. but those from Australia were 126,000 cwt., against 46,462 last year, showing an increase of 77,000 cwt. The Danish decrease was there more than compensated by the large increase from Australasia and New Zealand. There were 2,972 packages shipped from Canada in January last against 2,624 packages in January 1903; but Canada has never shipped much butter of late years in January, February and March. She has just experienced an unusually long and severe Winter, which has extended into March and the new milk product will be later than usual in coming on the market. Owing to the bad condition of the country roads it is still impossible to get the milk to the factories in many districts. It is therefore improbable that stocks on hand will last beyond the season when the new make is available.

Dairying in Price Edward Island.

One of the most important industries in Prince Edward Island is that of dairying. In 1903 there were manufactured in the province 2,729,556 pounds of cheese valued at $220,769, and 556,547 pounds of butter valued at $87,707.

Canadian Butter Industry.

The chief of the Dominion Government Dairy Service has been suggesting improvements to Canadian butter makers, which, if followed, will help Canadian butter greatly in the English market.

The chief complaint is that of irregularity of quality, and the cause of this defect is held to be due to the fact that the butter is not kept cold enough at the creameries, is exposed to heat unnecessarily in transit to Montreal, and is not frozen properly at that point before being placed in the cold storage chambers of the steamers conveying it to this country. The remedy is to be found in better supervision at the creameries, on the railway, and at the port of shipment. Considering the interests at stake, measures will now be taken to secure the arrival of Canadian butter in a proper condition.

Mould on Butter.

COMPLAINTS are received from time to time at the dairy division, Ottawa, regarding the appearance of mould on the parchment paper linings of butter packages, which in some cases is said to have penetrated the butter for some distance. Mould will grow readily in damp wood; hence the necessity for keeping the interior of a creamery, and especially the refrigerating room, as clean and dry as possible. Poorly constructed refrigerators are apt to be damp, because the warm air which gets in from outside carries moisture with it, which is deposited on the cooler surfaces of the walls, floors and packages. Frequent and prolonged opening of the doors also causes dampness.

Care should also be taken that parchment paper and empty packages are kept in a thoroughly dry, clean place, and that only the very best pure vegetable parchment paper is used, as inferior paper encourages the growth of mould and does not protect the butter.

Dairy Industry in Western Ontario.

As evidence of the large proportions the dairying industry is assuming in Western Ontario, it is reported that one firm in Ingersoll will use 7,000,000 lbs. of milk this season and that arrangements are now being made for contracts to supply this vast quantity. The numerous cheese factories in the district also consume a large amount of milk in the aggregate and are keenly prosecuting the development of the dairying industry.

A Pork-Packing Suit.

AN action preferred by O. Wade, as liquidator of the Pakenham Pork Packing Co., Limited, Stouffville, against the directors of the company and the Standard Bank, is being tried in the non-jury sittings.

The suit involves the history of the pork packing industry in Stouffville. The first concern was known as the Pakenham Pork Packing Co. It became involved, and was taken over by another concern of the same name with the word limited added. Through Mr. Wade the shareholders of the limited concern contend that the old concern unlawfully so manipulated matters that the new firm was loaded up with the liabilities as well as the assets of the old one, and that the latter benefited unlawfully thereby. The sum which it is sought to recover for the shareholders is about $40,000.

Provision Notes.

The Maritime Dairy Co., of Sussex, N.B., is seeking incorporation. This enterprise proposes to purchase butter and cheese factories and go into the production and sale of dairy products on a large scale in New Brunswick.

In consequence of an exceptionally poor hay crop in Nova Scotia last season New Brunswick shippers are sending large quantities of pressed hay to their sister province.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—The provision market is fairly steady for this time of year, although a marked improvement is looked for as soon as navigation opens. There is a better demand for hams and breakfast bacon than last week. The demand for lard is good, especially for first-class material and prices tend to become a little firmer. Fresh meats are quiet and unchanged in price with the exception of lamb, which shows 1c wider range of prices. Light sheep, fine quality, are scarce and in big demand. Our quotations are as follows:

Long clear bacon, per lb	$ 0 08½	$0 08½
Smoked breakfast bacon, per lb	0 12½	0 13
Roll bacon, per lb	0 09½	0 10

Butter—Fairly large quantities of butter are coming forward, and supply about equals demand. Rolls are likely to be especially plentiful as farmers are only now able to market their Winter supplies. Good stock arriving is being readily absorbed. Supplies of creamery are also on the increase and the market is in good shape to take all that is likely to come forward for some time. Dairy rolls are 1c easier and dairy prints from 1 to 2c easier. Prices will likely become lower with the advent of warm weather. We quote as follows:

Cheese—The cheese market has brightened up to some extent since last week, as the result of a cable from England to the effect that higher prices prevail there. Dealers do not appear to think the local cheese market will be effected on account of the proximity of the new cheese season. Large cheeses are 1-2c firmer. Our quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.
Cheese, large	0 10½	0 11

Montreal.

Provisions—The provision market remains dull, prices are much the same as those of last week. The demand for cheese is still strong. For cured meats a very marked demand has cropped up. Dressed hogs are much easier, there has been no change in the price of lard. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50	$18 00

Butter—A scarcity for fine quality of butter still holds. Sharp demands were in evidence every day this week. The bad weather has still interfered with the arrival of fresh goods, and it may be said that the quality of the fresh butter is not as good as it ought to be; and the held over Fall goods seem to be getting the preference. There is a good feeling reported from England, and the market remains unchanged. We quote:

Dairy rolls	0 15	0 16
" tubs	0 15	0 16

Cheese—The advance in cheese of last week was maintained admirably, and there was very little cheese on the market. It is reported that it is 3-4c better than two weeks ago, and 10 to 10 1-2c is quoted now for good cheese. Some second grades have reached as high as 10c. Reports from the country still seem gloomy and it is safe to say that the season will be very late. The condition of the English Cheese market has improved and a marked confidence is in evidence among holders here. A report from Liverpool says: "There has been a further expansion of demand, and a brisk business has been done. There is more firmness manifested, and quotations are a little higher on the week. All grades have participated in the movement, and the present outlook is more promising."

New Packing House in Egypt.

A Hamburg, Germany, company has been organized and now has in operation a packing house at Matarien-Menjalen, Egypt, for the curing and shipping of eels caught in the Nile and its tributaries. This unusual enterprise is purely the result of the high price of meat in Germany, and the consequent increase in the consumption of dried and salted fish. The cause of the high prices of meat is attributed directly to the inhibitory measures of Germany against the importation of American cattle and meat products.

Notes.

Large supplies of potatoes are being sent to the West Indies from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Halifax is the place from which the larger part is shipped, though a 3,000 barrel shipment went from St. John recently

Fresh and Cured Fish

New Regulations for Fishermen.

SOME radical changes in the regulations governing the taking of fish were agreed upon at the recent conference at Ottawa between Commissioner Bastedo, and Hon. R. Prefontaine, Col. Gordean and Prof. Prince, of the Ontario Fisheries Department. They are in effect as follows:

Orders-in-Council will be issued to provide that in future no black bass under 12 inches in length can be taken, and the number to be taken in one day by a fisherman can not exceed eight. Formerly the minimum length of ten inches and the maximum number 12.

A change is also made in the close season. In the past the season exended from April 15th to June 15th, but it was found that tons of fish were slaughtered through the ice, either by spearing or by other means, so the close season will now extend from January 1st to June 30th. Fishermen will note that it will be illegal to take black bass until July 1st. A Winter close season is also provided for the protection of maskinonge and yellow pickerel or dore.

A new regulation prohibits absolutely the sale of bass, maskinonge and brook trout, either by whites or Indians, and the Order-in-Council permitting anglers to take fish out of the province will be cancelled.

An important change is meditated in regard ot the Lake Erie fisheries. In the past it has been the custom to take herring all the year round, a practice which has had a bad effect on the fishing. It is now proposed that no fishing be allowed in these waters from November 15th to March 15th. This meets the approval of the majority of the fishermen of Ontario, provided a similar law is enacted by the American States of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan. Judging by the expression of opinion at the recent Detroit conference, Mr. Bastedo is convinced that similar regulations will be made by the Americans interested.

Another regulation of interest to lake fishermen is that increasing the minimum size of lake trout and whitefish which may be taken. Heretofore the minimum has been two pounds, but at the Detroit conference experts stated that if it was desired to propagate the species it would be advisable not to take any fish of that kind which had not reached a weight of two and a-half pounds. In view of these arguments it was agreed that in future two and a-half pounds should be the minimum for Canadian waters. No sturgeon under 36 inches can be taken, and hereafter all jacklights, or flares, will be prohibited. The penalty for infraction of the new regulations will be a minimum of $10 instead of $1, as in the past, and Dominion authority will be conferred on all provincial fishery overseers.

There is no change in the close season for brook trout, but no angler can take in one day more than 20 trout, eight black bass, four maskinonge 12 yellow pickerel or four lake trout.

British Columbia Fish in Japan.

When war was first rumored in the Orient, British Columbia firms are reported to have arranged provisionally with the Japanese Government for large shipments of salmon and herring in barrels and salted for army provisions.

These orders are said to have been subsequently confirmed, and as a result extraordinary preparations to handle salted salmon for the Japanese army are now going on while herring now running near Nanaimo in Departure Bay are being shipped forward in large quantities by each steamship.

A Codfish Famine.

ST. JOHN is on the verge of a cured codfish famine, and the same conditions will be felt all over the country, says an Eastern exchange. Prices have risen to figures much higher than usual and dealers are unable to get fish enough to fill their orders. Prices on codfish ex vessel have advanced steadily; in fact, it is no longer merely a question of price, but simply can the fish be had? The price per quintal has been $3.50 to $4, but $5 is about the least that must be paid. Vessel owners are making unusual efforts to fit out their boats, but as the season does not commence until the middle of April, it will be the beginning of June before fresh stock will be on the market. Long before then, however, the present stock will be exhausted. To make matters worse there is an unusual scarcity of bait, and it is unlikely that the codfish boats will be able to make any quick trips unless better weather conditions prevail. Last season's catch was much below the average, which fact accounts for the present scarcity. Haddock are also hard to get and local dealers are importing quantities from Boston for the manufacture of haddies.

Protection for Alaska Salmon Fisheries.

"THE new administration bill for the further protection of salmon in Alaska," says a Western exchange, "Is by far the most stringent means yet devised for the protection of the salmon fisheries, and will impose much hardship on several cannery owners, although it is deemed necessary by the Government as a safeguard against the serious depletion of the salmon stock."

The most sweeping change in the bill is that by which all fishing for red and king salmon in the lesser streams of Alaska, above mean low tide, is made unlawful, and penalized by fine and imprisonment.

The new bill also provides that the Secretary of Commerce may prohibit fishing for salmon of all kinds in certain streams, tidal basins and estuaries, in order that these localities may be set aside for purposes of propogation.

Salmon Sold to Russia and Japan.

A report is curenrt in New York that an order for 1,800 cases of red Alaska salmon at $1.35 had been placed there by an English export house, which was believed to be acting in behalf of the commissariat department of the Russian Government. There was also an inquiry for 3,000 cases more of the same grade. It is assumed that if such purchases are being made for the Russian Government the fish is intended for the navy or for the army officers' mess, and that if anything is bought for the rank and file rations it will be cheap salmon, such as pink or humpback.

By some of the trade strong doubt is cast upon the assumption that the purchase of red Alaska salmon above referred to was on behalf of Russia, the contention being that if that country were a buyer of that grade it would go to the nearer London or Liverpool market, where according to last advices, red salmon was obtainable at less than the equivalent of $1.35 New York. It was admitted, however, that reasons might exist which would make it advisable for Russia to buy in New York rather than in England, even though she would have to pay more for the goods.

Notes

Extensive alterations are being made in the plant of the Dominion Fish Company, Owen Sound.

In order to re-stock the waters of the Grand River with game fish, the Ontario Government have decided to prohibit fishing along the river for the year.

Fresh fish shipments through Owen Sound for the season 1903 amounted to 6,600,000 lbs. Two hundred and seventy-five cars were forwarded to Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago and other points, averaging twelve tons to the car.

D. Mowat, Secretary-Treasurer of the Western Canadian Fish Company, Vancouver, was in Winnipeg last week, where he succeeded in selling two carloads of dried codfish, smoked halibut and salmon. Hitherto these goods have all been brought from the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Mowat is extending his business trip to Ontario.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH WEST INDIES.

E. H. COOPER, secretary of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who has recently returned from a trip to the West Indies and British Guiana, reports as follows on the possibilities of trade with these countries:

"The West Indian producers realize the growing and permanent value of the Canadian market for their tropical products; they welcome every effort to create reciprocal trade.

"The Brussels convention, which achieved the abolition of the sugar bounties, has not increased the price of West India sugar; the United States market is now almost completely supplied by Porto Rican, Cuban and home-grown cane and beet; the English market offers now more favorable terms to the colonial than to German sugar, so that the only market in which the West Indian sugar has a preference is in Canada. As yet we can take only about two-thirds of their total sugar production, a fact which keeps the Canadian price of sugar almost equal to the New York parity, permitting but a small portion of the Canadian preference to go to the sugar producer. They hope in time we shall need their entire output, but meanwhile the sugar industry is languishing on account of the extremely low price of sugar.

Want Our Trade.

"Additional estates are being abandoned year by year, and unless the most modern machinery is employed, it does no more than pay to harvest the crop, and that with labor getting from 18 to 30 cents per day. With all the celebrated fertility of these lands, only in one place (British Guiana) does the amount of exports exceed the imports. Many of the planters are deserting sugar for cocoa, oranges, limes and other tropical productions.

"These products the West Indian producer hopes to sell in Canada, and the desire tosec ure and retain for these commodities a permanent market in Canada is, to Canadian observers at least, the supremest political desire in the West Indian's breast. If Downing street would grant the privilege (and it is not probable that its consent would be withheld) it should not be difficult to negotiate a series of reciprocity treaties with these colonies. Even federation is frequently advocated, the colonists feeling that the $200,000 per year paid to resident governors is not a profitable investment. Since I left British Guiana I see that their local governor has expressed a willingness to grant a preference of 10 per cent. upon Canadian goods, and I have no doubt that if our association would take the matter up with the different chambers of commerce throughout the islands, we could initiate an agitation that would result in a general reciprocal tariff arrangement.

"Although it would appear that there should be natural advantages for an exchange of commodities between Canada and the tropical colonies, yet we take only 5 1-2 per cent. of their exports and send them only 5 per cent. of their imports. The United States contibutes 32 per cent. of the imports, and Great Britain 41 per cent. This year's figures, I believe, will show a good increase in their exports to Canada, in view of the large amount of sugar now being bought on Canadian account, and it is, therefore, incumbent upon Canadian shippers to provide an equivalent increase in the opposite direction.

Canadian Flour.

"The objection has been heard in the West Indies that Canadian flour would not stand the hot weather. That complaint has been disproved, and has been changed to one of insufficient quantity. Regular shipments of Ontario flour could supply the demand. Demerara alone imports 15,000 barrels of flour a month, but only about 2,000 barrels come from Canada. Barbadoes takes 48,758 barrels of flour a year from the United States, but not one-tenth of that amount from Canada. All foodstuffs, including grains, beef and pork, cheese, butter and canned goods, are wanted in proportionate quantities. If those could be obtained in sufficient quantities in Canada, I am confident that the colonies would not hesitate to grant Canada a tariff preference. About the only commodity of which they can secure sufficient quantity from Canada is fish.

"Canadian soap finds considerable market in the West Indies. A few of the islands will take nothing but Canadian cheese, while in others you hear that it is too rich and becomes oily in the extreme heat. Supplying as we do both foodstuffs and manufactures, there is still much of that $35,000,000 market that could be gained, with effort and persistence, and an evident desire to give just what is asked for. It is doubtful whether there is a more favorable market offers to Canada now."

TEA PRICES AND THE WAR IN THE EAST.

A DISPATCH from Ottawa says that the Russo-Japanese war has caused an immense increase in the importation of teas into Canada. The information is supplied by officials at the customs department, after a study of the import returns. Although the shipments show a heavy increase, there is, however, no indication that the proportion of suprious or deleterious teas is growing. The reason assigned for the greater importation is that merchants in Canada fear that the war may cause a shortage, and are replenishing their stocks with that idea in mind. The apprehension that the Japan field may be closed is also causing an increased demand for the Indian and Ceylon varieties.

So far the Russo-Jap war has scarcely affected the market, beyond the heavy importations of teas mentioned. The fact that the Japanese control the sea means cheap tea for the people of the United States and Canada. If Russia had control of the Pacific she would blockade the Japanese ports, and tea prices would soar skyward in America.

Later on it may be found, if the war assumes very large proportions, that Japan requires many men to serve in the army whose places on the tea plantations will be very hard to fill, and thus a scarcity of labor may furnish a sufficient reason for the raising of the prices of tea. As a matter of fact, however, the Pacific Ocean and all Japanese ports are wide open, and as there is plenty of tea in Japan, it is hardly likely that even speculative attempts to increase the price will be crowned with success.

INSTALLED ELECTRIC COFFEE MILL.

The increased demand for Stratheona coffee has necessitated W. H. Scroggie Co., Montreal, putting in an electric coffee mill and one of the largest store coffee mills obtainable. This mill, which is a "Cole," was purchased through Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., Toronto. Everything pertaining to prompt, proper and careful handling of groceries is looked after by Mr. Lloyd, manager of the grocery department.

SUGAR COMING.

Montreal has two sugar boats booked. The ss. Crown of Navarre will be at this port in May, coming from Demerara and another steamer of 1,795 tons will bring a cargo from the Port of Spain, West Indies.

MAPLE SUGAR PROSPECTS.

SOME difference of opinion seems to exist as to the probable supply and quality of this year's syrup. Some dealers are inclined to think both quantity and quality will be deficient, and give as reasons the fact that snow followed the first frost in very quick order and remained, covering the ground practically ever since. To ensure a plentiful formation of sap, a frosted state of the earth is needful, and the snow banket they believe, will prevent the frost penetrating deeply. As a result there will be little sap, and on the first really warm day it will be released and flow upwards, the premature flow resulting in a "budded" flavor, as one put it.

Others, however, cannot see any menace to the supply, and several predict an unusually good output. All, however, agree on one point, that the demand will be easily met. There is on the market at present a lot of the adulterated left over from last year while some dealers make a practice of melting down their last year's surplus of maple sugar, converting it into syrup, which is claimed to suffer no loss in flavor.

From all accounts the adulterated form of syrup is driving the real stuff out of the market. The former can be retailed at 90 cents a gallon, while the latter calls for $1.40 or $1.50. "The public appear satisfied with what is handed out to them," say the dealers, "and we get no encouragement to trade in the simon pure brand."

"I don't suppose there will be enough coming in to Toronto this year to fill a cart," remarked one. He didn't mean to be taken literally, of course, but his words were suggestive. It is authoritatively stated that nine-tenths of the so-called maple syrup consumed is an ingenious concoction in which brown sugar and water play leading parts.

"We got our first barrel of real maple syrup in on the 23rd of March last year," said a representative of the Dawson Commission Company, "and it will probably be about a month later this year."

AN INTERESTING PAMPHLET.

Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, have issued a new catalogue, as their introduction reads: "Our first catalogue for dealers only." The catalogue which comprises some 40 pages of cuts of premiums with values, and price list of Tetley's teas and "Bee" brand grocers' specialties, is bound in dark slate cover—the front cover presenting photo of Tetley's famous elephant carrying a large can of "Bee" coffee in his trunk. An encouraging little poem on the first page is worthy of preservation by every merchant who appreciates the policy of "Dig in!" The cuts of premiums offered certainly look tempting.

GROCERS' SPECIALS.

F. H. Leggett & Co., importers and manufacturers of grocers' specialties call attention in this week's issue of The Grocer to a desirable line of goods adapted and suitable to Canadian trade, and solicit the trade of dealers direct.

Leggett & Co's manufactory is located at 132 to 138 King street, New York, where this great house pack and prepare preserves, pickles, meats, soups, grind spices, roast coffee, pack olives, and prepare hundreds of grocery specials, which for lack of space cannot be mentioned. Suffice it to say, however, that if you are a dealer you are cordially invited to inspect this wonderful plant, which is well worth a visit to the metropolis.

Salt—Reduced Prices

Having completed alterations and improvements we are now in a position to fill all orders. Our plant, as reconstructed, is the most modern in existence, and has the largest capacity in the British Empire for the production of high-grade Salt.

The improvements made having enabled us to effect a considerable saving in the cost of manufacture, we have issued new Price Lists, showing very large reductions.

As it is almost impossible to secure cooperage stock we suggest that our customers order ordinary fine Salt in sacks. Write for new Price List.

BRITISH GUIANA PREFERENCE.

PREFERENTIAL tariffs seem to be in the air. The latest colony to declare a preferential tariff within the Empire is British Guiana; Sir James Alexander Swettinham, governor of that colony, having announced recently a preference of 10 per cent. in duties to imports from the United Kingdom and Canada. To Canada this is especially interesting, as it gives to Great Britain and herself an advantage over the foreigner in their markets. E. H. Cooper, secretary of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Manuafacturers' Association, who has just returned from a trip to the British West Indies, tells The Grocer that the West Indian people want Canadian goods, and want to send us more goods. Figures show that the exports from British Guiana to Canada increased nearly four hundred per cent. in three years, and taking the statistics of 1901 to 1903, the bulk of this export trade was carried on in sugar and rum. It is the only place in the whole West Indies where the amount of export exceeds the imports.

And herein the preference will be most important to Canada. For instance, we should send to that colony far more flour than we do, far more food stuffs of all kinds, such as cheese, butter, bacon, lard and canned goods of all descriptions. Nearly half of the goods imported from Canada at the present time is fish. The chief reason given by business men for not exporting more of these goods to the British colonies, is that other exporters in the United States have established a connection there and a market is not easily obtained.

Taking the report of Mr. Cooper as a basis, many of the sugar planters of the Indies are abandoning their industry and are taking up the cultivation of oranges, limes, cocoa, and other tropican productions. If possible, there should be a chance for the Canadian trader without any disparagement to Californian and Florida fruits, to give the preference of his orders to the British West Indies. Such a move would invite reciprocity, and the old saying of one good turn begetting another, would be realized by Canadians taking exchange orders at least or direct orders for our excellent food products, which without boasting, cannot be surpassed in the United States. The old yarn about our Canadian flour being too full of acidity to be useable in tropical climates is entirely exploded. The complaint is that we have not the quantity of the kind of goods they need; if we have not got it is is high time our Canadian producers set about getting it. It would seem idle to tell us that Ontario and the Great West could not more than supply the Indies with the very finest of food stuffs. To illustrate further Barbadoes took nearly 50,000 barrels of flour from the United States per year, while less than one-tenth of this amount came from Canada.

In the butter export trade, for instance, a special variety of tins for packing butter has been brought into use by Mr. Pierre de Bacourt, a Montrealer, manager of the Canadian Pressed Butter Co. It is a vacuum tin insuring perfect preservation of the contents in all climates. This should be useful for the West Indian trade. In fact it is an old saw that states, "Where there is a will there is a way," and this year's exports will no doubt show a good increase in the exports to Canada from this colony, and vice versa. In sugar, Canada gives a preference of 33 1-3 per cent. to West Indian products, but this suggests another complex subject, which is explained by a report received from the Canadian Commercial Agent at St. Kitts as follows:

"British West Indian sugar planters are drawing no benefit from the customs preference of 33 1-3 per cent. which West Indian sugars enjoy entering Canada. The bone of contention in this matter is the retention by the refiners of the whole customs rebate, no portion of the advantage finding its way into the pockets of the growers. At a meeting of sugar planters and merchants in St. Ktts it was strongly urged that the producers of muscovado sugar in the British West Indies should combine to cease all consignments to Canada for the present, with the just possible result that if refined 96 degree crystals, which Canadian refiners really want, are scarce, there may be some demand for muscovadoes to take their place, and a consequent small improvement in quotations may follow. British West Indians recognize that this is the best market for their output of raw sugar, but the price paid by refiners for muscovadoes is the bare equivalent of that paid in New York."

To explain this statement clearly would require an intricate and technical explanation of the sugar grading, but that may be done in a special article. The point is, that Canada is not the market for the West Indian sugar, which it ought to be, or at least, conditions are not as favorable as they might be.

Another fact which will be very important to fruit dealers in Montreal and Toronto, is that there is likely to be a direct line of steamers established between Montreal and the British West Indies, the Pickford & Black service from Halifax and St. John, it is understood, being withdrawn as far as Government support is concerned. The advantages of such a service to Canada cannot be spoken of here, but must be self-evident.

WEST INDIAN SUGAR PREFERENCE.

A REPORT received recently by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, from one of the Canadian commercial agents stationed in the West Indies, states that British West Indian sugar planters are deriving no benefit from the customs preference of 33 1-3 per cent. which West Indian sugars enjoy entering Canada, and that they are planning co-operation in order to secure if possible more favorable terms from Canada.

The trouble seems to be largely due to the Cuban preference granted last Autumn by the United States, which is only now becoming operative. At the present time 96 centrifugal Cuban sugar c. and f. New York are quoted on a basis of $2.25 per cwt. There is a specific duty of $1.68 1-2 per cent. on raw sugar entering the United States, and in the case of Cuban sugars there is a preference of 20 per cent., making the net duty $1.35. Thus the total cost of this sugar duty paid in New York is $3.60 per cwt. according to the prices ruling at the time of writing.

The volume of Cuban production at present is just sufficient to dominate the New York market during the months when sugars from that island and the other West Indies are entering the United States and the sugar producers of the British West Indies have to meet the price named for the Cuban product, duty paid, in New York.

Since West Indian sugars have to compete in New York with Cubans the regular duty of $1.68 1-2 per cwt. leaves only $1.91 1-2 for West Indian 96 centrifugal sugars c. and f. New York.

Canadian refiners, it is asserted, have made an arrangement with brokers whereby they pay the same price as that which rules in New York c. and f. dian sugars duty paid is only $2.38 1-2 The specific Canadian duty is 71c. per cwt. on raw sugars and there is a preference of 23c. making the net duty 47c. The total cost then of West Indian sugar duty paid is only $2.38 1-2 per cwt. It is easily seen that Canadian refiners have the advantage of the New York price in addition to that of the Canadian preference.

One local sugar broker when questioned on the subject, said there was no question about the West Indian sugar planters having the poorer end of the bargain and that Canadian refiners were profiting from what was neither more nor less than a favorable turn of commerce. It is a question whether certain brokers are not to be blamed for the situation and the apparent injustice to West Indian sugar planters. But whcever may be to blame it is evident that the planters in the West Indies are at present deriving little or no benefit from the Canadian preferential tariff.

RECIPROCITY WITH THE UNITED STATES.

IT seems to be the universal tendency of man to fail in appreciation of what is within reach and to ever strive after the unattainable.

At one time Canadian economists, politicians and business men were convinced that Canada needed closer commercial relations with the United States. Delegation after delegation went from the Canadian Parliament to Washington to ask for a reciprocal tariff arrangement which might be of advantage to both countries. Canada was at the time willing, even anxious, to give much in the hope of some gain for herself. But the United States would not deign to even consider seriously the Canadian proposals. Large interests which might have been affected by reciprocity with Canada used their influence so skillfully and so persistently that the efforts of those who desired closer relations with Canada were completely overshadowed.

In the passage of the "McKinley Bill," the climax of United States hostility to Canada was reached. At one stroke this enactment shut out many products, the sale of which contributed much to the country's prosperity.

In the opinion of many Canada was ruined by this hostile legislation. It is well known that it takes years to turn the farmer from the crops he has found profitable under certain circumstances and to direct his energies to building up industries comparatively new to him. But this was done, and while the years immediately after the passage of the McKinley Bill were decidedly lean ones, they were well spent in turning the attention of the Canadian farmer to stock raising, cheese and butter making, etc. In a decade a market has been secured for Canadian products in Great Britain which is infinitely more valuable to Canada than our exports of agriculaural products to the United States ever could have been.

At the same time the contemptuous indifference to Canadian trade manifested by the utterances of leading public men of the United States was exasperating in the extreme.

All of this combined to nourish a national spirit and to develop a bond of Imperial loyalty which expressed itself first in the preference of 33 1-3 per cent. to British products and later in the general approval which greeted the statement by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, after the failure of the treaty negotiations in Washington a couple of years ago, that "Canada should go no more to Washington for tariff favors."

Since that utterance, which bears the weight of the conviction of the Canadian Premier and the moral support of the Canadian people, reciprocity has been a dead issue in Canada. Almost in inverse ratio as the desire for reciprocity has decreased in Canada it has increased in the United States. To-day it is recognized that Canada is, in comparative proportion and almost in aggregate volume, the best customer the United States has. It is also recognized that the strongest industrial organization in the Dominion, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, seeks a higher tariff against United States goods even though that entailed a bigger preference to Great Britain.

So far Canada has never been stampeded into tariff enactments as a result of the hostility aroused by the unfriendly tariff legislation of the United States. And it is to be hoped that the same caution, the same moderation will dominate our future relations with the big Republic to the south.

Yet it must be made clear to United States commercial bodies that any movement for reciprocity with Canada must be initiated by the United States and must be backed by sufficient influence to guarantee to the Canadian Parliament that its proposals will be considered on a purely business basis. Canada is willing to give advantages to the United States, but for each advantage she gives she will insist on an equivalent in return.

At a banquet in Boston the other evening two of the foremost speakers, H. M. Whitney and Col. Clarke, in pointing out Boston's need of developing the fish trade, declared in no uncertain tone in favor of reciprocity with Canada.

It must be remembered, however, that Canada is unready to discuss reciprocity in any one line. Unless the United States fish interests, lumber interests, manufacturing interests, etc., who desire closer relations with Canada can unite their forces sufficiently to win the support of the United States Congress and overcome the antagonism of the United States Senate their desires for reciprocity will be of no avail.

A DROP IN POTATOES.

POTATOES became much easier in Montreal on Tuesday; in fact they dropped from 80c. to 60c. a bag on track lots. This was accounted for the merchants having laid in large stocks, before the roads broke up to prevent movement of large lots.

Abundant quantities are in the hands of the dealers, and it is quite possible that the low prices may prevail for some time.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. E. Brown, a well-known grocer of Peterborough, is dead.

Mr. T. B. Greening, Toronto and Hamilton, was a visitor to the trade of Montreal last week.

Mr. A. Wills, import agent, Montreal, was in Toronto this week and favored the Grocer with a call.

Mr. H. R. Bernard, of Hunt & Co., was in Quebec this week, where he found business flourishing in the tea trade.

D. D. Currie, general merchant, Belleville, has gone to Saskatoon, Sask., where he intends opening a general store.

The many friends of Mr. Witmore are pleased to welcome him back to St. John, N. B. He takes a responsible position with Dearborn & Co.

Mr. W. Hay and a staff from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, have left for St. Louis, Mo., to superintend the installation of the Canadian exhibit there.

Messrs. W. R. Hooper of New York, and H. L. Rice of St. Mary were introduced on Montreal 'Change yesterday, the latter by Mr. H. D. Matcalfe of Montreal.

Mr. W. D. Brown, confectioner, Galt, is dead. Mr. Brown started in business there over a score of years ago, and through his ability was enabled to build up one of the leading retail establishments of the town.

Mr. F. J. Cheeseworth, representing John Dwight & Co., Toronto, was a visitor to the Montreal trade this week. Mr. Cheeseworth has been doing some good advertising work for "Cow" brand soda as well as looking after orders.

Mr. P. G. Shallcross, of Shallcross, McCaulay & Co., Vancouver, who has been visiting the chief trade centres in Canada and the United States in the interests of his firm, is in Toronto this week.

Mr. H. Graham, of Graham & Company, Belleville, the well-known packers of evaporated apples, onions, etc., was in the city this week. He reported a decided activity in the evaporated apple trade, and stated that a marked advance had taken place.

Mr. C. E. Thurston, one of the biggest fruit buyers of New York, was in Montreal yesterday. He anticipates great activity in the green fruit trade this season, and that new arrivals by steamer will ease prices from week to week.

Mr. J. A. Courtemanche, of Ocean Mills, Montreal, who was scheduled to represent his firm in Winnipeg and the West, has been transferred to St. John, N. B., where he will commence an active campaign with Chinese starch, baking powder, &c.

R. Henderson, a representative of the well known Chalmers firm, fruit importers, Glasgow, Scotland, who has been located in Colborne for the past few months, was banqueted by the citizens on March 15, on the eve of his departure for home.

Mr. N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co., Chatham, Ont., accompanied by Mr. R. Newman of the Canada Bean Co., were in Montreal this week on their way home from a tour to Quebec and other Eastern cities.

Mr. J. K. McLennan of Winnipeg was in Montreal this week and was introduced on 'Change by T. A. Crane. Mr. McLennan was here in the interests af the Independent Grain Co., a concern of considerable magnitude in the West.

Mayor Laporte, head of the big wholesale grocers, Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, has been so busy with his city duties that he has been unable to rest from his arduous campaign. He left on Wednesday for a prolonged trip to Atlantic City.

Mr. Wm. J. Joyce, of R. Herron & Co., Montreal, was in the city during the past week. Mr. Joyce, who covers the territory between Montreal and Quebec City, reported that despite the bad roads and heavy travelling, business has been satisfactory.

Mr. A. E. Sterling, representing T. A. Lytle & Co., Toronto, was a caller at the Montreal offices of The Grocer last week. Mr. Sterling was on his way West from Quebec and reported good and increased demand for his firm's well known grocers' specialties.

Mr. M. Scully, of Lloyd & Scully, produce merchants, Owen Sound, Ont., was introduced on Montreal 'Change yesterday by H. A. Hodgson, one of the largest local produce merchants of Montreal. Mr. Scully was in town several days, and visited some of the big local dealers.

Mr. W. G. Winter, of the firm of T. & M. Winter, St. John's, Nfld., was in Montreal this week, and was introduced on 'Change by Mr. Robt. Meighen, head of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company. Mr. Winter is on his way to England, and stated that in his business of provisions and flour, things were prosperous.

Mr. F. L. Hart, of Hart & Tuckwell, has just returned from an extensive trip throught the U. S. While ostensibly on a pleasure trip to Atlantic City, Mr. Hart took advantage of business widening pursuits, and visited New York, Washington and other centres. He is considered one of the best local authorities on green fruits.

The many customers and friends of Mr. H. Forrest, representative of the Salada Tea Co., on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, will regret to learn that he is laid up with appendicitis. As he may have to undergo an operation it will be several weeks before he will be able to call upon his trade. The Grocer wishes him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Eugene Rosedale, manager of T. Lipton's coffee department, New York, was a caller at the Montreal offices of The Grocer this week. Mr. Rosedale's report of the growth and development of Lipton's Canadian business was very interesting, some of the statistics submitted being particularly so. Mr. Rosedale says the future outlook is bright.

Mr. Walter C. Gaden, salesman for Red Rose Tea in the city of Montreal and district, was a caller at the Montreal offices of The Grocer last Friday. Mr. Gaden says "Red Rose Tea has made more friends than seemed possible against the numerous package teas on sale here, and I am thoroughly satisfied with the good opinions expressed by trade and consumer."

SALADA TEA CO.

The "Salada" Tea Co. report that their trade during the past six weeks has increased 61,535 pounds over the corresponding six weeks of last year. This is an average increase per week of 10,256 pounds.

NEW AGENCY.

D. Rattray & Son, of Quebec city, were appointed agents this week for the Canada Bean Co., of Chatham. They intend introducing the bean tester supplied by Stevens & Newman, of the Chatham Co., which will establish a solid grading system for beans in the trade generally.

MARKETS AND MARKET NOTES

ONTARIO MARKETS.

Groceries.

Toronto, March 24, 1904.

THE grocery market is fairly active and business generally is improving. The demand for sugars is improving; an active demand is reported and many retailers have begun to think this is a good time for stocking up. Buying of teas is brisk, with the market showing signs of firmness throughout. Canned goods are firm. The demand for syrups and molasses is good. Coffee is firmer and likely to go higher in price. Dried fruits are quiet with prices unchanged. Spices are firm, also rice and tapioca with the latter stiffening in price appreciably.

CANNED GOODS.

The market for canned goods is brisk with good demand. Canned goods are getting into continually smaller compass, and people are kept guessing as regards prices. At any rate the present prices will not become lower. Our quotations are as follows:

SUGAR

The strong position in raws has been well maintained and there have been sales at a further 1-16 advance, that is on basis of 2 1-4 c. and f. New York for 96 test Centrifugals, which is equivalent to full duty paid basis of 3.59. There are still buyers on this basis for shipment, but sellers are now holding for further advance and at the moment there are no further transactions to report. There are rumors of sales of centrifugals in Cuba at 2 5-16 c. and f. but it is believed these were for speculators. The spot quotation remains nominal on basis of 3 1-2 duty paid, with no transactions to record.

There are 171 central factories grinding in Cuba against the same number last year, but with heavy sales of the present crop at shipping ports, stocks are about 62,000 tons less than for the same period last year. Combined stocks in the United States and Cuba at latest reports were 347,144 tons, a decrease of 110,166 tons from last year. Combined stocks of Europe and America at latest uneven dates, were 3,455,144 tons, an increase of 13,339 tons over the same period last year. It would be observed that the comparative increase in world's supply is gradually disappearing. On January 1 last this amounted to 209,885 tons.

Receipts at United States Atlantic ports for the week ending March 16 were 43,503 tons, with meltings reduced for the week 1,000 tons, or say to 33,000 tons, leaving stock on all hands of 125,144 tons.

European markets put on further strength for the week. The price of 88 per cent. beet advanced 1 1-2d per cwt, or was 8s 5 1-4d f.o.b. Hamburg, quotation on basis of March and April shipment. This is equivalent to 3.78 duty paid New York for 96 test centrifugals. By cable from Europe dated March 19, 1904, F. O. Licht reduces the estimate of the beet crop 80,000 tons, making the estimate for the entire European crop 5,830,000 tons. In this connection recent advices from Europe show that the consumption of sugar in the principal countries for the period from September, 1903 to January, 1904, inclusive is 338,991 tons, or 23 per cent. greater than that during the same period of the previous campaign. The period covered is since the Brussels sugar convention went into effect, and it would thus be observed that experience is bearing out predictions along the same line.

Little new business is doing in refined in the United States or Canada. The strong tone of the raw market is reflected in the refined market where prices are firmly held without special indications for the immediate future. Now that the weather has taken a more Springlike turn and the freight blockade has been raised there should be large increases in the local consumption of sugar. Quotations remain as follows:

TEAS.

The firm tone of the tea market recorded in last report is still confirmed. Japan tea is scarce and getting into very small compass in this country. Few desirable Japan and China teas are offering although the demand for Japan is more brisk than for some time. The new Japan market opens next month. The price of flavory Ceylon teas on the last London sale advanced in most cases 1c per lb. There is a complete dearth of teas of a stand out flavory quality. The general market of India and Ceylon teas is strong and higher in price.

Tea is not sufficiently narrow to make market stronger generally, flavory qualities are scarce however. Ceylon greens have advanced 1-2d in Ceylon and continue to sell freely. Deliveries of teas are proceeding on a heavy scale in the London market. Clearances of all teas during the current month show an increase of one and three-quarter million pounds for home consumption as compared with last year. Quotations are as follows:

COFFEES.

The coffee market continues steady and firm prices prevail. Considerable business has been done on the street this week in Rios, and Mocha has been tried. Brazil is relatively higher in New York where the market is weak. Prospects are not for lower prices in the long run, although coffee is relatively over 1c cheaper than it was a month ago. Notwithstanding the uncertainty of the coming coffee crop, there is enough coffee in sight to supply the world for one year. Our quotations are as follows:

SPICES.

The spice market is somewhat brighter than last week, although it is slow in showing marked signs of life. Peppers are a little easier owing to lack of demand. As soon as firm demand sets in, higher prices are prophesied in spices, since it is not thought that supplies have accumulated. The quantity of nutmeg from prime markets is light. Country Produce.

EGGS.

The egg market is easier than it was last week, although as yet supplies are barely equal to demand. The call for eggs is particularly good, the supply coming in this week being fully 75 per cent. of what it was a year ago, when facilities of transportation were unimpeded and prices much lower. "People are eating more eggs altogether," says one produce merchant. Our quotations are as follows:

Fish.

The demand for fish continues fair, although one of the most successful fish seasons in years is now far on the wane. Stocks are pretty well cleaned out. The feature of this week's market is that the scarcity of oysters is now over and prices have dropped 15c for standards and 25c for selects. Our quotations are as follows:

Green Fruits.

The condition of the fruit trade has improved decidedly since last week, with local trade brisk and facilities for outside distribution more nearly normal. California navels lead easily in the market, with good demand. Stocks arriving recently have shown in several instances signs of wasting, which has necessitated sending the fruit in iced refrigerator cars. Valencia oranges are also in good demand and follow navels on the list along with Mexicans. The market for marmalade oranges is nearly over. The demand for lemons is brisk, and prices are 25c firmer. Grape fruit is scarce. Pineapples are in good demand and this week's prices are considerably easier than ruling prices for last week. Bananas find ready sale and are higher in price; together with pineapples they are the fruit par excellence for the season from now on. Grape fruit is scarce. Cranberries are considerably reduced in price. Florida tomatoes are selling readily, although stocks received recently have not been as good quality as usual. Strawberries are 10c easier than last week and are offering in pint boxes at 25c. Our quotations are as follows:

Vegetables.

Trade in vegetables continues much the same as last week, with brisk demand and many varieties difficult to obtain, particularly parsnips and cabbage. As soon as the ground thaws sufficiently, however, parsnips will become more plentiful. Potatoes are a little easier. Red onions are practically out of the market. The demand for Valencia onions continues fair, and prices are easier. Some stocks on the market are showing signs of growth. Only a few carrots are to be seen this week. California celery continues to find a ready sale. Green onions are scarce and higher in price. Florida spinach is on the market this week for the first time this season. Grain, Flour and Breakfast Foods.

GRAIN.

The grain market is quiet this week and prices are again fluctuating with a downward tendency. Manitoba wheat, No. 1 hard, is 1½c easier. Northern No. 1 is 1½c lower in price, also No. 2 Northern. Red and white wheat are each 1c easier. Peas are 2 to 3c firmer. Our quotations are as follows :

FLOUR.

The flour market is active and easier this week. Supplies are beginning to come in readily from the farmers. The flour market moves to a large extent in sympathy with the grain market, and until the latter becomes more stationery it will be impossible to fortell the price of flour. Manitoba wheat patents, strong bakers' patents, Ontario wheat patents and straight roller patents are each 10c easier. Our quotations are as follows :

QUEBEC MARKETS.

Montreal, March 24, 1904.

Groceries.

THE local market has been devoid of animation, and only immaterial changes have taken place. Again the weather has interferred, and the anticipated rush has not set in. Tea and sugar are still interesting the market. In fact the rise in sugar, of last week, has been maintained, and it was stated by a large importer that the Canadian refiners have agreed together, to pay only the New York prices, minus the United States duty, for bright, grainy, grocery sugars. The result is that very little West India sugar is coming here, in fact, this importer stated that it would pay West Indian importers better to send this kind of sugar to the English market where there has been an advance in price. The advisability of such a move, however, is questionable when the greater freight charges to England might absorb all the gain in price. Teas of all kinds remain firm, and there is very little Japan left in stock, the advance in certain drugs which was noticed last week, such as camphor and sulphur, has been maintained. Camphorated chalk has advanced to 25c per lb owing to the advance in camphor. Menthol, another drug, has also gone up in price, which is not surprising when it is remembered that all the peppermint from which menthol is made is grown in Japan. Carbolic acid and iodine have also advanced. Higher prices may be anticipated in glycerine, sulphur and all incidentals that go towards the manufacture of explosives. The demand for cereals is still good, the drop in rice has been well observed all over the province. Canned goods are still slow, and as fresh fish is coming freely, and next week is the last week of Lent, a lull may be expected in canned fish. Word comes from abroad that there is a scarcity in French sardines. Green fruits are beginning to be active, and there has been a large auction sale of Sorento oranges of 3,000 packages, which sold from $1.20 to $1.65. Celery will be in great demand for Easter week, so a good supply should be secured. Florida strawberries were sold freely at 40c. Malaga grapes are exceedingly scarce and have sold as high as $8.50 a keg.

SUGAR.

The recent rise in values here has been followed by activity in the United States, although American refiners seem well supplied with raw sugar. American speculators seem to be acting as if sugar had been depressed too much, and it is reported that further advances may be made on the prices at which they are supplying themselves with cane sugar. There is a very decided firmness on he local market, and a marked probability of it being maintained. We quote:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

No new features have arisen in the molasses market, only that the demand is increasing from day to day. In some quarters the price is expected to go down, but that cannot be immediately. A dealer from Newfoundland who was in the city this week, verified the report of The Grocer that there was a substantial amount of old molasses in that place. This will tend to make the dealers very careful, and may cause some guessing in trade. We quote:

COFFEE.

Coffee prices are solid without any marked advance. The market remains almost stationary. Rios strengthened a little, but dropped back again to 8c and 9c yesterday. Reports from abroad state that the East India crop was disappointing in nature, and that the bulk of trade was being driven on Costa Rica. Men who follow the planters report that should the quality of Costa Rica be inferior also, an unsatisfactory season might be looked for. We quote:

TEA.

The firmness of last week has steadily held out throughout the week and Japan stocks are pretty well cleaned out. The advance in the China Congous has also held out and 10 1-2c is readily obtained. Reports from abroad state that this price may last some time as the stocks have considerably depreciated in comparison with similar periods last year. There has been plenty of enquiry for the medium qualities of tea. Ceylon and Indian teas show a stronger market, and the closings have been firm every day. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

The demand for some kinds of canned goods during the past few days shows signs of improvement, and as fine weather is expected, better enquiry will follow. Old stocks are getting steadily less as the weeks go on, and the last week of Lent will notice a diminution in the canned fish trade. Some vegetables, especially tomatoes have had good sale at firm prices. The demand has been good for lobsters. The future of salmon is reported strong, and dealers do not anticipate any marked decline in values for some time. We quote:

Foreign Dried Fruits.

The interest in dried fruits is well maintained and we learn from Wm. Rogers & Co., of Denia, that Valencia raisins are in good demand, and that they have shipped 2,000 boxes of prime fruit for which about 22s to 23s cost and freight to Montreal, is the price asked. From Malaga shelled almonds are reported firm with a recent slight decline in some lines, notably Jordan's which are almost exhausted. Currants continue firm without much change in price, although the demand has increased in volume, and now embraces all qualities. For the time of year a healthy business is being done in Sultana's. Grenoble walnuts maintain a high price. Shelled nuts are now down to the price at which buyers are going in for securing supplies to put in cold storage for the early Autumn and Christmas trade. Filberts are reported slightly easier; F. Baller & Co. quoting 40s 3d per bale, cost and freight. Candied peels are still high, the advance which obtained last December has been firmly maintained. Dates are weaker in the London market, and the local stock is not abundant, but this has not effected the market for spot supplies. We quote:

oranges has been very light. For choice apples the demand has been fine, firmness marking all good fruit. Celery is on the market in excellent quality, and will be advanced in price, no doubt, for Easter week. Cucumbers are a little easier, selling at $2.50 a dozen. Pineapples have gone up 50c a case. Spanish onions have increased 25c a case. Florida tomatoes have dropped 50c a case. A large quantity of new arrival of lemons in New York has sent the price down here. Fish.

Fresh fish has been coming in very freely this week, and prices may go down quickly but this is not to be taken as advice, as the weather will have something to do with it. All kinds of fish continues to be scarce. Frozen fish is practically finished. Oysters are easier selling at much the same price as last week. EGGS.

Eggs are coming in freely, yet very little decrease in price is expected immediately. Local dealers report the market lower, and it is difficult still from day to day to know just what price to ask. To-day 21c rules. Lower prices are expected any day. We would advise buyers to be careful of the egg market from day to day, as Easer is at hand and large supplies will be served out with a good deal of judgment.

BEANS.

The bean market has weakened very considerably, and whether it was the visit of the Western bean men that caused it or not the market went "all to pieces," and primes sold at $1.30 a bushel in carlots, and that means good three-pound pickers; smaller lots sold at $1.50 and lots of one to five barrels at $1.55, hand-picked, $1.60 to $1.65.

HONEY.

Comb honey is still scarce, and prices rule for white clover at 14 to 16c, buckwheat is still quoted at 6 and 7c, there is none in sight. Extracted white clover is easier at 8 and 9c.

POTATOES.

Potatoes are still active, and high prices are ruling for first-class stock, 75 to 80c, being quoted for carlots on track, and 80 to 85c per bag with plenty of offerings. Large quantities of potatoes have been shipped from Halifax to the West Indies.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

No new maple sugar has arrived yet and the market has remained absolutely featureless in this line. It is notable how little frudulent sugar is being offered. We quote:

Maple syrup, in wood, per lb	0 05½	0 06
Maple syrup, in large tins	0 70	0 75
Pure sugar, per lb	0 07	0 07½
Pure Beauce sugar, per lb	0 08½	0 09

Flour and Feed.

FLOUR.

The firmness of flour has kept up steadily. The price for straight rollers ranging from $4.75 to $4.90, but yesterday it was reported strong again. The expected weakening has not taken place in Manitoba grades, although it may come any day. The easiness of Ontario flour is accounted for in the arrival of late shipments.

Manitoba spring wheat patents	....	5 40
" strong bakers'	....	5 10
Winter wheat patents	5 10	5 25
Straight rollers	4 85	5 00
Extra	3 80	3 90
Straight rollers, bags	2 30	2 35

FEED.

Feed has become considerably firmer and a brisk demand for all kinds. Ontario bran in bulk has advanced a little, and while the normal price of $19 is quoted $20 and $20.50 has been reached. Shorts remain the same. We quote:

Ontario bran, in bulk	....	19 00
" shorts	....	21 00
Manitoba bran, in bags	19 00	20 00
" shorts	....	21 00
Mouillie	26 00	28 00

OATMEAL.

Oatmeal is practically the same as last week, but oats themselves have been coming into the city very rapidly and considerable concession has been made by dealers; 36c for No. 3 on track was the price ruling, this is a decline of a cent since last week. We quote:

Fine oatmeal, bags	....	2 90
Standard oatmeal, bags	....	2 90

Rolled oats, bags	....	2 55
" bbls	....	5 30

HIDES.

The hide market continues tame and uninteresting. The price advanced 1-2c on beef hides early in the week and 1c on calf skins. Normal conditions now rule as follows:

No. 1 beef hides	0 08	0 08½
No. 2 "	0 07	0 07½
No. 3 "	0 06	0 06½
Lambskins	....	0 75

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., Mar. 18, 1904.

THE position of business at White Horse, dependent upon the rush of gold seekers to the New Alsek diggings is well described by Dr. F. W. Cane, an old Toronto and Newmarket diggings is well described by Dr. F. W. Horse. Dr. Cane was in Vancouver this week on his way east. He says that from all information received at White Horse there is every prospect of the new field warranting all the excitement and activity it has caused. The Winter has been exceptionally severe, yet the work of putting down prospect holes has resulted in good values being found. As the Spring season approaches the price of claims in the district has gone up, and many of them have sold at good figures. On creeks which have been partially proved claims which could be bought last Fall for $100 to $500, cannot now be bought for $1,000 to $1,500.

White Horse merchants are well stocked up with all sorts of supplies for the wants of those outfitting, and prices are fairly reasonable. Many people are daily leaving over the snow for the creeks to be in before the break up of Winter, and more are outfitting daily. To provide for the rush when Spring opens, the White Pass Railway Co. has given assurances that a steamer service will be put on the Tahkeena river up to Mendenahll landing, on the way to the diggings. Commissioner Congdon of the Yukon Territory has also given assurances that the Government will construct a wagon road from White Horse to the di[illegible]s if the development at [illegible] warrants it. The distance would be from 175 to 200 miles to cover all the creeks. Governor Congdon has expressed himself well satisfied with the information he has gleaned concerning the new district. He was in White Horse last week and may come south after looking into matters there more fully.

The increasing attention being paid to fruit growing in all parts of the Province is very noticeable. During the Winter months the B. C. Fruit Growers' Association has been very active in holding meetings in various parts of the Province to organize branches of the association for local work. These have been well attended by the farmers and fruit growers as a rule, and the program mapped out for these local associations will, if carried out, greatly increase the industry.

In the interior there is marked activity in the disposal of lands suitable

TERMS: F.O.B. MONTREAL, Net 30 days or 1% 10 days.

Hudon, Hebert & Cie.

MONTREAL.

Porto Rico is about due now. There is still quite a stock of old being held. Values are rather easy. Buyers are backward.

Fish—This is a line of much interest. Market has not been as bare in years nor prices as high. In dry fish a few are being received; quality at this season is but fair. High prices are asked Smoked and pickled herring are about out of the market. The extreme price has effected the demand. In fresh fish a few haddies for smoking are being brought from Boston. In other fresh fish there is a light local supply. Gaspereaux are beginning to be offered.

Flour, Feed and Meal—Though some dealers have cut flour prices the market is firm at the advance. Feed, while quite high, has a good demand. Oats and oatmeal hold at full figures. Beans show little change. Barley and peas are firm at the advance. Seed shipments begin to arrive. Prices, particularly in clover, tend higher. They have ruled low. In timothy little but American seed is offered.

Provisions—In barrelled pork, sales are light and values at least no higher. Beef is firm. In pure lard, while prices are rather higher the situation is not altogether satisfactory. Our dealers have been bought freely. Price have been very low. Smoked meats hold firm. In fresh meats the market is well supplied. Prices are unchanged. Pork is being more freely received. We quote:

OF INTEREST TO GRAIN MEN.

A well-known Montreal transportation man stated yesterday, that in his whole business history, covering 28 years, he had never noticed such slackness of bookings for shipment of grain from the West as this year. At this time last year, he had at least 2,000,000 bushels ready for carriage. He thought it would not be very hopeful for the early loading of outgoing steamers.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

Contributors are requested to send news only, not puffs of goods they handle, or the arrival of standard goods that everyone has in stock, or that they are offering goods at close figures, or that they have had an unusually large sale this season.

Canned corn on cobs, in gallon tins, is in stock with the Eby, Blain Co., Toronto.

White & Co., Toronto, are in receipt of a shipment of Florida strawberries, and a consignment each of Florida spinach and Jamaica grape fruit. This firm also report the arrival of a small trial shipment of United States lemons.

H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto, are selling a pure cane sugar syrup in half barrels at a low price.

James Rutherford & Co., Montreal, are offering interesting values in Japan teas and Japan fannings and siftings this week. See their ad. in another section of this issue.

Rowat's Olives offered by Snowdon, Forbes & Co., Montreal, in their ad. this week are claimed by the agents as unequalled value, both as regards quality and quantity.

The Eby, Blain Co., Toronto, are showing some novelties in toilet soaps that are especially good sellers for Easter trade.

Imported Patna rice is an interesting line with L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, Montreal, this week. A good selection can be made from the varieties offered by them.

"Lily White" starch in the new 6 lb. drum tin is in stock with the Eby, Blain Co., Toronto.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. expect daily arrival of carload of "Force Food." A special inducement to buyers is offered for purchases during month of April. Information will be furnished on application.

Williams Bros. & Co., Detroit and Windsor, have shipped their Montreal agents, L. Chaput, Fils & Cie, a carload of mustard, and a carload of assorted pickles, jams and catsups. Prices are attractive.

Buyers of canned finnin haddie may procure same from H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto.

Dawson & Co., Toronto, report the arrival of one car of "Redland Beauty" brand California navel oranges, one car of Valencia onions, the last of the season, and one car of California celery.

The Canada Flour Mills Co., of Chatham, Ont., have just completed a well equipped corn meal plant.

MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. beg to inform the trade that T. Upton & Co., Hamilton, for whom they are agents, are packing new season's marmalade. It is the best marmalade they ever produced. You cannot afford to be without it.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, are taking orders for new season's Eastern Township maple syrups and sugars. Quality is A 1 and prices right. They report good demand and satisfactory sales.

Arriving this week—carload of Beauce County maple syrup, for MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. New season syrup.

McWilliam & Everist, Toronto, report many orders for the Easter trade.

Geo. Robertson & Son, Kingston, are offering some lines of canned goods at low figures.

Pierre de Bacourt, manager of the Canadian Preserved Butter Co., manufacturers and exporters of tinned Canadian butter, has made an improvement upon the tins which he has formerly been using. The tins are much more rigid in quality and material and the can, as before, will be absolutely airtight, thus making the contents perfectly preserved in any climate and for any length of time. The can will be explained fully by communicating with Mr. de Bacourt, 58 Wellington street, Montreal.

Good Friday being a holiday, Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, will be closed. Goods desired by the trade next week should be ordered early.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, report receipt of 200 half chests "Lady" and "Duchess" brand green Ceylon teas—guaranteed best value on the market. Also again in stock their "Victoria" brand Japan tea, a line that has pleased all buyers.

Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, are taking orders for Canadian milled rice for delivery April 1st. Present prices are guaranteed against decline.

Just received by Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, another shipment of 500 cases Lipton's black and green Ceylon teas to retail at 25c, 30c, 40c, 50c, 60c and 70c. The increase in sales of these teas has been phenomenal.

HAMILTON CANNING HOUSE CHANGES HANDS.

SWIFT & CO., the big Chicago pork packing firm, which bought out the Fowler's Canadian company some time ago, and has since been running the business in this city, has purchased the Rosemary Canning Company. The canning industry has been conducted by the Rosemary Company in connection with the stock yards, and jams and jellies are manufactured by the company. Swift & Co. intend to enlarge the factory premises, and to considerably increase the business. It is said that Swift & Co. intend to make additions to their present factory on Rosemary avenue. The business has increased in a satisfactory manner, and enlarged premises will likely result. It is rumored that a wholesale meat business may be started in the north end of the market building by Swift & Co.

OFF FOR ATLANTIC CITY.

Mr. W. H. Dunn, commission and manufacturers' agent, Montreal, left for Atlantic City on Tuesday last to be gone about three weeks. Mr. Dunn, who has been applying himself too assiduously to work during the Fall and Winter has felt the need of a rest. It is to be hoped that the salt sea breezes and absence from business cares will benefit him to his fullest expectations.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

THE market is very active, and there are no important changes to record with the exception of sugar, which has advanced 10c both on the barrel and sack. Yellows are quoted in advance of last week's prices. Wooden wares are still advancing. New eggs retail at 50c on the Winnipeg market.

Sugars—Montreal granulated has advanced considerably, $4.90 in barrels and $4.90 in sacks, yellows being quoted at $4.25.

Evaporated and Dried Fruits—All lines are a little firmer, particularly apricots and peaches. Evaporated apples will be higher.

Tea—Japan teas and other lines remain unchanged.

Coffee—The market is a little easier. No. 5 Rio is quoted at about 9¼ and is likely to advance.

Rice—A high advance in Japan rice is recorded, but Patna and Rangoon remain unchanged.

Butter—There is a heavy demand for choice butter with the market a little firmer. Good fresh pound prints are worth 25c. Tub butter remains unchanged, ranging from 10c up.

Eggs—The market is easier, case eggs being worth about 28c. We may expect lower prices.

Flour—The market remains firm and the demand for flour is still heavy. No. 1 patent being quoted at $2.75.

Cured Meats—The market is somewhat firmer. Hams are quoted at 13¾c, breakfast bellies at 13¾c, picnic hams at 9c, breakfast backs 11¼c, long spice rolls 11c, short rolls 9¾c, dry salt long clear 10c, and long dry clear 9c.

Canned Vegetables—There is practically no change in prices and the market remains firm.

Lard—The market is somewhat firmer with pure lard in 50 lb. tubs quoted at $5.20, 20 lb. pails $2.15, 10 lb. pails in cases $6.50, 3 lb. tins $6.65, and 5 lb. tins $6.60. Compound lard in 20 lb. pails $1.75.

WEST INDIA SUGAR PLANTERS MAY COMBINE.

A report received by the Minister of Trade and Commerce from the Canadian Commercial Agent in St. Kitts says that British West Indian sugar planters are drawing no benefit from the customs preference of 33 1-3 per cent. which West Indian sugar enjoys entering Canada. The bone of contention in this matter is the retention by the refiners of the whole custom rebate, no portion of the advantage finding its way into the pockets of the growers. At a meeting of sugar planters and merchants in St. Kitts it was strongly urged that the producers of muscovado sugar in the British West Indies should combine to cease all consignments to Canada for the present with the just possible result that if refining of 96 crystals, which Canadian refiners really want, are scarce, there may be some room for muscovadoes to take their place and a consequent small improvement in quotations may follow. British West Indians recognize that this is the best market for their output of raw sugar but the price paid by refiners for muscavadoes is the bare equivalent of that paid in New York.

REVIEW OF THE LONDON TEA MARKET.

Indian Tea.

THE Indian tea crop for 1902-3 totalled 146,750,000 against 155,-750,000 lbs the previous season. The yield of the present season promises to be easily 18,000,000 pounds ahead of this. Last season cold weather set in very early and very little tea was made after November. This year the weather is open and prophets calculate an extra outrun of at least 6,000,000 or 8,000,000 pounds between the end of November and the closing of the season.

Up to the beginning of December 7,-000,000 pounds of the surplus had been received but about 15,000,000 pounds extra are required this season if all wants are to be supplied and prices kept steady. since Ceylon imports have fallen off 9,000,000 and there is no reason to anticipate that this deficit will be made up in the first half of next year. China is also short and it is unlikely that New York will be of much assistance.

The total deliveries for the year show a falling off of about 2,000,000 pounds home consumtion shows 1,000,000 pounds increase, with a decrease of 3,000,000 pounds in re-exports. Continental and Russian houses now have their own buyers or agents in Calcutta, and the business is being done direct. Russia, by a recently made new law, is assisting direct importations via the new Siberian Railway, and London is fast losing its position of being the centre of supply to the whole world. Ever since the great dock strike the Continent have been taking the bulk of their wants direct from China, and the recently increased Russian import on all tea not coming direct from its port of origin aims at shutting out all orders from thence to our market for either Chinese or British-grown tea.

China Tea.

Figures point to an improvement in the demand for China tea during 1903. During the season 1902-3 nearly two million pounds less were landed in London than during the present season, while this season's crop will be again 2 or 3 million lbs. less. Export shows a small falling off this year, partly owing to cargoes destined for the London market being diverted to the continent. During the earlier part of this season more was received than for the corresponding period last year, but lately there has been a marked falling off in the imports. Old stocks of common tea have been gradually used up. New York has supplied several million pounds since the Spring, otherwise the price would have been forced up to the extent of prohibiting consumption altogether. Fresh supplies in quantity from any quarter cannot be hoped for, and six or seven months must yet elapse before next season's supply comes to hand. Home consumption of China tea shows an increase of over 3 million lbs. while re-exports have decreasel about 3-4 million lbs.

Ceylon Tea.

Deliveries of Ceylon tea have fallen off considerably, the decline being attributed entirely to the falling off in the supply. Ceylon teas are fast growing in favor with all other countries of the world to the displacement of China tea and now that the largest consumers have there own buyers on the spot, shipments are being made direct instead of getting their supplies from the London market. Hence one of the reasons of a smaller import for 1903 of 9,000,000 pounds. Deliveries show a decline of about 8,000,000 pounds made up of 6,500,000 less for home consumption and 1,500,000 less for export. The shipment of Ceylon tea direct to other countries for 1902 was 45,000,000 pounds, and this year will be more owing to the manufacture of some 10,000,000 or 12,-000,000 pounds of green tea, the bulk of which goes to Canada and the States. Australia now takes some 18,000,000 or 20,000,000 pounds instead of China tea, and Russia comes a good second with about 12,000,000 pounds, while the demand from the latter is likely to grow considerably, as the taste for Ceylons increases. Other countries, however, are not likely to divert so much as Russia in proportion unless it is in the form of green tea. It will thus be seen that England is not likely to get any appreciably larger supplies of Ceylon tea for next year, at all events, and the home trade must not expect to see the low prices of a year or so ago for some time to come. The quality throughout the year has been fairly good, but there are too many light liquoring teas about to please the trade, and values in consequence often look very cheap. Thick liquoring and really fine teas have been scarce, and have always commanded full prices and keen competition.

OLD COUNTRY COMMISSION FIRM CHANGES HANDS.

The firm of Morgan & Biermann, fruit importers, produce brokers and auctioneers, Cardiff, Eng., have dissolved partnership and will be succeeded by E. B. Biermann & Company.

COMMERCIAL FEDERATION.

A PLAN is on foot in Montreal to bring together into one organization the commercial associations of the city, somewhat after the manner of the labor unions. J. A. Beaudry, secretary of the Grocers' Association, was the originator of the idea, and it was at his suggestion that a meeting was held recently in this connection. There was a representative attendance. including Messrs. Watson, Ethier, J. Blondin, M. Gareau, Adelstein, Louis Poire, Dansereau, Fortier, Gravel, Ald. Couture and Paquin, M. Giroux, Rouleau, J. A. Maynard, J. A. Labonte, E. Guillemette, A. Laurendeau and E. Limoges. Mr. Guillemette presided, after an extended discussion of the subject the following resolution was adopted:

"That on the evening of April 13th at 149 Berri street, a special meeting of the officers of all the commercial associations of Montreal be held for the purpose of studying the plan of a commercial federation and making all necessary arrangements."

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Window and Interior Displays

Timely Hints and Suggestions

Easter Display.

OF all seasons of the year none offers so much scope to the window dresser in a grocery store as Easter time. Not only is it a good thing to show the public that you are alive to passing events and celebrations, but there is a direct connection between a grocery stock and this time of the year. A principle is involved in this recognition of days of local, national or world-wide importance which will give the public the impression that the merchant is up-to-date and attentive to the needs of his business.

In the Easter window of the grocery store the stock itself can be used to make up a great part of the display, but in addition there can be something of a spectacular nature that will not detract from the goods offered for sale, while forming an additional attraction for the crowd. Eggs are the articles most closely connected with the season and a great deal should be made of them. The little novelties in addition which are now such a common sight at this time of the year are all carried by grocers. Among these are chocolate and cream eggs in all sizes and with all kinds of decorations, hens, doves, rabbits, nests with eggs inside, and a variety without end which is being added to each year. There are tiny chickens and ducks from Holland which are said to be the young fowl killed when very young and stuffed. At any rate they are as natural as the live ones.

The presentation side of Easter is gaining more force every year, particularly the presentation of small articles and confectionery. This should be taken advantage of in the display of candy figures, and also of the little toys so common. A very attractive window can be made from these, which very few will pass by. City grocers have been showing them for a couple of weeks and report great profit therefrom.

Flowers are a never failing drawing card, and just now they have an extra value, as they speak so strongly of Spring and its wealth of colors. Many grocers are now handling flowers as a part of their stock and to such are open very effective windows and interiors. Banks of different colors are good inside, and for the window, a large central bloom, surrounded by lilies, hyacinths, carnations, palms, etc., look exceedingly well if some judgment is used. To those who do not sell flowers, it would pay to purchase a few for the occasion.

The egg is, however, the most suitable and most fertile groundwork of a grocer's Easter window. Many a window filled with eggs on a straw or packing foundation will be seen, and though extreme simplicity is its characteristic, it is always attractive. Bank them up towards the back and scatter a few colored eggs through, which will improve the effect. Any article of color such as canned goods, bottles, etc., arranged in rows through the eggs, break the monotony of the surface. The colored egg of Easter affords a simple and striking color scheme for the windows. An effective curtain for any arrangement is that made of egg shells, white or colored. These are strung on strings attached a few inches apart at the top of the window and draped down to the sides. The eggs need not be close together. Or a tent of egg shells on strings can be arranged over some object of special interest in the centre of the window. Single eggs on the end of strings dropped from the ceiling and arranged along the front glass will attract attention. The name can be spelt in eggs on the floor of the window, or dozens of other designs can be thought of if the window dresser possesses any ingenuity.

A large egg can be made by placing two wooden chopping bowls of different sizes the proper distance apart and facing each other. Attach these together by means of slats which can be bent to represent the curve of the egg. The result is an egg shaped object that can be covered with any material. One of these placed in the centre of the window can be surrounded with white cloth rabbits. This egg can expose an opening towards the glass, and inside can be displayed a special line, many of which can easily be found in the grocer's stock.

Chickens have always been objects of great interest to the public, particularly in large centres where live fowl are seldom seen. A hen with her brood of chickens enclosed in a part or all of the window will attract crowds who will be constantly amused with the actions of the fearless little chicks, who never notice the people gazing in at them. One merchant set an incubator hatching, so that the chickens would arrive just at Easter time, and during the last few days kept the incubator in the window, where the hatching could be watched. These little chickens when allowed to run around the window are perfectly fearless.

With a little thought and ingenuity a window dresser can design schemes for a grocery window which will combine the picture with the advertising display. But this point should be remembered in every trim. All attempts at the introduction into the display of crosses, "gates ajar," etc., the sacred memories of the first Easter, should be strictly avoided. The window has no other purpose than to advertise, and as a part of the business should not make use of sacred things for purposes of gain. This custom of working upon the feelings by means of Biblical references is altogether too common, and should be frowned upon.

Above all have the windows bright and Springlike. Make it appear than your store, as well as Nature, has opened up with renewed life. Endeavor to have fully as attractive (preferable more so) a window as your competitor, and work nights to make sure that the design is novel, and contains many original points. Make it appear that much time and labor has been expended on the arrangement, for by this means the spectator will feel more firmly convinced that his custom is considered of sufficient importance to draw forth special efforts on the part of the merchant, and he will think that the same care and thoughtfulness will be shown his trade if he enters.

Don't confine the decorations entirely to the windows. It is a good plan to turn the store around in some way as regards the arrangement of the interior, so that customers will think that improvements are being made. This retaining of the same interior plan from year to year is apt to give the impression that old time methods are being used in all parts of the store system. A re-arrangement will show that improvement is aimed at, and whether it is really obtained or not, the novelty of it will have the desired effect. It is well to have some dividing line, some definite division between the Spring and Winter seasons, and Easter time is the proper time to bring this about.

Mr. J. B. Berthiaume, corner St. Lawrence and Prince Arthur streets, Montreal, whose windows are always attractively arranged, reports that the late display of Bovril was solely arranged by himself, and not by an outside window dresser. Mr. Berthiaume prides himself, and with reason, on his tasty and artistic window displays, and The Grocer takes pleasure in recording this fact.

ST. JOHN'S TEA IMPORTATIONS.

THE GROCER received the following telegram on March 21, from T. H. Estabrooks, tea importer and blender, St. John, N.B.: "In reply to the Salada Tea Company's letter of March 12 I beg to say that a very large quantity of tea passes through St. John on through bill of lading to other points in Canada and does not appear in the customs figures of this port and of this fact the Salada Tea Company are very well aware, as part, if not all of their imports, through St. John are not entered here, but are entered at the custom house in Toronto and are included in the figures credited to that port. These facts add further weight to the point of my advertisement, viz.. that "St. John is the natural port for the distribution of Ceyon and Indian teas."

CORN MEAL GOING UP IN PRICE.

A well-known local miller stated on Tuesday last that cornmeal was likely to advance in price very materially. He based this on his knowledge of general grain conditions. For instance, Canadian corn cannot be used for milling cornmeal, and the American supply is much less than usual for this time of the year; in fact, it is very noticeabfy less. May corn has advanced during the week from 3c to 4c, and even July corn is very firm, hence it is well to be forewarned.

BAKING POWDER COMBINE.

ADVICES from New York are to the effect that the manufacturers of the cheaper grade goods throughout the United States are preparing for a merger or combination of interests. It is not understood that there is to be any merging of plants, but that the union shall be a sort of agreement under the terms of which all shall work together for mutual benefit. In this way they hope to increase their own influence sufficiently to counteract any deleterious influence of any other company and still preserve their separate identities.

The baking powder business has reached enormous proportions. Where formerly soda and cream of tartar were the ingredients used in practically all household culinary operations, now they are scarcely ever used, excepting in remote country districts. Baking powder has taken their place in nearly all parts of the country.

Under such circumstances it can be readily understood why a fight should be made for an absolute understanding. From the point of view of the manufacturers an understanding is necessary, otherwise competition will reduce profits below the living point. Fortunes have been spent in advertising baking powders and there are still immense sums of money paid for that purpose. All advertising has been direct to the consumer and the demand thus created has been satisfied through the reailer and wholesaler, but they both complain of more or less unsatisfactory business tactics and declare that they have not received their rightful share of the income. It is represented that one of the things the proposed new combine will take up will be better treatment of the retailer.

MEXICO TO TRADE WITH CANADA.

D. A. Ansell, Consul-General for Mexico in Canada, says regarding the steamship subsidy recommended by the Dominion Government:

"Immediate advantage will be taken of the subsidy of $50,000 that the Dominion Government have offered for the establishment of a steamship service between Canada and Mexico. At present there are three companies anxious to take the subsidy, two of which are leading Canadian companies. In order to bring about closer commercial relations, I may say that Mexico has decided to place consuls in all parts of Canada just as soon as arrangements are made for the establishment of the line. The amount of business that will be done between the two countries will be found so large that the subsidy will not be necessary after a few years. It is intended that the new line will run from Montreal to Vera Cruz by way of Havana and Progresso. From Canada thousands of tons of coal and unlimited amounts of manufactured goods will be shipped, and in return Mexico will always be able to supply full cargoes in the way of sugar and hemp, and the steamer by calling at Havana will be able to get large consignments of tobacco. The service will be passenger as well as freight, and the trip from Montreal to Vera Cruz, whence the run to Mexico will take but twelve hours, will be made in eight or nine days."

DO KNOW BEANS.

Editor of The Canadian Grocer—We have noticed in the last number of your paper your article entitled "Didn't Know Beans," page 46, and must protest against such a statement in the name of the Quebec people. We "do know beans," and we do know, too, how difficult it is to get redress from certain Ontario shippers when after paying their drafts we find the goods inferior to standard sold. To avoid trouble, however, and law suits from one province to another, which means a lot of expense and time wasted, we have stood a lot in the past. We may show shippers in the future that we are up to all the tricks of the trade and can detect as well as they do a 3-lb picker from a 6-lb. In December we rejected four cars from one man and now out of ten cars received during the past three weeks we would have had to refuse at least six cars had it not been for difficulties above mentioned and scarcity of beans on spot due to blockade of railroads.

The bean tester does not adjust claims and what we would require more than anything else is an understanding between shippers and receivers to appoint an arbitrator in Montreal to sample and test all cars of beans upon which there would be a dispute. If the test was not up to specification of contract an allowance should be made to the buyer.

Being, we think, one of the largest receivers of beans in Montreal we are willing to enter into such an agreement, sincerely believing it would greatly benefit all concerned in this line.

In short, "we do know beans," but that we are not kickers, is what Stevens and Newman should have said for the benefit of the readers of your valuable commercial paper, after their flying trip through Montreal and Quebec.

COCOA CULTIVATION.

THE following memoranda represents in outline the process of preparing the Colombia cocoa bean for commerce.

The first thing is to observe care in gathering the crop in season, else the bean suffers in appearance and quality.

The cocoa berry is generally extracted at the plantation, thus avoiding transportation of the husk.

No machinery is used for the purpose of extracting the berry, the husk being broken by hand with a wooden mallet or with a short curved-edge machete. The husk is cut open lengthwise by two cuts on opposite sides, care being taken not to cut the berry.

After opening the husk the grains are removed by hand or a small wooden ladle and taken to the cleaning house, where they are put in a wooden tank having a slight slope, or into a room tiled with bricks and also having an inclined floor, the object of which is the draining off of the fluid from the cocoa. This tank or room is known as a drain. The cocoa is left to drain for from 30 to 48 hours and is then placed in the sun to dry, either in brick-yards or on hurdles of wood which can be covered with sacking.

After a day in the sun it is stored two days for fermentation, as this is necessary to give the cocoa grains the market requirements. It is then placed in the sun every day to thoroughly dry and, to hurry this process, is laid out in layers and stirred frequently with wooden rakes.

Whenever this sunning process is hindered by rain, hurdles are used, being placed over a fire made of dry wood, the latter precaution being taken to prevent smoke. There is also a machine made for the purpose of drying cocoa.

There is also a kind of cocoa known as "Caracas cocoa," and sometimes it is desired to give cocoa the appearance of the Caracas. In this case a different process must be gone through, as follows:

During the sunning and previous to laying out in yards or hurdles, and while the cocoa is still fairly moist, it should be mixed up with brick dust to which has been added a little common ash in the proportion of about 9 to 1. The result of this is that a varnish-like dust forms over it, giving it not only the necessary color but preserving it from what is known as the grub insect.

The husk of the cocoa is used on the plantations as manure.

DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

Causes of Advertising Death.

Adapted from Printer's Ink.

IN a widely circulated and high-priced advertising medium in the United States there were upwards of 600 firms advertising to a greater or less extent one year who failed to make any use whatever of the same medium the succeeding year. An investigation into the reasons for this wholesale dropping out from a medium of tested excellence disclosed some interesting and instructive facts, facts which apply to the present day quite as forcefully as they did a dozen years ago, when this inquiry was made.

After exhaustive correspondence and study it was found that the three chief causes of advertising death were as follows:

First—The single insertion. A large percentage of business men who had been persuaded to begin advertising went no farther than one insertion as a "trial" of advertising. Many of the little moral stories of advertising success were tales of wonderful results secured from single advertisements by men who had starved themselves to pay for the space. Some of these stories were true, perhaps. All of them were pretty. They were popular, and had created the impression that the single insertion was a decisive test. But it was discovered upon investigation that advertising did not begin to pull until several insertions had been made and the idea had become well fixed in readers' minds. Size of space made little difference. Single insertion of a page advertisement only made a more expensive failure than that of an inch.

Second—Too small space. Tabulations of the spaces used by successful and unsuccessful advertisers showed that the latter, nine times in ten, attempted to create an initial impression with less than one-half the space used by successful advertisers to maintain an impression already created. Some advertisers attempted to market new articles with skimpy space. Another prime cause of advertising failure was imitation of successful advertising, the imitator attempting to compete with established successful advertisers on a third the space they had found necessary. Too small space was as fatal in continuous advertising as single insertions.

Third—Lack of follow-up facilities. Nobody seemed to know much about taking care of results. Advertisements were seldom keyed. The advertiser with a small appropriation gave least attention to follow-up, whereas he should have given the most, of necessity.

'Phone 48. No. 2 Day's Block, Guelph.

A Brisk Announcement.

Any one of these defects was sufficient in itself to bring disaster to the advertiser, and had done so in many of the cases diagnosed. Then what chance of success did an advertiser stand where two or all three were present in his campaign? Nothing better than the chances of great good luck, or about the chance that makes for the recovery of a patient with tuberculosis, typhoid and appendicitis in conjunction. To apply the results of these discoveries to individual advertisers was not easy or reassuring. There was, for example, the successful business man who said he had managed his business thus far without advertising and could get along without it; and there was the man who "would advertise his own business in his own way."

Many advertise because it is the fashion to advertise, because competitors advertise; because they are forced into doing some advertising by the persistent solicitations of advertising men. Back of such advertising is little conviction, little faith. It is a sort of leap into the dark with a hope that things will turn out well—a hope that is but poorly sustained. There is no real deliberation over the matter, no genuine investigation into conditions, mediums or means. If success attends the effort there is surprise; if failure, it is "just what was expected," and there is a relapse into the former disbelief.

To what extent a man should advertise—how much money to spend, what mediums to use, what pamphlets, catalogues, circulars, etc., to issue, how to tell one's story effectively are matters capable of a fairly definite statement. At any rate, the element of doubt, of conjecture, can be largely eliminated. But it requires patient and thorough study—a study that will pay for itself in money saved. A man will consider with full deliberation the purchase of merchandise, machinery or equipment, reckoning the cost from the view point of an investment, but when it comes to buying space in a magazine, newspaper or trade journal, he too often neglects to make the same searching inquiries.

If there are people to buy what one has to sell there is an opportunity for advertising, for influence, for making the advertiser and the buyer see eye to eye. There is a compelling force about advertising which if properly and persistently used will work wonders, but which if ignorantly and indifferently employed represents lost power and opportunity.

JAPAN IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY.

PROBABLY the most significant fact in the history of the latter half of the nineteenth century has been the rapid rise of Japan to a leading position in the comity of nations. In the short space of little more than a generation she has brought herself from conditions of feudalism to a strong position of consolidated military power, able and determined to make her influence felt among the nations of the world, especially in all matters affecting Far Eastern policy. Although the advance achieved by Japan is much talked of, it is certainly a fact that the real measure of her attainments is not really fully realized. This probably arises from the fact that no connected account has yet been published which indicates all the lines of progress made by Japan. Numerous articles, dealing with special aspects, have appeared, but they are disconnected, and few readers are sufficiently interested in the subject to attempt to co-ordinate the various activities into a complete picture of national life, while the books which have been published about Japan have for the most part been superficial and imperfect.

The want has been supplied to certain extent by the publication of a compilation by Mr. Haruki Yamawaki, the private secretary to the Minister af Agriculture and Commerce, which, while making no pretence to literary grace, is a perfect mine of statistics and exact information regarding the developments of the various departments of Government.

After an introductory section dealing with the geography, the population, the administrative system, and the land as an institution, Mr. Yamawaki gives very full information of what he fitly calls the primary industries, beginning with agriculture. The Japanese recognize the importance of this, the oldest of the industries, and have been doing all in their power to develop it, so that the produce of the land may keep abreast with the increase of population. That increase is at the rate of almost half-a-million a year, and with normal crops the improvements which have been made in the methods of cultivation and the additional land which has been taken in have almost made the produce sufficient for the wants of the people, and only in years of bad harvests rice and other forms of food have to be imported.

The efforts which have been made by the Japanese Government for the improvement of agriculture afford in some directions object lessons to the Indian Government. Colleges, schools, experimental stations, and a large number of special institutions have been organized, not only for the ordinary departments of agriculture, but also for the production of tea and silk, stock-breeding, dairy-farming, poultry-rearing, bee-keeping, and other subsidiary rural industries.

Great attention has also been paid to the fisheries of Japan, rice and fish being the staples of the ordinary food, The development of manufacturing industry and the need of wood for purposes of construction has stimulated attention to forestry. For some time after the restoration of the Emperor to power the forests were cut down in a very reckless manner, but now care is taken to develop to the full their natural capabilities by increasing their productive powers by the application of technical methods.

Considerable developments have taken place in mining, and gold, silver, lead, copper and iron ores are extracted to a fair amount. Coal mining, however, has attained the most importance, and Japanese coals are now used, to a large extent, by the steamships frequenting Eastern seas. The methods of metallurgy have been improved, and a large steel works has been laid down in the south of Japan, which is intended to supply the materials required for shipbuilding and engineering purposes. For some time past operations have been at a standstill on account of financial difficulties, the cost of the works having largely exceeded the estimates, but no doubt, in time, these will be removed.

When we turn to manufacturing industries, we find the greatest developments. Not only are the old Japanese industries greatly extended, but many new ones have been introduced. It has sometimes been said that Japan is being transformed from an agricultural to an industrial country. It would be more correct to say that manufacturing industry is being added to agriculture. Not only are the wants of the Japanese themselves being largely supplied, but manufactured goods now form a very important part of the export trade of Japan. Taking the year 1900, we find that the export trade consisted of the following kinds of goods to the amounts given :

Industrial	74,788,770
Agricultural	73,336,835
Fishery	5,902,628
Mining	27,459,979
Miscellaneous	12,324,339
Total	192,812,546 yen.

A glance over the list of manufactured goods exported shows that it includes a very large variety. Cotton yarns figure in 1900 to the amount of 20,589,263 yen, which means that in addition to supplying the greater part of their own wants, the Japanese were able to send large quantities of yarn to China and Korea. They have, indeed, been able practically to stop the trade in Indian yarns with China. They are also beginning to export cotton cloths of various kinds.

The export of manufactured goods, however, gives a very imperfect idea of the development of manufacturing industry which has taken place in Japan, for a large part of the products are used in the country. Mr. Yamawaki gives very elaborate statistics. The list is headed by woven goods, of the total value of 170 million yen, followed by sake with 100 million yen, cotton yarns with 70 million yen, soy with 23 million yen, and paper with 20 million yen. Other commodities worth mentioning are sugar, earthenware, matches, lacquered ware, ships and boats, machines of all sorts, cement, glassware, fancy matting, straw plait, umbrellas, bronze and copper ware.

The number of manufacturing companies in 1900 was 2,554, with an aggregate capital of 216,766,903 yen, and a paid-up capital of 158,851,730 yen. The number of workshops with motors was 2,763, and without motors, 3,788. The list of industries shows that all the more important Western industries have been introduced into Japan, and the most of them seem to be in a flourishing condition.

In general, the working hours of the operatives are 12 hours a day, but sometimes they extend as long as 16 or 17 hours. The rate of wages is about 30 sen a day for adult males employed in filatures, cotton mills and weaving shops, while that of females is about 20 sen. In machine shops and shipbuilding yards the rate is usually 50 or 60 sen per day, and a skilled artisan gets more than 1 yen. In match factories, on the other hand, the rate is much lower, being 12 to 20 sen for ordinary female operatives, and 5 to 13 sen for little girls. In tobacco factories and printing shops ordinary females get about 20 sen and males about 40 to 50 sen. (Note 1 yen equals about 2s., equals 100 sen.)

Very complete arrangements have been made for every department of industrial education, from the engineering colleges of the universities of Tokyo and Kyoto to technical schools of all kinds and grades suitable to the requirements of the most important industries.

In 1873 there were 18 miles in existence in Japan, now there are over 4,000 miles in working order, and a considerable addition under construction. In 1901 the Japanese mercantile marine consisted of 1,395 steamers with a tonnage of 583,532, and 4,020 sailing ships with a tonnage of 336,136, besides nearly 20,000 junks. Shipbuilding is making considerable progress, and the yard in Nagasaki now turns out vessels of 6,000 tons, which are thoroughly efficient.

And the longer your ad runs in the THE CANADIAN GROCER the more force it acquires and the harder it hits.
In these days of keen competition it is usually necessary to hit hard to make an impression.
Which means that you must often keep your ad running a long time before it "hits" some readers.
Every ad that appears in these columns has the force of all previous ads behind it—and with each consecutive insertion YOUR ad hits harder.

Fruit Dealers Meet.

THE annual meeting of the Fruit Dealers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada was held on March 18. The Dominion secretary, E. M. Trowern, who has just returned from Ottawa, reported that he had interviewed the Minister of Agriculture regarding the recent prosecution made against a dealer for selling a bag of potatoes for less than ninety pounds, and which was dismissed because there is no law in Ontario at present governing the weight of a bag. In Quebec a bag of potatoes must weigh 80 pounds, and in Ontario it has been the ruling custom that 90 pounds constitutes a bag. The matter will be considered by the department, and some change is likely to be made.

In view of the amendments which are now being made to the Assessment Act, and which will place a business tax upon all retailers, both large and small, the members decided to wait until the law came into operation, and then have the Transient Traders' and Peddlers' License law amended to suit modern conditions. It was decided to communicate with all retail fruit dealers throughout Canada and obtain united action in their general interests.

The following officers were unanimously elected for the coming year:

Chairman, P. N. Judah.

First Vice-Chairman, W. I. B. Wellwood.

Second Vice-Chairman, R. Burgess.

Treasurer, P. Massey.

Secretary, M. Ryan.

South African Fruit in Montreal.

THE arrival in Montreal of a consignment of peaches and plums from South Africa is reported. The fruit arrived in perfect condition, but the price $1 per dozen indicates that the market for it in Canada will be a rather limited one. There were 60 peaches in a single layer box, each fruit wrapper and plenty of finest quality excelsior at top and bottom of each case. Plums were put up in the same style, but 45 to the case. The consignee had also some very fine English hothouse grapes that arrived via New York in perfect order. These were put in cotton battings bags, 1 1-4 lbs. in each of four bags or 5 lbs. to the box, with plenty of tissue paper clippings for padding. The price was $2 a pound.

Canadian Apples in Scotland.

According to the United States Consul in Edinburg, Canadian apple imports are gaining a very strong position in the Scotch markets. The system of inspection adopted in Canada and subsequently renewed at the ports of Great Britain has undoubtedly served as a guarantee to the buyers of Canadian fruit, and has thus proved useful both to seller and purchaser.

Uniform Packages.

Canada once more scores a point against the United States, this time in regard to uniformity in fruit packages. Our American cousins are still struggling with this question, while in Canada the fruit growers of Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have all adopted a uniform case 10x11x20 inches, inside measurements for the shipment of apples. A case half this size is found a very suitable package for pears.

Good and Bad Fruit in Boxes.

The inspector at Glasgow for the Dominion Department of Agriculture, reports that a shipment of 1,422 cases of apples from an Ontario packer was landed at that port recently. The shipment consisted entirely of XXX Spies, all wrapped individually in paper and graded in size from 2 1-2 inches upward. The fruit was in splendid condition and in the extra trouble and care bestowed on the apples the shippers were well repaid. The large sized fruit realized from 7s to 7s 6d (small cases holding only about 35 lbs), the smaller fruit 6s to 6s 6d.

Another shipment by the same boat consisted of 416 barrels and 401 cases. These were nearly all Spies and were very much frosted and wasty. Had these apples been properly repacked and looked after, they would probably have landed in much better condition.

Prices realized for barrels ranged from 10s to 16s. The cases were even worse than the barrels; some 50 of these were thrown out, part of them being used to fill up wasty cases. These made from 2s 6d to 5s 6d (large cases). If Canadin apples in cases are to maintain a reputation for strictly fancy quality, it will not do to send forward such fruit

American Apple Exports.

SINCE the Fall of 1903 nearly 3,000,000 barrels of apples, almost a million more than in the previous year, have been exported from American ports. Most of these have gone to Great Britain and other European countries, where they have found a ready market at good prices.

The demand for the fruit still keeps up and thousands of barrels are being shipped each week to the other side. Germany has taken to the American apple this season and Baldwins and Newton Pippins, which are the favorite varieties with the Germans, now are frequently found in the small stores and on stands and pedlers' wagons in Berlin and other large cities.

A curious feature of the American apple trade in Europe has been the large sale on the Continent in the last few months of the evaporated product for wine making purposes. The shortage of the grape crop in France has led to a corresponding scarcity of wine and the peasant and others of the poorer classes, unable to buy the native wines, have been forced to fall back on the dried apple.

From what are known in the apple trade as chops, or apples cut up and dried, the peasants make a cheap drink which is said to have satisfying properties and to furnish a very fair substitute for the wine pressed from the grape. A New York exporter who has sampled this beverage, says of it:

"It's a sort of apple champagne or beer, and it's not bad either. The natives make it by putting the dried apples into a barrel or tub of water, adding a quantity of yeast and letting the mixture stand for a week or so.

"By that time it's good and sharp and ready for drinking. It's to the Frenchman about what cider is to our American farmers, and they smack their lips over it just as if it was the real thing."

Several hundred carloads of dried apples have been sent to France for this use since last Fall, and fresh shipments are going forward every week. The fruit costs about two and one-half cents a pound in New York, and the freight to the other side is only one quarter of a cent more, so that the Frenchman who wants a cheap substitute for the native wine gets it.

The Germans also make an inexpensive wine from dried apples; but the practice is not so general with them as with the French, and the exports of American dried apples to Germany are therefore more limited. A good many hundreds of tons of dried apple cores and skins have been sold in German markets this year for use as a basis for certain jams and jellies.

A Market for Fruit.

A deputation of Western Ontario fruit growers waited upon the Minister of Railways, Ottawa, on March 17 to ask for the extension of the Dominion Express Co., which now only operates from St. John to Halifax, over the whole of the Intercolonial Railway system, in order to open the Maritime Provinces market to the fruit fields of Western Ontario.

Increase in Canadian Apple Exports.

According to an English exchange much of the increase in importations of Canadian apples by England must be attributed to the practical steps taken by the Canadian Government to discover and comply with the requirements of the British market.

Banana Growing in Costa Rica.

ACCORDING to a report from the British consul at Port Limon, the area under banana cultivation in Costa Rica continues to increase rapidly, over 2,500 acres of new plantations having been made during the year 1902, and the number of bunches exported shows an increase of 7.86 per cent. over the figures for 1901. The export of this fruit to the United States was begun in 1881 and has grown from 300 bunches in that year to 4,179,199 bunches in 1902. Steamers to the number of 230, laden with bananas, cleared from Port Limon for the United States in 1902. During 1902 a cargo of bananas was shipped to Bristol by the United Fruit Company, and it turned out sufficiently well to warrant the establishment of a regular monthly fruit service between Limon and Bristol and Manchester, which during 1903 has become a fortnightly service.

THE GROCER OF THE FUTURE?

IN answer to the above query, the London Grocer says he will have to make himself more familiar with the legal points of the trade, and that there are three improtant factors that occur in this connection. In the first place, it has become doubly important that every grocer should regularly and intelligently read his trade paper; secondly, every grocer should belong to a trade association; and thirdly, the coming generation of grocers must be better trained either by a return to the apprenticeship system or some other method. There may not be so much hard manual labor attached to the trade as in bygone days, but it demands a close and intelligent study of a thousand and one details that years ago was unknown and grocers are entitled to be paid for head work as much as for handiwork.

Therefore, while they fight against every form of dishonesty, and endeavor to obey the law in every detail, let traders also see that their legitimate profits are maintained at a level that will remunerate them adequately and raise the whole status of the trade from the foolish cut-throat competition that has too long thrown a shadow over it.

ALL EGGS ARE GOOD FOR SOMETHING, EVEN BAD ONES.

THE career of the egg may not be romantic, but frequently it is interesting. The full and perfect career is without doubt to develop into a lusty young chick, a rolly-polly ball of yellow down with plaintive peek and toothpick legs. But the full and perfect career is as rare among eggs as among human beings, for many things intervene to cut it short, and its usefulness is diverted into channels of which few housewives and poultry raisers dream.

Several fates lie in wait for the fresh, clean egg that reaches market, with dozens of its fellows, in its pasteboard compartment of the typical egg case. It may be sold for domestic uses, and be fried with a piece of ham or bacon, or become an ingredient of the numerous products of the housewife's baking day. It may form part of a most tempting drink or fall into the hands of a hairdresser or barber, and cleanse the raven locks of a debutante or the mane of a policeman.

It may be that the egg is broken on its way to market, or its shell is checked so that it will not sell. Then it is broken with countless others into five-gallon cans and frozen. The rumor is that these frozen eggs are sold to bakers in the larger cities to be used in Winter.

Should the egg survive until it passes the zenith of its existence and enters into a decline, it may be sent to some of the large coffee roasters of the East and be used to glaze coffee.

Even should the egg survive the first period of decline and enter into the last stage it is not without value. It is used commercially for tanning kid gloves and other fine leathers.

The usefulness of the egg is not exhausted when it has met with one of these several fates. The shells where large quantities of eggs are used, are carefully gathered, and the portion which is not used for hen food is ground and form a common adulterant for spices. The shell can be roasted to the desired shade, is absolutely harmless, and is very difficult for any but the chemist to detect.

FARM LAND IN NEW ONTARIO.

The recent report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands for Ontario says that the greater part of the district west of Lake Abittibe, which was surveyed last Summer, is preeminently suited for lumbering and agriculture. Deep clay and loam with spruce, balsam, poplar, white birch and cedar are found everywhere. Low-lying portions appear to be local in extent and can be drained at reasonable cost.

TEST FOR MOLASSES.

A decision of importance to the wholesale grocers, baking and confectionery trades has been given by the Customs department. It refers to the duty on molasses. In future the rate on this article imported into Canada will be dtermined by double polarization, according to the amount of cane sugar or sucrose contained in the importation. The minimum duty of 1 3-4 cents per gallon will not apply to any molasses ascertained to contain less than 40 degrees of cane sugar or sucrose after test by indirect polarization. When the test shows under 35 degrees of cane sugar or sucrose the duty will be three-quarters of a cent per pound under the classification in the tariff "Molasses not otherwise provided for." It is held by the department that the test by indirect polarization is the true test for the cane sugar. It is believed that this decision will operate against the mixing of certain molasses with other ingredients.

WEALTH OF OUR FARMS.

"THE flourishing condition of agriculture in Canada at the present time is undoubtedly due to organization, co-operation and education," says Hon. S. Fisher, Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion. The old idea that farming is a species of drudgery to be pursued in a hap-hazard way, is a thing of the past. The successful farmer of to-day is as thoughtful, studious, alert and businesslike as any other man in the management of his property.

Mr. Fisher says the basis of agriculture in Canada must be live stock. In this northern part of the temperate zone the climatic conditions produce not only the highest physical types of men and women, but the best qualities of domestic animals. The herds of breeders, not only in the United States, but in South America, Mexico and the West Indies, are being replenished from the superior stock of this country. Within a short time stock-breeding will be the foundation of agriculture in the great west, as it is in Ontario to-day. While that vast country will always be able to produce the finest quality of wheat the time is coming when the mainstay of the West will be its live stock.

Canada is behind only one country on earth in the organization of its argicultural industry, namely, Denmark, which, at the same time is the most dangerous rival of Canada in the markets of Great Britain. Denmark is ahead of Canada in its system of agricultural education and in the quality of its products. Canada is a good second, however, and the rest of the world is nowhere.

One example of the development of the industry is the increase in the export poultry trade from $18,000 to $300,000 in four years by catering to the demand for fattened fowls. Another is that of the total exports of $214,000,000 from Canada last year, of which over $114,000,000 was represented by farm products.

SUGAR BEET CROP IN EUROPE.

Although the final estimates of the beet sugar crop in Europe for 1903 have not yet been received, the following figures may be taken as approximate:

In 1903 4,110,300 acres were sown to beets in Europe, the largest acreage being in Germany and Russia, as against 4,178,800 acres in 1902. The crop of beets in 1903 is estimated at 39,171,000 tons and the amount of sugar produced therefrom at 5,605.000 tons.

Has stood the test of every climate.

FLOUR AND CEREAL FOODS

Northwest Will Produce 75,000,000 Bushels of Wheat.

THE Canadian Pacific Railway is reported to be making herculean efforts to get its Western lines in shape for this season's grain carrying trade which is expected to be unusually heavy on account of the largely increased acreage that will result not only from new settlement, but also by reason of the high prices of wheat which will undoubtedly induce the farmers to plant larger areas. Taking last year's figures as a basis and the probable increase from the causes mentioned, it is estimated that this year's wheat area in Manitoba and the Territories will not be less than 3,800,000 acres. Estimating an average yield of from 18 to 20 bushels to the acre, which is conservative in the light of past experiences, it can be readily realized that it is most important that the railroads should be prepared.

Granary of the World.

"THERE are something like 230,000,000 acres of arable land in the Northwest," says ex-Chief Justice Maguire of the Northwest Territories. "Half of this vast territory may be called wheat lands. There has never been a yield less, even in the worst of seasons, than nine bushels to the acre. With half of this wheat belt used for wheat purposes the Northwest, in 15 years from date will be able to raise 350,000,000 bushels. Now, as England only imports from all sources, 200,000,000 bushels, this fact of the possibilities of Canada will soon put an end to the argument that the United States must be placated, because the United States supplies a large proportion of the total amount of wheat which England needs annually.

Stamped Union Bread.

At a recent meeting of the bakers' union of St. John, N.B. to consider the placing of a union stamp on bread made in the city bakeries. Seven shops agreed to use the stamp and the proprietors were willing to pay for the stamps, the cost being seven cents a thousand. No mucilage is used to make the stamps adhere to the bread. The stamp is placed face down in the pan, and in the baking the stamp becomes part of the loaf.

The union has 20,000 stamps on hand and as these would not last a great while it has been decided to order 80,000 more before stamping the bread, so that when once started there will be no interruption for lack of stamps.

Canadian Stops Wheat Blockade.

T. Tait, who went from the C.P.R. to the command of the Government railways in Victoria, Australia, is applying Canadian railway principles to good effect in his operations under the Southern Cross. A hopeless wheat blockade was predicted recently in the State of Victoria, owing to the fact that it was presumed that the railway had not sufficient cars to move the volume of traffic that would offer in this line. Mr. Tait immediately met the exigency by issuing an order to the effect that if shippers desired to store wheat in the cars they would have to pay demurrage after the first 24 hours. There was consequently no wheat blockade.

The Wheat Situation in Australia.

THE following figures show the comparative imports and exports of wheat and flour during 1903 and previous years in Australia:

	Imports.		Exports.
1902.	Tons.	£	Tons.	£
Wheat.....	32,665	241 390	77,261	458,862
Flour.....	1,056	93,651	20,794	180,918
1903.
Wheat.....	165,558	1,182,704	11,156	100.725
Flour.....	54,598	484,807	9,000	186 611

The general consensus of opinion favors the belief that a wheat crop of about 28,000,000 bushels will be harvested in 1904 although climatic conditions are still adverse to favorable harvesting. A heavy rainfall has done a great deal of damage both to the standing wheat and to the grain already reaped and standing in stacks ready for threshing. It is the custom in Australian husbandry to strip the wheat, leaving the straw standing, into which cattle are turned, or else the straw is burned off. The experience of drough, however, has made farmers more thirfty this year, and a great deal of wheat and straw have been cut together with the intention of threshing later and saving the straw for feed purposes. Continuous rainfall during harvest time has somewhat discounted their good intentions, however, and now many are worse off than if they had saved the grain and wasted the straw.

Emerson Grain Growers' Association.

A branch of the Grain Growers' Association has been formed at Emerson, Man., with a membership of 50 of the best farmers of the district. The officers are: President, G. Turner; Vice-President, R. Curran; Secretary-Treasurer, T. W. Knowles.

A Huge Car of Corn.

The largest shipment of corn ever received in London, Ont., in a single car arrived on March 17. The car contained 95,200 pounds, within 4,800 pounds of its total capacity, or in other words 1,700 bushels. A few years ago 30,000 pounds was considered a large carload. More recently shippers have become accustomed to 60,000-pound cars. Apparently there is no limit to the possibilities of the situation.

Cereal Notes.

The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company have announced their intention of establishing a fleet of their own on the upper lakes. It is reported that Port Colborne wil be the eastern port.

The Columbia Flour Mills Co., Enderby, have increased their capital to $100,000, and will double the output of the mill, thus carrying on there one of the largest flour milling enterprises in British Columbia.

A great rush is reported on the lines of the C.P.R. in Manitoba and the Territories to get grain out of the interior to milling centres. Both the milling companies and the elevators are clamoring for more cars. The cause assigned for the rush is not the fear of a shortage in the wheat crop but the anticipaton of a shortage for the Spring market.

The war on dirt Is about To commence

GLUTEN FLOUR.

A brain, nerve and muscle-building flour especially prepared for invalids, and particularly that large class who suffer from weak digestion, acidity of the stomach, etc.

Invaluable for Diabetes.

It contains all the nutritive elements of the wheat, and is as nearly free from starch as it is practicable to make a flour suited to general daily use.

All grocers have more or less call for this. No need now to pay fancy prices for foreign flours when the same can be obtained at home, and at half the cost.

Greig's Gluten Flour is put up in nice white cotton sacks Trial size 5 lbs. Regular size, 49 lbs. Also in barrels. Inquiries carefully responded to.

Tobaccos, Cigars, and Smokers' Accessories

A DEPARTMENT FOR RETAIL MERCHANTS.

The Irish Tobacco Trade During 1903.

THE year 1903 was in some ways the most unsatisfactory that Irish manufacturers of tobacco have experienced for a very lengthened period. In 1902 the Irish tobacco manufacturing industry was attacked by the British combine which continued its onslaught all through 1903. During this whole period British manufacturers continued to dump or sell under cost "roll" and other tobaccos all over Ireland. Notwithstanding the keenness of the struggle however, the Irish manufacturers in the main, backed up by the Irish tobacco dealers, more than held their own with regard to output, with the exception, perhaps, of one or two of the smaller manufacturers. As regards the local retail trade, it is scarcely possible that the past year could be a record one, or equal to the previous year, in view of the bad Summer, when the number of tourist visitors must have fallen very much short of previous years. This branch of the trade was a growing one, and desirable in many ways. Unfortunately many branches of trade suffered more or less from the bad Summer, but if all reports are true the North of Ireland was better off than some other districts. It is to be hoped that 1904 may prove more satisfactory all round.

Free Trade Between Uncle Sam and the Philippines.

THE Philippine Tobacco Workers' petition referred to in last week's issue of Grocer, ought to set the trade thinking in time what to do to prevent the threatened irruption of free tobacco and cigars from the Philippines, says an American exchange. Even if the present Congress on account of the approaching Presidential election should be afraid of a further change in the tariff the trade may be assured that the question of free trade with the Philippines can at least be only postponed but not quelched altogether.

The revolutionizing effect a free admission of Philippine cigars is bound to have on the American cigar industry is plainly proven by the table incorporated in the Philippine Tobacco Workers' petition, which table goes to show that a perfecto size of Manila cigars can be laid down in San Francisco at $26 per thousand, a Panatela at $17 and a Londres at $12. With such prices even American domestic seed cigars could not compete any longer. As the possibilities of the Philippine Islands to raise tobacco and manufacture cigars are almost unlimited and as the U. S. Department of Agriculture is enticing the farmers of every State in the Union to convert their fields into tobacco plantations the prospects are of being blessed a few years hence with such fabulous crops of tobacco and production of cigars that every man, woman and child in the United States will be compelled to live on cigars if the consumption is to absorb only part of the possible production.

The Child is Father of the Man.

"How many cigars do you smoke a day?" inquired the meddler.

"Three," patiently replied the youth.

"How much do you pay for them?"

"Ten cents each."

"Don't you know, sir," continued the sage, "that if you save that money, by the time you are as old as I am you might own that big building on the corner?"

"Do you own it?" asked the smoker.

"No, I don't," replied the old man.

"Well, I do," said the young man.

if you are not selling Cigars. You sell Tobaccos---why not Cigars? How can you explain it? And think of the profit in Cigar selling! 50 to 100% is easy. What is your profit in selling Tobaccos?

But sell Cigars of quality—Cigars of fame. We make many brands, but there are two—Pebble, at 5 cents, and Pharoah, at 10 cents—which we specify in particular. They are unqualifiedly the best made at their respective prices. Why not take advantage of our standing offer? The most liberal one we know of.

The other day a grocer added T. & B. to his tobacco stock. He had been going in a rut before. Immediately old smokers threw up their hands joyfully—an old friend had come back.

What men don't smoke?

And if they smoke, they use pipes. There's big money in pipes.

How is this for a good offer?

6 doz. pipes, assorted, for $13.00, charges paid, worth from 25c. to $1.00 each. Can be returned if not perfectly satisfactory.

Duty on Foreign Cigarettes

THE United Kingdom Cigarette Manufacturers' Association having recently sent a memorial to the Chancellor of the Exchequer urging that the British import duty on foreign cigarettes should be raised to the same level as the duty on foreign cigars, the Chancellor's secretary has replied as follows:

"The Chancellor of the Exchequer desires me to say, with further reference to the memorials of your association respecting imported cigarettes, that, after making careful enquiries into the matter, he has come to the conclusion that to raise the duty on foreign cigarettes to the same level as the duty on foreign cigars would be prohibitive to the importation of cigarettes, and would be contrary to the principle underlying our present Customs duties, which are not intended to exclude foreign competion. He would point out, however, that the British cigarette industry does not appear to be in other than a satisfactory condition, having regard to the fact that the import of foreign cigarettes decreased in 1903 by over 25 per cent., viz from 619,000 lbs. to 462,000 lbs."

Tobacco Display at St. Louis Fair.

THE Louisiana Purchase Exposition Commission has secured, for decorative purposes, from the manufacturers of the several American states a lot of tobacco, the same to be contributed by the manufacturers for this purpose. With this end in view application has been made to the commissioners for permission to use this tobacco without the payment of tax, as the same is not to be sold.

In replying to the application the commissioner holds that in view of the regulations providing that all packages of manufactured tobacco or snuff found on the market or outside of the factory premises without the proper stamp affixed shall be forfeited to the United States, and prohibiting the removal, except in proper tax-paid packages, of any manufactured Tobacco from any factory or place where tobacco or snuff is made, he is unable to see how the prvilege desired can be accorded without a violation of the law.

The commissioner suggests that if it is desired to show at the Exposition the process of manufacturing tobacco, the commission endeavor to obtain a certain space or territory within the Exposition grounds which they can bond as a factory, keep the necessary books, and make the proper reports required by law, thereby giving them all the opportunities for displaying the material in its finished condition, as well as in the different processes necessary to reach the manufactured state. Under conditions of this kind all existing law and regulations governing the manufacture of tobacco could be applied to this temporary factory.

Another plan would be for the commission to restrict its exhibit only to such tobacco products as are put up at factories in statutory packages, properly stamped, branded and labeled. The law and regulations at present provide for such variety in the size and style of packages as would permit an elaborate display; and the stamps, brands and labels would not only add to the attractiveness of the package, but would illustrate to the public the requirements of the Government to which manufactpurers must conform in placing their goods on the market. Of course, at the close of the Exposition, or at any time, the management could sell or dispose of such an exhibit without restriction.

Jones and The Fairy.

ONCE upon a time there was a spendthrift of the name of Jones, who soliloquized in this wise:

"What a fool I have been! If I had all the money for instance, that I have spent for cigars, I could have a good bank account instead of being on my uppers and trying to borrow money from my friends. I wish I had it!"

Someone touched his arm.

He turned, and there stood his fairy godmother.

"You shall have your wish my son," she said, "on one condition—that you never touch tobacco again, in any form, so long as you live."

Jones hesitated—and was lost.

"I don't want it bad enough for that," he said.

Ode to Baron De Kalb.

My good old friend, in lazy way,
I've watched your steady-going sway;
I've touched your lips in fond caress;
I've felt the quality in your dress.
Half solemnly I've seen the fall
Of each white ash, and noted all
The warmth of fire that in you lies.
I've valued with a lover's eyes,
And doubt if Ceylon's breezes be
More rich in spice than you to me.
Till now at last I lay you down,
Scant in your coat of lessening brown.
And sadly ponder as you burn,
For me, within your funeral urn.
That friendship's noblest lot you've known—
You gave your life to cheer my own.

—I. Lover Rages, in Tobacco Leaf.

Tobacco Notes.

T. J. Horrocks has just placed on the market a new brand of 10c. cigars known as "Symbol." He has spared no expense in getting the finest Havana tobacco and the make up of the package is something unique, new and original. TO COLLECT DEBTS.

AT a recent meeting or the Retail Grocers' Association, of St. John, N.B., held to discuss the question of collection of bad debts, the following plan was recommended:

The first or mild course is a request to the debtor from the grocer for payment, with a delicate hint that failure to pay will necessitate his account being forwarded to the association, when every member of that body will be informed of the fact. The next or medium course follows in due time in the form of a letter from the secretary, stating that the debtor's name has been reported to him, and if the debt is not satisfactorily arranged by a certain time the name will be reported to the members, and thereafter the debtor will not be able to obtain credit and will be subject to the expenses of a law suit. Fee asked for this letter, twenty-five cents. If the foregoing is unsatisfactory, the strong arm of the law is threatened without any beating about the bush. Fee asked for this letter 25 cents. Should the debtor still elude the payment of his account, the desperate or final move is made. A letter is written to his employer, stating that the association's object is to employ all honorable means to collect bad debts, and that as one of his employes is reported for neglecting to pay a bill, as a last resort the matter is referred to him in the hope that his influence may bring about a settlement. No fee is charged to the debtor for this final effort, the association probably feeling that the reflection of the exceedingly uncomfortable quarter of an hour the debtor will have with his employer is ample compensation for their efforts.

AGE IMPROVES VINEGAR.

THE highest quality of white vinegar is not delivered until at least a year after the process of manufacture is completed. Malt vinegar is aged for two years before it is sent out.

White wine vinegar is produced from alcohol by a process of fermentation. The alcohol is poured into a large vat, into which a little water and malt extract has been placed. When the fermentation is fairly commenced the liquid is slowly filtered through filters of beech shavings. The process of fermentation is completed during this filtering, and at its close the liquid is collected in vats, from which it is placed into barrels. The substance called vinegar is developed from the alcohol by the interaction of the oxygen and carbon.

Malt vinegar requires a more complicated process, similar to that of brewing. First the barley malt is ground and passed into a masher. This is a vat in which a circular rake revolves in order to stir the malt as the water is slowly poured on it. The liquid that comes from this is pumped up into another large vat, where it is boiled for a time, after which it is passed through a cooler. From the cooler the liquid is passed into more vats, in which it is allowed to ferment. After that it is allowed to settle and then run into an acidifier. It is here that it acquires that sharp taste essential to vinegar. It is allowed to stay there for about a week and then it is poured into filters, which settle and refine it. After it has been in these for about three weeks it is bottled. It is still far from ready to be sent out, as it must stand for two years to become old and mellow.

The Government plays a large part in these processes. The alcohol has to be kept in bond and taken out only in the presence of a Government inspector who has an official right in the building. When the vinegar is finally ready for the barrels and bottles it is tested and measured by this same official. He keeps an accurate account of all the vinegar made, because before it can leave the factory the manufacturer must pay a duty of 4 cents on the gallon.

REMOVAL.

The increased business of B. O. Beland, 17 Lemoine street, Montreal, has necessitated his removal to larger premises and he has accordingly leased the large and appropriately arranged building at 1684 Notre Dame street, now occupied by the Auer Light Co. The location is very central being just east of Place D'Armes square and Notre Dame Cathedral. Mr. Beland expects to be thoroughly established by May 1st. In the meantime an opportunity is offered to the trade to secure a lot of his high-grade goods at attractive prices before removal.

TO VISIT NEWFOUNDLAND.

In view of the probability of closer trade relations being established between Canada and Newfoundland it is interesting to note that the Canadian Manufacturers' Association intend making Newfoundland the objective point for their annual tour this year.

INQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade recently received at the Canadian Government office in London, Eng.

1. A firm of elastic web and smallware manufacturers are seeking to extend their business with Canada, and make inquiry respecting the appointment of agents.

2. The names of several large grain export firms in Canada are desired by a London agent, who seeks to represent them in the English market.

3. A commission agent and general merchant in Newcastle is prepared to represent a good Canadian house in almost any line of business.

4. A North of England firm asks to be placed in touch with likely Canadian exporters of pit props.

5 A Scotch firm of produce importers are looking for supplies of refined Canadian lard of the quality known on the British market as pure lard.

6. A London firm of merchants, who have hitherto confined themselves to the South African trade, are desirous of establishing relations with Canadian business houses buying British and French goods.

7. An Irish produce firm asks to be placed in touch with curers or shippers of pigs' heads in Canada.

8. Inquiry is made respecting producers of rotten stone in Canada by a correspondent who is interested in this mineral.

9. A Glasgow firm desires to get into touch with importers in Canada of bricks, fireclay pipes, retorts and other fire clay goods.

10. A gentleman with good business experience leaving England early in April to take up his residence in Canada is seeking a few agencies of British firms requiring a representative in the Dominion.

11. Inquiry is made for names of Canadian furniture manufacturers who can ship office furniture, telescope tables, bedroom suites, etc., by a person seeking to sell on commission or to obtain a buying agency.

12. A travelling agent in the North of England is seeking the representation of Canadian manufacturers.

13. A New Zealand firm have asked to be supplied with names and addresses of Canadian shippers of furniture, hardware, boots and shoes.

14. A Trinidad firm of shipping and commission agents desire to get into touch with Canadian business houses, as they are open to buy or sell produce.

15. A North of England firm of cheese factors wish to correspond with some Canadian shippers of cheese from the Belleville and Brockville districts. They can also act as buying agents for a new brand of pea-fed bacon.

16. A firm of petrol and steam motor manufacturers have asked to be furnished with suggestions or information that might be useful in developing a demand in Canada for their productions.

The following enquiries were received at the Canadian Section of the Imperial Institute, London, Eng.:

1. A manufacturer of fishing rods and tackle is prepared to appoint a suitable Canadian resident agent.

2. A firm manufacturing all varieties of iron and wire fencing, hurdles, gates, etc., wishes to develop trade in Canada.

3. The makers of a new patent boiler-cleaning material seeks the services of an active Canadian agent.

[The names of those making inquiries may be obtained from the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

CANADIAN CANNERS' CONSOLIDATED COMPANIES LIMITED

HAMILTON, ONTARIO.

Is a Classical Education of Use for a Commercial Life ?

FROM Chicago we have received a small book entitled "The Utility of an Academic or Classical Education for Young Men who Have to Earn Their Own Living and who Expect to pursue a Commercial Life." The author or compiler of this investigation is Mr. R. T. Crane. Mr. Crane's position is at once indicated by the fact of his entire agreement with Mr. Herbert Spencer's view that the college graduate in his shop, or his office, in managing his estate or his family, in playing his part as director of a bank or a railway, is "little aided by the knowledge he took so many years to acquire—so little that generally the greater part of it drops out of his memory."

The question dealt with by Mr. Crane is a very important one, and, as he points out, a great deal has been written on the subject, but he thinks the writers have merely given their opinions or theories, not facts. Being and presumably a very successful one, he set out to get facts. "It has seemed to me," he says, "that the testimony of a large number of heads of universities, college graduates, and prominent business men would be of great assistance in arriving at something tangible on this subject. I have, therefore, made quite an extensive investigation along this line, the results of which are here given, together with certain comments."

Mr. Crane first of all sent a letter to the presidents of nineteen of the principal universities and colleges in the United States, asking them if, in their opinion, there was any evidence to prove that an "academic course" is of any advantage for young men who have to make their own living and who expect to pursue a commercial life. Unfortunately Mr. Crane did not explain to them what he meant by "an academic course." In his book he says: "It should be borne in mind that, whever college education is mentioned herein, it refers exclusively to the co-called 'academic' course, or the classical and literary department." If he had stated this in his letters of inquiry he would have had to complain that so many of the replies he got exhibited "confusion of thought." President Wheeler, of the University of California, tells him that it is difficult to answer his letter because "it is uncertain what you mean by 'academic course.' Within our academic course is included, for instance, work in mining, electricity, mechanics, etc. We put these studies on the same level with the humanistic studies leading to the degree of B.A.

President Eliot, of Harvard, makes the same reply, and says that he understands an academic course to "comprehend any course of study in a college or scientific school which covers approximately the years from seventeen or eighteen to twenty or twenty-two. With this understanding of the term, there can be no question whatever that an academic course is in the highest degree who mean to make their living in business. By business I understand banking, transportation, manufacturing, mining, large-scale farming, and engineering in all its branches. These occuations require nowadays, in all their higher levels, a trained mind, and a deal of appropriate information. This training and information can only be acquired in colleges and scientific schools. A young man who is going into business had better take an academic course, in my sense of the term, if he has any mind to train. That is an indisputable proposition, and there is no use in discussing it."

Desirable for Capable Young Men

As might be expected, this is the view generally taken by the presidents of colleges who replied to Mr. Crane.

His answer is that "of course all this has nothing to do with the case"—i.e., the case which he put, or though he put, in his letter. It is clear enough from his book, written after he had received the replies, that what he wants to know is "whether a classical and literary education assists those who have had it to commercial success."

In justice to Mr. Crane it should be mentioned that he put a series of seven plain questions to the presidents, which they none of them answer categorically, and he claims that only the presidents of Yale, of the University of California, and of Clark University "are frank enough to admit that the presumption is against the practical utility of an academic course for business men."

Opinions of Graduates.

Mr. Crane then addressed a letter to 1,593 men who had graduated about seven years before at one or other of fourteen American universities. He received 555 replies, of which 490 came from students "who had either taken up a professional or technical line of work, or who state that they do not come within the scope of this investigation." This left only 65 letters from the class of young men Mr. Crane particularly desired to reach, which is "so small a proportion of the whole that the information furnished by them does not throw much light upon the subject," but such as it is he thinks it can hardly be regarded as very strong evidence of the college graduate's success on business. Several stated that they found a strong feeling among business men against employing college graduates, and that they were at a disadvantage on that account.

Opinions of Business Men.

Mr. Crane then set himself to obtain the opinions of one hundred employers and practical business men, and he publishes replies from many of them which are decidedly interesting. He asked the business men fifteen questions which we have not space to reproduce, but lumped into one they amount to this: "Would you advise a young fellow who at the age of sixteen or seventeen has five thousand dollars to invest it in about five years of college education (i.e. classical and literary), or go straight from his grammar school or high school to business?"

Mr. Crane's strong conviction is that the academic course, as he understands it, will not help the young fellow who at the end of it looks to a business career for his support—that, in fact, it is from five to seven of the best years of his life thrown away, not to mention the five thousand dollars.

It must be confessed that he is right when he says: "Even the replies received from business men are often so indefinite as to be of no value for my purpose. No dependence can be placed on any of them who fail to make their practice consistent with their theories." Nearly all of them repudiate any prejudice against employing college men as such, and nearly all express belief in the usual advantages supposed to belong to a college training, but their theories are not always in accord with their practice. For instance, Mr. A. C. Bartlett, vice-president of the Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett Company, of Chicago, appears from his letters to be "very strongly of the opinion that college education is of value to young men," but a college graduate, after vainly trying to get employment, after answering 450 advertisers who had no use for a college man, as a last resort applied to Mr. A. C. Bartlett. "In my innocence," he says, "I imagined that the friend and advocate of the college graduate in business might consider my exceptional character, references, and general capacity to be so much of an offset to my ignorance of hardware quotations that he might be willing to utilize my ability and reliability in some corner of his large business. He assured me politely but positively that he could not use a man in his business who did not know it from the bottom up!"

Do Not Want to Start at the Bottom.

Whatever their theories may be, that is practically the reply of all the employers, and, after all, it is the only logical reply from the business point of view. As one of them puts it, "I have no objection to the college trained man, but he comes to me and wants a salaried position, he is over twenty and knows nothing of the business; if he is content to be treated exactly as we treat a boy at sixteen or seventeen, fresh from the high school, to accept the same salary and learn the same work, he may in time get on more quickly than the other—but he is not content to do so, and therefore he is not the material we want."

Mr. Crane points out that his argument does not apply to the same extent to the college man who has got what they call "a pull"—i.e., place and berth waiting for him—though he thinks that even the son of a rich business man will do better for himself, and the business, if he has devoted five years' training to it, instead of to the ordinary college course.

Although, of course, many, perhaps the majority, will dissent from his views, there is no doubt Mr. Crane makes out a strong case from his point of view, which is not a purely sordid one, though he frankly admits that if the end in view is not money, "it is safe to say it is probably seventy-five per cent. of it."

His book is well worth the attention of all interetsed in business and education.

CANADA AND THE ST. LOUIS FAIR.

Concerning Canada's exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition this year the Minister of Agriculture says:

"Our participation in the St. Louis Exhibition, which opens next May, has necessitated continued preparations, which I am glad to say are now in a very forward state, and I trust that when the time comes Canada will be thoroughly well represented there. The contract for our building at St. Louis has been let, and the building almost completed.

"The question of our participation in the live stock exhibit is still under consideration. A number of the live stock men of Canada earnestly desire to send Canadian stock to the exhibition, but difficulties present themselves in regard to the conditions under which this stock must be exhibited. I trust, however, that these difficulties will be overcome, and that Canada will be able to make a satisfactory and successful exhibit."

WHAT CANADA BUYS FROM UNCLE SAM.

According to an American exchange Canadians, considered per capita, are the best customers of the United States, having consumed on the average in 1903 $28 per capita in value of our surplus products. On the same per capita figures Germany would have consumed $1,568,000,000, against less than $200,000,000 actually exported there. One Canadian consumes as much of our surplus products as 700 Chinamen, Manchurians or Filipinos, or as much as 1,000 East Indians. The total exports of the United States to Canada in 1903 was greater in value than all those of Asia, Africa and Oceanica combined.

A GOOD INDICATION.

Owing to the increase in business of E. W. Gillett Co., Limited, they find the 10 large floors in their building at 32-34 Front street west, to be inadequate to their requirements and they have recently rented additional floor space in first building west of their own, but as a 14-foot lane divides the two places, it was necessary to connect them by a fire-proof bridge. We are informed it is the intention of this company to commence the erection of a large up-to-date factory in about a year from now.

J. H. MAGOR.

THE Canadian Grocer has from time to time presented to its readers sketches of men prominently connected with the grocery trade in Canada, men whose work has left an impress on business, men whose work in introducing to the trade and the public articles that are recognized in many cases as household necessities, is admittedly meritorious. In this week's issue appears a short sketch of J. H. Magor, of Frank Magor & Co., Montreal.

Mr. Magor came to Canada in the Spring of 1880, to join his uncle, the late F. Magor, import commission agent, Montreal, (established in 1870), and during the quarter of a century of his connection with the business he has paid close and successful attention to all its interests. At his uncle's death in 1893, he took over his business and became the sole proprietor of Frank Magor & Co., retaining the old name of the firm which had been so long and favorably known throughout Canada, particularly in connection with the sale of Keen's Mustard and Oxford Blue.

In May, 1903, when the two largest mustard firms in the world, J. & T. Colman, and Keen, Robinson & Co., amalgamated, Frank Magor & Co. were appointed sole agents in Canada for both firms. Frank Magor & Co., as may be assumed from the character of the firms represented, do business all over the Dominion, through their travelling representatives, three of whom cover the territory from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and in addition have resident agents in Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria, Quebec, Halifax, St. John, N. B., and St. John's, Nfld.

Frank Magor & Company are also the Canadian representatives of such well-known English firms as Cadbury Bros., E. Lazenby & Son., Chas. Southwell & Co., Carr & Co., Tom Smith & Co., Bryant & May, also Reiss & Brady, Bordeaux, France & New York, and the Franco-American Food Co.

Mr. Magor personally visits the trade throughout Canada twice a year, and to many readers of The Grocer his energetic personality is well known. His offices and warehouses are located at 103 St. Paul street, Montreal, opposite Place Royale, and in the heart of the jobbing trade of the city.

INQUIRIES FOR CANADIAN TRADE.

The following were among the inquiries relating to Canadian trade recently received at the Canadian Government office in London, Eng.

1. A London importer is seeking supplies of maple and hickory skewers from Canada in carloads of 160 barrels.

2. A capable representative in Canada is required by the Swiss proprietor of a process for preserving boilers against incrustation.

3. A firm manufacturing preservatives for butter is desirous of extending its Canadian connections by corresponding with butter factories in the Dominion.

4. A London merchant offering good references is open to represent Canadian houses either as a buying or selling agent.

[The names of those making inquiries may be obtained from the Editor of THE CANADIAN GROCER.]

KEEP TAB ON FOREIGN CROPS.

THE Northwest Grain Dealers' Association has arranged with the Kansas Grain Dealers' Association for a daily wire from Topeka, Kansas, giving information on the crop and weather conditions of Kansas and Oklahoma, the district which at present is attracting the attention of the grain trade of the world owing to the reports of great damage to the growing Winter wheat crop due to drouth.

Western grain dealers feel that the condition of the crops in the Southwestern states will have an important bearing on values in the Canadian West, and in fact for the past two weeks one of the prime price factors has been the reported damage to the Southern crop.

Up to the present, despite reports of great damage by drouth and high winds, Kansas wheat appears to be undamaged. What is needed is top moisture, and if that is received within the next two weeks the chances of a fine crop are bright.

DAIRY PRODUCE AND PROVISIONS

and Cold Storage News.

Canadian Food Products in Great Britain.

THE agent of the Canadian Department of Agriculture in Great Britain reports as follows regarding Canadian food products in Great Britain:

"Canadian food products are often sold in Great Britain to the consumer, as being the product of Great Britain or some other country—the produce of which may command a higher price on the market. In fact one never sees in British retail shops "Canadian cheese," "Canadian butter," "Canadian eggs," or "Canadian bacon."

"Eggs come from Canada packed in the 'foreign' or 'Irish' case which holds 1,440 eggs. These are sold as 'Irish' or 'Selected Danish' whichever may bring the highest price. American and Canadian bacon and hams are sent from port of landing to English smoke-houses and appear on the market as 'Wiltshire,' 'Cumberland,' 'Yorkshire,' 'Berkshire' or any other favorite brand.

"The only thing to be done is for Canadian shippers to brand 'Canada' or 'Canadian' on everything and advertise freely in the British trade journals. A few Canadian firms have followed this plan and to-day their brands are in demand and are known as 'Canadian produce,' but this position has only been gained by spending a lot of money in advertising. Financial returns are what the average shipper looks for and if he receives more money by having his goods sold as the product of some other country, he very naturally pockets the higher price and says nothing.

"It is a 'slow game' getting the British people to change their ideas or tastes, and in order to 'play the game' one must have lots of time and spend money freely. This the average Canadian exporter cannot afford to do, but Canadian goods are gradually, if slowly, gaining in favor. This gain in favor is chiefly due to the fine quality of the Canadian goods. International competition is so keen to capture the British market that there is no room to try 'fake games' and it is to be regretted that apparently the only way to make some Canadian shippers honest is by Act of Parliament. Great good has already been done by 'The Fruit Marks Act.' Our dairy products are landing each season in more perfect condition, which is due to the close inspection kept in Canada over the manufacture of cheese and butter, to the improvement in the cheese factories and creameries, but also largely due to the 'Government Cool Curing Rooms' for cheese, and the improved 'cool' and 'cold' storage for food products on the various steamship lines running from Canada to the different British ports."

Waxed Cheese.

THE Trade Bulletin reports that Bristol buyers are complaining because too much waxed cheese is arriving in the English market and express regret that the Government Agricultural Department at Ottawa should have advocated the waxing of cheese with parafine by factorymen, especially as there is such great objection to parafined cheese on the other side of the Atlantic. Since Canadian makers are supposed to study the requirements of the trade there, it is to be hoped they will discontinue this highly objectionable practice. A Montreal exporter while in England last year was instructed by three firms there not to ship them a box of waxed cheese, as their customers strongly objected to them, on the ground that the goods lost considerable weight, one importer stating that he would not buy waxed cheese unless he was allowed two pounds per box. What is required in the English market is cheese with a bright natural skin in the Summer time, and cheese made in the Fall should appear in the natural condition with a nice dry and green mold on the skin, showing a little maturity. Parafined cheese prevents this natural appearance, besides causing loss in weight to the retailer. As so many objections continue to be raised, in the great consuming centres of Great Britain against waxing cheese, surely Canadian factorymen will not persist in a practice that is calculated to injure the enviable prestige of their goods in the English market."

To Fight Packers' Trust.

According to a Western exchange the stock men of the Western States, backed by the powerful National Live Stock Association, mean to carry out their project of establishing an independent packing plant to fight the so-called United States beef trust, which is evidenced by the option that has been taken upon the packing plant of Jacob Dold of Kansas City. The Dold packing house has been one of the strongest competitors of the trust. Its capacity is sufficient to kill 2,000 head of cattle, 4,000 hogs and as many sheep daily.

Dispute Over Cheese Shipment.

THE Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce has been instrumental in effecting the settlement of a dispute which promised to injure Canadian trade with Australia. Some time ago a large Australian importing house complained that a shipment of cheese from a large Ontario exporting company was not up to sample, and declared that they would never do any more business with the Canadian firm.

As a result of the mediation of the Minister the Australian company have written stating that by reason of the action of the Department of Trade and Commerce the Canadian firm have made a satisfactory arrangement, and, further that the shipment is such a satisfactory one that the Australian firm have sent forward an order to the Canadian firm for 50 cases of cheese, and trust that they will now do a regular business in this line with the Canadian firm in question.

New Cheese Factory.

Arrangements have been completed for the building of a ne wand modern cheese factory at Braemar, Ont. The contracts have already been awarded and the factory is to be completed by May 1st. It is to be built entirely of concrete and will cost $3,000.

Lists of Shipments.

Mr. Thomas E. Davis, inspector at London for the Department of Agriculture, reports that consignees in Britain are complaining because senders of Canadian produce do not forward list of shipments, thereby causing great inconvenience.

PROVISION AND DAIRY MARKETS.

Toronto.

Provisions—There is little change in the provision market this week. The demand for hams and breakfast bacon is fair. There is a good demand for meats, especially smoked meats. Dressed hogs, light weights, are from 35 to 50c easier, there being considerable diversity of opinion among dealers. Heavy weights are from 25 to 75c easier, and the same remarks apply as to light weight hogs. The fresh meat market is quiet and steady and last week's prices continue unchanged. Butter—Receipts are just about equal to demand. There is no surplus and no slump is expected for some time. Creamery solids show a slight falling off in price, and dairy prints, a rather wider range. Our quotations are as follows:

	Per lb.
Creamery prints	0 21	0 22
" solids, fresh	0 19	0 20
Dairy rolls, large	0 15	0 16
" prints	0 16	0 18

" twins	0 11	0 11½

Montreal.

Provisions—The market is quiet and steady, and a good demand rules everywhere in the district. Cured meats are going like hot cakes since Saturday last, which no doubt is just an Easter spurt. In connection with lard it may be mentioned that cottolene has been put up 1-8c in price and the demand is reported good. We quote:

Canadian short cut mess pork	$17 50 $18 00
American short cut clear	16 50 17 00

Cheese—No marked change is reported in the cheese market. The tone is steady. Some factories in the country are reported to be getting ready for work and if the fine weather continues things may open up earlier than was expected. We quote:

Good cheese	0 10 0 10½

St. John, N.B.

Provisions—In barrelled goods there is a light demand. Pork is quoted lower. Of late years a cheaper grade of clear pork has come on the market. Beef is unchanged, there is a wide range in price with Canadian and American both offered. Lard is unchanged and a full stock is held. Smoked meats keep quite firm. Fresh meats show a fair business. Nice veal is offered and prices are rather lower. Little is being done in lamb or mutton. In pork there is a fair supply at even prices. We quote the following prices:

Mess pork, per bbl	$17 25 $19 00

Eggs—Prices as reported last week are much lower so that all may have eggs for Easter. Supply is not large, however, and rather firmer prices are expected. We quote the following prices:

Eggs, henery	0 25 0 30
" case stock	0 20 0 22

Sheese is scarce but the market shows no snap. Prices are unchanged. We quote the following prices:

Cheese, per lb	0 12½ 0 13

Provision Notes.

The dairy industry in Siberia is only 18 years old, and the annual export of butter is now worth $15,000,000.

Fresh and Cured Fish

New U. S. Tariff Duty on Brine.

HALIFAX dealers in pickled fish, who export large quantities of this article principally through the port of Boston, are not much alarmed over the recent order of the United States Treasury Department which proposes to levy a tariff duty on the brine in which the fish is preserved. The new order will have the effect of increasing the duty on herring, mackerel, salmon and other pickld fish frm 40 to 50 per cent.

The duty on mackerel for instance is one cent per pound. A barrel contains about 200 pounds of fish, making the duty previous to the new order $2 per barrel. It is estimated that the brine and salt in a barrel of mackerel weigh nearly one hundred pounds, making a total of 300 pounds on which duty of one cent per pound will have to be paid.

At the present time very little pickled fish is being exported from Halifax, but shippers are hoping that by the time large shipments are to be made, the whole matter may be satisfactorily adjusted.

It is thought that Boston importers will bring sufficient pressure to bear in the necessary quarters to secure the abrogation of the above legislation.

Conference re B. C. Fisheries.

REPRESENTATIVES of the Dominion and Provincial Governments met last week in Victoria to settle upon a scheme for providing a suitable fish-ladder to assist the salmon to enter Quesnel Lake and reach the spawning area afforded by that body of water and its feeders. Quesnel Lake and its tributaries constitute about one-quarter of the natural spawning area for the sockeye salmon in the Fraser river district.

The Provincial Government have not been willing to undertake the putting in of a new fish-ladder taking the ground that the Dominion Government, which collected the licenses, should do the work. After some negotiation between the two authorities, it was agreed that this fishway should be constructed by the Dominion Government, the amount expended to be kept out of the sum due the province when a final settlement of the fishery matter should be made.

Salmon for Japan.

A large industry in salted salmon will be developed in British Columbia this season as a result of the Japanese war. The market for this class of army food has already been found, and large orders have been secured for consignments. The salted herring industry at Departure Bay is also to be greatly extended to meet the Japanese demand which is rapidly increasing. The war office has approved of this food, large quantities of which are to be shipped to Japan.

Canada's Salmon Interests.

The decision of the Dominion Government to establish a number of salmon hatcheries in British Columbia and to permit the canners to use traps is one which will be approved by everyone having at heart the important canning interests of Canada.

By the use of traps the Alaska Packers' Association of the United States has maintained its business in a profitable condition from year to year, while the Canadian packers have had lean and fat years, acording to the run of the salmon and to the degree of success attained by the fishermen in catching the salmon by the use of nets—a method long ago recognized by the United States as being far less efficient than traps.

New Way of Ascertaining Size of Pearls.

The Roentgen rays are now used for ascertaining the size of pearls in the oyster hertofore only learned by opening the shell, which was death to both oyster and pearl. With the X-ray, when applied, if the pearl is too small for use, the oyster can be returned to the water for future investigation. This method will save thousands of dollars' worth of pearls that would otherwise be lost altogether.

Fish Notes.

A fishing syndicate to be known as the Nanaimo Fisheries will shortly be formed in British Columbia with the object of furthering herring fishing on the shores of Vancouver Island.

THE CLEVER GROCER.

ONCE upon a time there was a grocer, a smart grocer, who knew more about the grocery business than any other grocer in the world. He said so himself, so it must have been so. This grocer believed in giving his customers full weight, so to be sure that they got full weight, he gave them also down weight. His customers were pleased. They talked about him and called him a nice grocer; the women thought he was a lovely man because they always got 10 cents worth of butter for a nickle, and the children also got such a large handful of candy and the nice grocer always sent home a large bunch of trading stamps for the children's mamma. After a while the smart grocer found that it was not convenient for him to pay the collector for the wholesale house when he called on the tenth, but that did not worry him; "What are wholesale houses for but to accommodate us grocers?" he said. After about one year his wholesale house in a mean manner refused to send the smart grocer any more goods until he paid for those he got last time. In great anger he told the collector for the wholesale house that never more would he buy from them. And he did not, but he ordered some goods from another wholesale house, but when the driver brought the goods to his store he handed in a ticket marked "C.O.D." and refused to leave the goods until the cold cash was deposited in his horny hands. The smart grocer called on Fair Heaven to witness the fact that there was a Wholesale Grocery Trust, for he found that they all sent their goods "C.O.D." And then when they got through selling his counters and his patent pivoted bins and his Bowser oil tank and paid all the money into the Bankruptcy Court, he went back to breaking on the Missouri Pacific Railroad for a living.

PEANUT HARVEST.

AN American exchange has the following interesting account of the methods employed in harvesting peanuts. The process must always take place before frost, for the nuts and haulm are both greatly injured, if not ruined, by frost. If the Fall should be wet or the peanuts mature very early many of the first formed nuts will be ruined by sprouting. Dry weather should always be selected for harvesting It cannot be done when the ground is wet, for then the dirt will adhere to the nuts and ruin them, or at least greatly detract from their market value by turning them black. The crop of white peanuts is harvested by running a furrow on each side of the row with a bull tongue plow or a pea digger, so as to dislocate the roots. Care must be taken not to detach the nuts from the vine in running the side furrow. After the plow has been run on each side of the row (and it is sometimes necessary to run twice on each side) then lift the vines gently with the hand, carefully shaking the dirt off, and lay them on the ground. Let them remain in this way if the sun is shining, from six to eight hours. The vines will wilt like clover, when they may be brought together and stacked. The stacks are made around a pole planted in the ground and rising some eight feet above the surface. A platform made of old rails rests upon logs placed around the poles, and upon this the stack is built. The platform protects the nuts and vines from the mold and dampness of the ground. In stacking the nuts should be put on the inside, next to the stack pole, but not so close as to prevent the air from circulating freely from the bottom to the top of the stack. To make the stack entirely secure it should have a capping of hay or corn fodder. Put up in this manner, the nuts will keep securely all the Winter should it be desired.

The red nuts are more easily harvested than the white, as they have but few roots and the nuts adhere closely about the stem. In loose land they may be pulled up without running a furrow on each side of the row, although to do this will make the work much easier. There are but few red nuts grown. An over production of them for a while reduced prices below the cost of the labor in producing them.

Usually the nuts are allowed to stand in the stacks about four weeks and are then picked off by hand, the white always. The red nuts are sometimes threshed off by taking up bundles and beating them against a rail or the side of a box. This latter plan greatly injures the peanuts. Five or six bushels of red peanuts can be picked off the vines in a day by a nimble fingered person, but the picking of three or four bushels of the white is considered a good day's work. Women and children are said to be much more expert in this than men. The price paid for picking is about ten cents a bushel. After this they ought to be screened in a cylinder, so as to separate them from the rust and leaves, and also for the purpose of brightening the hulls by abrasion. After sunning, they are put in sacks containing four or five bushels.

MILK PRODUCERS MEET.

AT the semi-annual meeting of the Toronto Milk Producers' Association on March 26, the price of milk for the Summer months was fixed at $1.15 per can, delivered in Toronto. DEPARTMENT OF ADVERTISING SUGGESTION AND CRITICISM

NOTE—Herein are discussed the principles and practice of advertising. Subscribers are invited to send Mr. Kirkwood specimens of their newspaper and other advertising, for the purpose of review in this department. Address care of Department of Advertising, THE CANADIAN GROCER.

John C. Kirkwood,

The Importance of Position and Display.

AN examination of newspapers reveals a carelessness on the part of many advertisers which is costing them no small sum. This carelessness is in regard to the position and display of their advertisements.

There is always in every weekly paper certain pages of more general interest than others, pages which carry local or district news. There are other pages which are made up of re-printed matter, pages which are passed over unread by the majority of readers. An advertisement on such a page stands a very poor chance of being read, while on the other hand an advertisement on a page of local or district news has the best chance possible. Even on the most desirable pages there are some positions better than others. It is clear that not everybody can have the "best position" and it is a good thing that there is no general agreement as to what constitutes the best position. Some want the top of the page, others the bottom; some want to be next reading matter, others are indifferent; some want to be on the first page, others on the last; and some think the editorial page better than any other. If all were agreed, the poor publisher would have a sorry time of it.

The most read page is, generally speaking, the best page, and in making an advertising contract it is well to have an understanding with the publisher regarding a definite position. Publishers are not always disposed to guarantee set positions, partly because of the undesirableness—from their point of view—of so doing, and partly because they may be handicapped many times in arranging a good "make-up." At the same time it is nearly always possible to secure a satisfactory position by allowing the publisher certain general liberties in the make-up of his paper.

To have a space that is always to be found in a certain place in the paper is a distinct advantage and ensures better results from advertising than are likely to be derived otherwise. It would be possible in a small town or village, for instance, to discover the location of a merchant's store no matter where or how often he shifted his business quarters, but no one for a moment would approve of a merchant leaving probable customers to chance. In the matter of store location every alert merchant is quick to perceive the advantages of having his store as close as possible to the chief highway, and to be on it if he can. To be where most people will pass is the thing to be desired, even though the transient business amount to very little. What is true of a store's location is true of the position of an advertisement in the local paper. The larger the community, the greater the number of competing merchants, the more particular should one be in having his weekly or daily announcement displayed in the most conspicuous position obtainable.

Granted that a good position has been secured there remains another consideration—the "set-up" or "display." Some well placed advertisements lose much of their force by poor type arrangement. Some times this is attributable to the man at the "case,"—the compositor. Printers can make or mar an advertisement by their work on it, but printers will work out the advertiser's ideas if the writer of the advertisements will take some pains to indicate on his "copy" how he wants his advertisement set up. It is asking too much of the compositor to have him interpret the advertiser's purpose, to catch his thought, and to reproduce the same as faithfully as possible in type display. The compositor requires all the assistance it is possible to give him, if he is to do good work.

To this end it will pay the advertising writer to "lay out" his copy on paper the size of which approximates the size of space engaged in the newspaper, and to indicate by pen and ink or pencil just what he wishes in the matter of display. The man who sets up this copy in the printing office will soon learn the advertiser's ideas as to set-up and will take genuine pleasure in working them out.

As to the matter of uniform style in the appearance of one's advertising, I am not disposed to be very positive. There is an advantage in a certain uniformity of type display and arrangement—a style that the reading public is quick to recognize, and which if good will be read with ease and pleasure. On the other hand, variations in style, if not too pronounced or too frequent, may be wise. Generally, the uniform style will be found best. The printed firm name, if always in the same type and size, becomes the equivalent of the firm's signature, and is recognized and accepted as such. There is something staunch and trustworthy in an unvarying type-signature, something too good to forfeit by fickleness or carelessness in this regard.

It will be found a very profitable exercise to study the advertising styles of the big dailies and of the magazines. This advertising is written almost invariably by specialists, men who have studied and learned the art of effective display. Of course different writers have different ideas on the subject of display and set-up, but even so it will be seen that there is produced strong, powerful, attractive advertising. The study of metropolitan advertising is profitable in other directions. Example is better than precept. The man who writes the best advertising is the man who practices the art most and who studies hardest. The school that makes for progress is the school of "try, t , again."

Notes.

S. Co.—Your advertisement is neatly displayed, and the size of it is good. It is a space you can easily make interesting and profitable. In the example submitted you have made poor use of your opportunity. You have jumbled up ten different lines, widely differing from one another, and have failed to impress anything or anybody. Take time to tell your story, and tell one thing at a time. You have 52 opportunities in the year. A man ought to accomplish some good, some lasting good, in 52 weeks, yet a great many waste 52 opportunities by being careless or thoughtless.

Friday, May 20th.

The Special Spring and Export Number of THE CANADIAN GROCER will be issued May 20th—a lusty herald proclaiming the matchless resources of the premier food producing country of the Empire.

The number will be a credit to Canada, and will constitute an accurate and trustworthy index of the export traders of the Dominion.

In addition to our regular circulation, covering thoroughly the entire grocery and provision trade of Canada, there will be a very large excess circulation of this special number abroad. Some thousands of copies will be mailed to selected British and foreign dealers in Canadian food stuffs—in Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia. Every effort will be made by the publishers of THE CANADIAN GROCER to make this number a powerful agent in the development of export trade.

What all this means to the Canadian merchants who are seeking to develop an export trade is apparent.

* * * *

The good name THE GROCER already enjoys; the excellence of its special numbers; its pronounced influence;—everything combines to make this occasion of unusual value to advertisers.

Mr. Business Man, if you are not already an advertiser in THE GROCER, do you not recognise the advantage of engaging space in this Special Number?

Mr. Regular Advertiser, are you content to appear before the world in your ordinary space? This is the growing time. Double your space. Take the aggressive. Hit hard.

Engage space early. Better service, better position, can be given to the early applicants for space. Send order to our nearest office.

A FLOATING EXHIBIT.

DURING the month of June, 1904, the old Beaver Line steamer Lake Megantic will visit Montreal in the guise of a huge commercial traveller. The idea is a gigantic advertising scheme, promoting the British Isles as the factory of the world.

Her tour will include all the countries where British interests are situated. After her first exhibition in London, she will on April 27, say farewell and begin her voyage. The first place of call will be Halifax, from whence she is to proceed to St. John's, Nfld., and then visit Quebec and Montreal and probably some other Canadian ports.

From Canada she will sail through the West Indian Islands on to South Africa. From Durban she will proceed to Bombay, via Mauritius, and thence to Colombo, Madras, Calcutta, and Rangoon. Passing Penang, the huge commercial traveller will steam through the Straits of Malacca, touching at Singapore; on to Hong Kong, Shanghai, Nagasaki, and Yokohama. After letting the Japs feast their delighted eyes on some Whitehead torpedoes and Armstrong guns, the Lake Megantic will make a long run south through the Pacific, and will not touch land till she arrives in Brisbane. After visiting Sidney, Melbourne, Hobart and Wellington she will strike across to South America, and, rounding Cape Horn, call at Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, Rio Janeiro. Crossing to West Africa, Sierra Leone will be visited, after which she will return to her starting point.

Viewed as an ordinary business venture, the objects of the exhibition are four in number, and may be given as follows:

(1) The promotion of inter-Imperial commerce.

(2) The personal introduction of the seller to the buyer.

(3) To provide a means by which British manufacturers can fully investigate the peculiar conditions and requirements of individual markets.

(4) The advertisement of British industries by bringing to foreign and colonial ports a representative exhibition of British manufactured articles.

This means that British manufacturers are coming out not only to show their own goods, but to look at Canadian manufactures, to hear this country's opinión of their goods and to study the requirements of the Canadian and other markets.

One hundred and fifty trades and industries will be represented by samples in this immense floating show case. Between decks the Lake Megantic will be cleared of all cabins and store-rooms, and here will be the main exhibits, stretching practically the whole length of the vessel. The after-saloon of the main deck and part of the lower deck will also be utilized, the latter for the heavier exhibits. There will be more than two hundred trade representatives on board the Megantic, and each exhibitor is to have a fixed amount of space.

Advance agents will precede the Lake Megantic, and make arrangements for her reception, a promient citizen at each port will be asked to formally open the exhibition.

TRINIDAD EXHIBIT.

Word has reached Montreal that Mr. Edgar Tripp, commercial agent for Canada in Trinidad has communicated with the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, saying that an exhibit of the produce of the colony of Trinidad is on its way to Montreal and will be placed in the Board of Trade Building. The products are being selected so that the exhibit will be permanent. He states further, that the opening of several more Venezuelan ports has increased the sale of Canadian goods there.

REFRIGERATORS IN ENGLAND.

REFRIGERATORS of German and American manufacture seem to be, the only ones sold in Manchester, Eng. A certain firm who handle the German make only, say they would prefer to sell a Canadian one, but for the fact that its construction in the matter of the ice department, is not as acceptable to their customers as that of the German made article. The American refrigerator is exactly constructed on the lines of the Canadian, but seems to be a more expensive adjunct to housekeeping than the latter.

There is no reason why the Canadian refrigerator cannot compete in price and finish with either of these mentioned, and the Canadian manufacturer, if he desires to obtain some share of the English market. The trade is in its infancy, many householders still retaining the effete ice chest, but it is growing, and will doubtless assume large proportions in due time.

INCREASED SUGAR CROP.

Consul Max J. Baehr, at Cienfuegos, Cuba, reports that the United States reciprocity law is already greatly stimulating the production of sugar in that part of the island. The leading mills will this year produce 1,537,000 bags, which exceeds the product of any previous year. Planters will next year cultivate a great deal of land that has remained untilled for many years past, and will break up and put under cultivation many thousand acres never before cultivated. All of which indicates that sugar may some day be much cheaper than now.

TAPIOCA AT WAR PRICES.

THE price of tapioca has risen, and may rise still higher as the supply gets smaller than the demand. This is not saying that tapioca is an expensive luxury; far from it. Even now with the advanced price, the wholesale people are only paying 2¾c per pound. This, however, is a rise of 20 per cent. in the past few months. It used to be 2c per pound in New York, so the advance is considerable.

A prominent wholesale grocer when spoken to this morning doubted whether the war had anything to do with the rise, as it took place before the war commenced. It is a fact, however, that large quantities are being shipped for the use of the armies in the East. The armies of Russia and Japan are paying 3c a pound for tapioca, at the present time. It is to them a staple food like rice, and not a mere extra, suitable for simple puddings. There are more armies in the field than usual, and that accounts, it is said, for the supply becoming small, and the price rising. At present there does not appear to be much danger of its giving out.

There is but one market, and that is Singapore, for practically all the cassava, or tapioca in the world is raised in the Straits Settlements. Brazil does raise some, but it is an inferior grade, yellow in color, and not saleable to the people of this country, who are used to the white pearl varieties.

In a recent issue of The Grocer was an item to the effect that F. W. Dunn & Co., of Red Deer, Alta, had sold out to W. J. Robertson. Dunn & Co. write that the stock was not sold to W. J. Robertson, but that it was seized for Knox, Morgan & Co. by A. Munro and W. J. Robertson.

RECIPROCITY AND THE NEW ENGLAND STATES.

CONDITIONS at present existing in the New England States and which are particularly marked in Boston and the surrounding district, are of no little interest to Canadians at a time when the preferential campaign is being exploited at home and in Great Britain.

The one-time prosperity of Boston has been seriously impared by the removal of many manufacturing industries and a large number of people into the New York districts, and Bostonians are now awakening to the fact that some measures will have to be taken in order to attract commerce to that city and district. In view of this a strong sentiment has sprung up in favor of the removal of the tariff wall. By such means, it is thought, that much of the export trade of Canada may be transferred to that port, which is much nearer and easier of access than either Halifax or St. John.

Another factor largely responsible for the strong feeling in favor of free trade between Canada and the United States, is the great difficulty experienced in provisioning the city and districts of Boston, owing to the poor condition of the agricultural lands, many of the farmers having deserted on account of their inability to produce satisfactory crops. Should an understanding become possible with Canada in regard to reciprocity, a ready market would be available for Canadian produce. This would remove the difficulty of provisioning Boston districts, and place the population on a wage-living basis.

In the event of the preferential tariff becoming an established fact between Great Britain and her colonies, many New England manufacturers are discussing the advisability of establishing branch factories for their industries on Canadian soil, which would at once give them all the benefits of free trade with Great Britain. It would appear that Canada stands to win whichever policy is adopted.

"THE KNOCKER."

THE Billingsgate sound of the now well-known expression of "The Knocker" leads us to reflect upon the meaning of the phrase and its import to business men, and particularly to the individual whose actions and words earn him this unenviable title. A "knocker" concisely put, is a disgruntled individual generally an employe of a house who for reasons sufficient to the employer, has been permitted to seek another situation, and who, engaging with some other concern, busies himself in running down or caluminating his previous employers. Back-biting, or "knocking" is a dangerous game outside of any legal liability the "knocker" may assume; it is a "boomerang" which, when it rebounds inflicts more damage to the thrower, than to his victim. It is a Nemesis bound to bring sorrow in its wake, and its employment has been the cause of ruining the business prospects of many a bright young man.

Instances are numerous in the life of every concern where the "knocker" has tried to depreciate the commercial standing of his former employers, by either directly slurring the whole firm, or casting reflections upon the character of its individual members; by giving away to the customers of the old house "inside" information of supposed value, or by depreciating certain acknowledged virtues of the goods of the house. The "knocker" is very prolific in ways and means of making his tactics felt; in many instances a truly Machivelian spirit and finesse is shown. Iago's consummate and artistic deviltry is clumsy malignity in comparison with the work of the modern "knocker"; the work of Shakespeare's creature against the proud Moor bears the palliating excuse of jealousy, but the "knocker" of to-day has as a rule only a coarse vindictiveness as apology.

The expression that "Chickens will come home to roost" is as true as gospel, and distinctly applicable to the "knocker" and his words and deeds, and often the remorse comes too late after the young man has changed his employment half a dozen times. Reputation travels by wireless telegraphy, and though the applicant for a position may not be told so, his would-be-employer has heard of the propensity to "run down" each house after severing connection therewith, and naturally has no fact that he had been too prone to the same with him.

The "knocker" is impolitic as well as foolish, the "wheels of time turn round," and he can never know when the favor of his old employer will be required, and be serviceable in furthering some desirable business scheme. Cases have occurred where a dismissed employe could have re-engaged with his old house, probably been received on favorable terms, had it not been for the fact that he had been too prone to "knock" the house in every way.

We have in mind a recent occurrence where a young man who had held a good situation in one of Canada's leading commercial houses, was for reasons of inebriety allowed to sever his connection with the firm. Valuable though he was in every way, his employers felt that in the interest of their trade and their commercial reputation, they would be unwise to allow him to continue as a member of their travelling staff. The young man secured a position with a rival house, and influenced no doubt by family pressure stopped indulging in strong drink and attended to his duties with his new employers. One great fault, however, he acquired in place of his old drinking habits, was that he lost no opportunity of maligning his old employers persistently and vindictively. Calling as he naturally did on his old customers, and pursuing his unwise vituperation, he was met with the question : "How is it that your old firm is everything that is bad now, and unworthy of our trade, when for the past six years you couldn't say anything but what was good of them? No, we don't think we'll change our account old man. There must be something wrong about this."

In a sense, this was the question he had to answer all over his ground. After a few years a vacancy occured in his old house's staff and things not being as bright with him as they might have been, he made application for the position. It was duly received, and would have been favorably considered had the firm not felt themselves too highly outraged and maligned by their old traveller during his stay with their competitor. They consequently wrote him regretting that while they had considered his application in the very best light possible, they felt that his unwise words had weakened their confidence too seriously to admit of their re-engaging him.
